

DELTA'S PROGRESS REFLECTED AT BIG ANNUAL EXHIBITION

FOLKS OF COUNTY INDICATE WIDESPREAD INTEREST IN 1925 FAIR

EXHIBITS, ATTRACTIONS GOOD

The strides made by Delta county in an agricultural and dairying way are reflected in the fine exhibits on display at the annual Northern Michigan Fair being held this week at the Delta county fair grounds at Escanaba.

There were also exhibits of handicraft and entertainment features that attracted attention but it was the agricultural and dairying lines of the county that disclosed the concern of the populace in what the county is doing.

Thursday was Gladstone-Escanaba day and proclamations were issued by the chief executives of both cities to cooperate in making the day a success.

Meat markets and groceries closed for the day while dry goods and other stores closed in the afternoon, giving to their employees an opportunity to attend the county fair.

The house racing program, stunt airplane flying by "Babe" Kalishek, whose home is in Gladstone, and her pilot, Ernest Berg and three free valvule acts, besides all the concessions, kept the record crowd amused throughout the day.

Today, Friday is the last day of the fair and has been designated as Children's Day.

CLOSING OF DEER YARD AND STREAMS RECOMMENDED

Following a request by the Department of Conservation, recommendations were sent in Monday by the local Sportsmen advising the closing of certain streams and one deer yard. A committee was appointed to investigate this matter, their decision being that all the tributaries of the local sportsmen's club should be closed, and one deer yard, covering six sections, in Alger county, just north of Delta County near the Whitefish River.

OCT. 6 IS DATE OF RATE HEARING

G. W. JACKSON AND F. R. BUCHNER TOOK LEAD IN DISCUSSION AT MEET

Gladstone took the lead in the discussion at the Telephone Rate hearing of the Michigan Public Utilities Commission held at Lansing, beginning Sept. 8 Attorney G. W. Jackson and City Manager Buechner were the local spokesmen. They returned the latter part of last week, after the trial had been deferred to October 7.

Gladstone was classed among 25 other towns, many of which are not bringing in a return of 9 per cent on their investment. The company proposed to increase that to 11 per cent, an increase that would net them a return of 17 per cent on their investment. This arrangement would make an increase of more than 3% per cent on the amount of $136 and that intended to be made up largely from the business houses, who are powerless and compelled to patronize the telephone company. There rate would be raised to the amount of $136 and that intended to be made up largely from the business houses, who are powerless and compelled to patronize the telephone company.

The local representatives took their stand against this arbitrary grouping, holding that they should not be expected to pay the burden to make up to the company for the deficits of other localities, far distant, and with no direct connection. The quality and service received they contended should be another deciding factor.

No mention or promises of the automatic bell system were made at the hearing. Mr. Sandquist of Escanaba called on Mr. Buechner shortly before his leaving for Lansing, and stated that Gladstone would receive this new improvement along with the increase in rates, but no formal announcement of this fact was made. Grouping of the towns is necessary so as to provide service for all towns. As in the case of all public utilities, there are certain sections that are not self-supporting, and those that are able to make more than the fixed return on the investment are compelled to make up for this deficit of the smaller localities. However, as Mr. Buechner stated this week, "The groups should be appointed with some consideration of the size of the revenue, and Gladstone not classed with cities where large expenditures have been made for such improvements as underground lines, made in second nature, and trout their ponds. Detroit is clamoring for decreased rates, insisting that they are entitled to a reduction for the large return they net on the companies investment. They wish to stand on their own financial base."

The matter will be decided finally at the hearing on October 6 at Lansing. All the data has been submitted, and the local delegates may not return for the finals unless directed to do so by the Public Utilities Commission.

CAN YOU BEAT 6 1/2 LB. TROUT?

The "golden catpailin" sure belongs to W. L. Marble who has come to the front of the audience with a brook trout weighing 6 1/2 lbs. The trout picture the beauty of it is hanging in the office of the Marble Arms Mfg. Co. and sure succeeded in getting the roat of those guys who think that fishing is their second nature, and trout their pride name.

Mr. Marble landed this winner in the Niipegon river, on July 8, 1922. He was out there that Dr. Miller pulled in its mate, weighing 5 1/4 pounds. Although such fish are rare in these parts, we sure have to look to the north for them. The hero of the day, and the man who put to rest the ocean.

"Babe" Kalishek Tells of Her Life and Entry in "Stunt" Game

(By Inquiring Reporter)

"I began my career as a stunt performer at Venice, California, five years ago," Babe Kalishek told me, as we sat together in the Delta Hotel of Escanaba. She spent some time in Hollywood, previous to her entering the stunt game. "My mother moved here from Menominee," she stated.

I was very impressed with the lady and found an entirely different person from whom I had expected. As she sat at the table in her flying habit of white knickers, and white "flannel" shirt, open at the throat, she did not make the picture of the modern flapper with bobbed locks and rouged cheeks, but with her hair in braids wound around her head, and "mink" entirely lacking, she reminded me more of a girl from a western ranch as pictured on the screen and occupying the heroine role in the late novels. She was slight of build, of medium height and light complexion. She has attained the age of 22.

Her flyer, Ernest Berg, who was also present, is heavy set, and with a short moustache looked the aviator part.

Finding a needle in a hay stack is supposed to be a very difficult proposition, but after huffing around trying to secure an interview with "Babe" Kalishek, I am ready to call the former the more feasible. I called at the home of her mother Mrs. Mary Selena on the Gladstone bluff, several times, and finally on Wednesday evening, she was at the Delta Hotel of Escanaba, where I was fortunate enough to find her.

"What emotions do you feel as you are up above a large audience performing?" queried. "All of them, but fear," she answered, with an upward glance as though visualizing her stunts. "I never yet have had a moment of fear or lack of confidence," she continued. "To succeed in this line is to get everything to me," she said with feeling. "Enjoyable? I'll say it's enjoyable. I experienced a queer sensation on coming down from such heights at first, but that all leaves with time."

"Miss Kalishek and myself are going to start out on our own hook," Mr. Berg put in. "We've been together for the past three years doing stunt flying for circuses and, but we're going out now on our own hook."

Mr. Berg's home is in Sweden. He is considered an expert aviator having had six years experience in his line. "Swedish Ace," and the "Flying Swede" are my nicknames," he added. "Well, I sure feel right at home in Gladstone. A couple of weeks ago when Miss Kalishek and I were coming here we broke a wheel, and had to go to Gladstone for its repair. The first thing I saw as I walked along the streets was the "sons" and "daughters" on the signs in front of the stores. Yah, I was born in Sweden, that's my home town."

"Have you a nick name, Miss Kalishek?" I asked. "Well, she concluded after a moments thought, "don't believe I have, unless they call me something when I'm not around. The Star Goggles is a fake name they've given me and "Babe" is the name I took when entering the movies."

In answer to my query as to the height they have reached in the air, they both replied, "5,000 feet. Our stunts are seven, five and six hundred feet," Mr. Berg added.

My next question was if she had ever met with an accident while flying to cause a lack of nerve. She related a story of having been slightly injured a short time ago at Barboo, Wisconsin in making a parachute drop. "We struck a pocket of air," Mr. Berg explained. He escaped without a scratch and Miss Kalishek received minor bruises.

"They have given 200 exhibitions so far, and consider themselves just started." Their plans for the evening were to attend the Delta theater of Escanaba.

ELECTED PRESIDENT GAME ASSOCIATION

Floyd Marble was notified Monday of his election to the presidency of the Michigan Congress of Game Associations, to succeed Clarence Randall, who has resigned to accept a position as assistant to the Vice President of the Inland Steel Company of Chicago. Mr. Randall presided at the meeting of the Sportsmen and Game Walton Clubs held here in June, and made many warm friends, who were glad to hear of his promotion and success.

Mr. Marble has been very active in the Sportsmen's club, taking the lead on many issues, and setting an example of a live wire member, ever working in the interests of the club and undoubtedly will be able to handle his new position to great advantage. No definite plans have as yet been mapped out, but in general, Mr. Marble will continue the policies of his. The next meeting of the association will be held on Friday, the place yet to be decided. Election of officers will be held.

Mr. Randall, who also served as a director of the associations, will discontinue in that capacity.

CAR SMASHES WINDOW DRIVER LOSES CONTROL

The front window of "The Midway" the Frank Louis Soff Drink Parlor on Delta avenue was completely smashed Saturday afternoon when Miss Phoebe Gogarn lost control of the family car, and plunged into the glass front. Miss Gogarn had driven around the public streets and was about to park there, but lost control of the brakes, and ran up on the curbing crashing into the window.

Miss Gogarn was uninjured. The damage of the window amounted to about $200.

ROTARIANS WILL TELL LIFE HISTORIES

A new feature was commenced at the noonday luncheon of the Rotary club at the meeting Monday, with President R. J. Riley relating the story of his life. Each member will contribute to the program in the future in similar manner. E. J. Noreus read a very fine paper "The Golden Rule" and its application to life, taken from a recent issue of Rotary magazine. It was very much enjoyed by the audience.

MILDRED MINEAU IS LAID TO REST

FIFTEEN YEAR OLD GIRL DIES AFTER FEW HOURS ILL FOR LIFE

Funeral services for Mildred May Mineau, who died suddenly Friday evening, were held from the All Saints church Sunday morning at 10 o'clock. Rev. Sebastian Maier officiated.

The members of the Freshman class classmates of the deceased, attended in a body Friday morning at the home of the graduates of the Eighth Grade of the All Saints Parochial school last year with Miss Mineau, were honorary pallbearers, all garbed in the graduating costume of white midday and skirts with black bands about their heads. They are, Mildred Damas, Veneta Meyers, Juanita Kircher, Dora LaPorte, Erma Chase and Dorothy Murphy. The active pallbearers were James Boyle, Earl Baiche, Ralph Weartner, Raymond Kegel, Alton Kircher and Bernard DeHooghe.

A fine tribute to the wonderful character and pleasing personality of the young woman was given by Father Maier. She was ever obedient, and ready to help all by any little act of service that she might perform. Her associates will long remember her, and miss her companionship in their ranks.

The floral embanked casket, and beautiful flower tributes that adorned the room, while the remains lay in state Saturday and Sunday are an evidence of the high esteem and respect in which everyone held her. Many sorrowing friends, attended the funeral, and were present as the last rites were being said at Fernwood cemetery.

During the Requiem High Mass the All Saints Choir sang Veni Jesu at the offertory, and "Lead Kindly Light," the funeral procession moved slowly out of the church.

FRIGIDAIRE INSTALLED AT FRUIT STORE

The old-fashioned system of ice box cooling has been replaced at the Gladstone Fruit Store by a more modern method, known as Frigidaire. It contains eight compartments (or ice cream, each surrounded by a brine, kept cold by an electric motor. Thirty gallons of brine are used and will last for thirty days.

A similar system is in use at the Micks Grocery, consisting on the principal of an electric pump, and is placed in the cooler refrigerator. It was installed about three months ago.

OF COURSE

America Wants to Properly Care for Her War Orphans

That is the wording on a poster put out telling of the purposes of the American Legion Endowment Fund. The poster has an illustration of a young lad, shabbily attired addressing his Uncle Sam:

"You took my daddy, do you want me too?" To which U. S. replies, as he drops his contribution to the endowment fund, "You bet I do."

That is the spirit that the committee of local Legionnaires hope to find when they go out to secure Gladstone's quota of $300 this week end. The public should remember that the solicitors are not asking anything for themselves, but rather to help those made needy through service to humankind.

They have helped others; will others, in turn help them?

STEPHENSON HAS STRONG TEAM TO OPEN '25 SEASON

GRID IRON WARRIORS PITTED AGAINST GLADSTONE IN BOOSTER GAME

HARD TUSSEL IS EXPECTED

The 1925 Football season will open tomorrow afternoon when the local "11" come face to face with the Stephenson warriors, a last aggregation who have just about all their year men back on the opposing team, the advantages of the opposing team, Coach Kiel's men expect to come out at the long end of the score. Under direction, they have been training every night after school, since August 21, and have been whipped into shape to meet Stephenson. Last year's men who are back in the game are, Captain Harry Haglund, Earl Peterson, Neil Reese, Raymond Kegel and Elmer Peterson.

A fine stock of subs to depend on will be ready for emergencies. Stephenson began the season of '24 by defeating Menominee in an unbalanced score.

Tomorrow's game has been made a Booster event to help in the payment of equipment which it was necessary to purchase this year. New suits and other articles needed have been secured and the management is depending on this game to put the Athletic Association on a self supporting basis. Tickets have been on sale all week and can be procured from any of the football men, who are in charge of the sale.

Gladstone has only three home games this year, tomorrow, Munising, and with St. Joseph's of Escanaba on Armistice Day.

The lineup as yet is not definite. Ends, Earl Peterson, and Irving Filmore; Guards, Capt. Haglund, and Swan; Center James Boyle or Howard Krueger; Tackles, Cleve Moore and Harry Blomquist; Quarter back, Bob Noreus or Joe Reese; Half Back Ray Kegel, or Neil Reese, Full Back, Elmer Peterson.

Back the boys, by being present at the opening of the season "We don't expect an easy game." Coach Kiel stated yesterday, "but we're out to start the season with a victory."

FORMER SOLDIERS LEAD FUND DRIVE

LEGIONAIRES SUBSCRIBE FIRST AND THEN ASK OTHERS HELP FILL QUOTA

A committee from the August Matinee Post will be out today and tomorrow to complete Gladstone's quota of $300 for the American Legion Endowment fund of $5,000,000 the income of which will be used for disabled former service men and women and the orphans of veterans. The officers of the local post met Monday night to prepare for the drive, and they started it themselves by subscribing. Four of them subscribed $25 each, and they then planned to call on other Legionnaires before going to other citizens of Gladstone with a request for help.

Most of the other towns in the upper peninsula have already filled their quotas for the Endowment fund. The Michigan committee is in charge of former Congressman Joseph Fordney of Saginaw, and other noted men throughout the state have thrown their influence towards making the drive a success.

The Government has endeavored to do all it could for the victims of the world war; but the task is such a difficult one that some very worthy cases have been neglected. It is these cases that come to the attention of the Legion Posts, and it is to provide funds with which to provide relief that the Endowment was decided upon.

FLAMES DESTROY FARMER'S RESIDENCE

The farm home of Charles Paraph was destroyed by fire Wednesday forenoon. The structure was built of logs, and having been of long standing, it was a very mark for fire.

The cause of the blaze is attributed to defective chimneys. The local Fire Department rushed to the scene but reached there too late to be of much assistance.

Next Sunday the Colts will play the Wilson team on the local grounds and as they each have a scalp dangling at their belts the game will be well worth while to see.

Memories--Rapid River

(Rapid River locals, Sept. 9, 1926) Sol Jerome will have his saloon again finished by the hand of Fred Brackett next week, and will throw it open Saturday for a celebration.

Rapid River lost the second game of the set to Gladstone last Sunday, 3-5. White pitched a good game for the locals, striking out 11 and executing a double play, but the support he had was almost a minus quantity.

James McPherson and T. B. Hoyt went to the lake Tuesday on business. Rev. and Mrs. Allison spent last week in Manalona, Mich.

(Rapid River locals Sept. 16, 1926) Messrs. Tropic, Dillabough, Beckman and Adams went sailing Sunday. During the height of the tempest, a discussion arose as to whether the adjutant took precedence of the ensign of marines, and as each talked a different brand of sea dialect, the good ship had to take care of herself for a while.

The Fire Department had a run Tuesday to extinguish a little blaze. Hon. Fred Brackett while investigating the Masonville murder mystery failed to take care of his cigarettes, and the gallant detective narrowly escaped a roasting.

The School Calendar

September 1 to 14 The High School students have returned long strong for another ten months sojourn over the rugged road to Learning, and yes, the majority look as though they were really glad to get back and see every one there on the faculty.

Of course a prodigious few have that despairing "Ate Caesar, mortuus est salutaris" expression on their faces, but they are few and far between. Anyway we've all come back with a firm resolution to pull together side by side and come out on top next spring with a higher batting average collectively and individually than Simon Olson received last Sunday.

Now, members of the school board, parents and friends out there that a nice attitude to develop? It may drop a little under cold and frost but it will grow fast when the sun shines and listen—speaking confidentially—if we get our gins by January we'll improve our attitude still more. How's that for a business proposition?

Speaking of attitudes I wonder if the parents really know what their children honestly and truly think of school as it is, rather than a good idea to have a few little talks from the students themselves in which they would give their unbiased views of school life.

Now I really hope that all the High School students will strive to make this school news corner something really interesting and worthwhile. I am sure the parents enjoy these little glimpses of school life and I wish to assure everyone that any contributions will be sincerely welcomed.

respectively with interest, as a tax in the general tax roll next thereafter, to be made, in a column for special assessments to be entered and collected with the other taxes in the annual tax roll in the same manner.
Resolution carried unanimously.
Commissioner Peterson, offered the following resolution, and moved its adoption which was supported by Commissioner Matson.
Resolved, That it is deemed necessary and desirable as a public improvement that new side walks be constructed in Wisconsin avenue across lots 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11 and 12, Block 74 of the First Addition to the Village (now city) of Gladstone, Michigan.
Be it further resolved that the City Manager be instructed to give due notice of the passage of this resolution to the respective owner or owners of said above mentioned lots to construct concrete walks in accordance with the provisions of the Ordinance or Ordinances relating to the construction of side walks, within two weeks after such notice shall have been given, according to the provisions of the Ordinance relating thereto, and that in default of said respective owner or owners constructing such respective side walks, in front of said respective lots that such respective side walk will be constructed by the City of Gladstone and the cost thereof will be charged to the said respective lot and to its respective owner or owners by special assessment.

Resolution carried unanimously.
By Commissioner Murphy, supported by Commissioner Hawkins, that the Commission adjourn.
Resolution carried unanimously.
F. R. BUECHNER,
City Clerk.

ONLY A SMALL COUNTY
If you travel about a hundred miles north of Milwaukee, you come to Keweenaw county, one of the smallest counties in Wisconsin. It is not quite ten townships in area. Its municipalities consist of two cities, of less than 2,500 population each, and two villages. The entire population of the county at the last census was 16,921.

Yet this small county, as the last bank call shows, has deposits of $7,406,000 in its eight banks. This means $460 for every man, woman and child.
Something in the social constitution of the people and in the economic conditions under which they live may help to explain this pronounced prosperity. The people are chiefly of German, Bohemian, Belgian and Polish blood. Most of them are descendants in the third and fourth generations of the pioneer settlers. They own their farms. There is hardly any tenancy.
Most of the farmers concentrate on dairying. Unlike the producers of grains, they do not sell in a world market. The market for their perishable product, indeed, is not even national. It is regional. Consequently dairy farmers usually miss some of the ups and downs encountered by farmers whose livelihood is affected by world conditions.
Meeting the year-round demands of the customers, the dairy farmers of Keweenaw county work steadily. The land they tread was owned by their grandfathers and their great grandfathers, whose industrious habits they have inherited. Milk and butter flow from Keweenaw county in a steady stream; and this small county, of less than ten townships and of only sixteen thousand souls, as more than $7,400,000 deposited in the banks.—Chicago Journal of Commerce.

MARQUETTE has a group of office holders wondering what is going to happen to them under the new order for prohibition enforcement. It happens that a branch office has been maintained at Marquette. When General Andrews announced his plan of enforcing the Volstead law it appeared quite certain that offices such as the one north of here would be done away with. And the office holders were probably prepared for the worst, losing their jobs. But last week word came from E. L. Portier, federal prohibition administrator for Michigan and Ohio, that an office would be continued at Marquette. That being assured, it only remains for the office holders and the public to be informed whether any changes are to be made in the personnel. Naturally the public is not nearly as interested as the office holders, who get the money which the people must pay, as such offices as the one at Marquette has been little different than the scores of others scattered throughout the country. It has not succeeded in making the Volstead law anything other than a joke. What the public concerned will now is whether the Government will succeed in enforcing the law, or failing to do that, what steps will be taken to make it the kind of law that the majority of the citizens will respect.

THE 150th anniversary of the Declaration of Independence will be celebrated by an Exposition to open in Philadelphia on June 1, 1926, and continuing through to December 1, 1926. It is promised that this Exposition will surpass in many respects any exposition ever held in this country. It has been called the Sesqui-centennial International Exposition. Governor Greenback has already accepted to officially represent Michigan as a member of the Council of Governors. The estimate places the attendance at not less than 50,000,000. So much of America's history for independence centers in and around Philadelphia, that it is not surprising that the American people should want to visit there during the Exposition opening next June.

ATTORNEY AND COMMERCE, an article which comes to our attention contains some timely advice to those who drive cars. The substance of the article is that there is only one remedy—"to get courteous, courteous may not be a square deal, but it is around." A paragraph on the courtesy of the horn is well worth reprinting.

A special chapter might be written on the courtesy of the horn. The horn is a safety signal—not a medium for the expression of impatience when traffic is delayed by a stalled motor or a few cars ahead. The horn is not a door-bell to summon friends whom one is picking up to go out to dinner or for a drive. In every block there are sensitive, nervous and sick people who have a right to more consideration than is shown by repeated full-strength prolonged sounding of the horn. The merit of the modern automobile horn is its carrying power and distinct tone. A very gentle touch on the horn button will warn pedestrians quite as effectively as a blast that paralyzes them with fright. Pedestrians have rights too, the right to cross at the intersections without waiting five or ten minutes, the right to be warned courteously, if warning is needed at all.

THE last session of the Legislature shortened the prairie hunting season to six days, October 25 to 31, but sportsmen in several upper peninsula counties, from Dickinson, Marquette Houghton and Keweenaw are endeavoring to have the season closed entirely. Those in favor of the closed season contend that drastic and immediate action is imperative. If the prairie is to be saved from extinction. At a recent meeting of the Gladstone Sportsmen's association the question of a closed season came up and the opinion of those acquainted with the present conditions was not so pessimistic. It was freely admitted that last year had been a very unfavorable season for the birds. This year weather conditions had been more favorable during the mating season and the young birds should be more numerous. With the season of shorter duration, the slaughter should be so materially lessened as not to endanger the prairie's existence. It is a fine sentiment however, that causes the sportsmen to agitate for a closed season and it may be that next year or later, it will be found advisable to give the birds a vacation. The preservation of the prairie is too important a matter to be entirely overlooked.

THE higher proposed telephone rate for Gladstone would mean that the phone users would pay $4,000 more than they are already paying annually to the company for local service. Whether or not the raise is granted, Gladstone was fortunate in having two capable men to represent the city at the rate hearing before the Michigan Public Utilities commission at Lansing last week. A comprehensive statement prepared by City Attorney Glenn W. Jackson and City Manager F. R. Buechner discloses the injustice of the grouping plan which is now proposed. Under this plan Gladstone is placed with Negawadon and Lebeauville. What is termed Group 8, along with several lower Michigan cities, several of which are operating at a loss to the company. Gladstone has paid the company a return of nine per cent on its local investment, while the other two Cleveland cities show a smaller profit.

THE proposed raise for the entire group is placed on the same basis, that Gladstone would be expected to pay more than a fair return in order to make up a deficit in some of the other cities in the group. Attorney Jackson contended at the hearing that this was unfair and that each exchange should be considered on its own merits. The only exception he made would be for the really small exchanges, such as Rapid River and other nearby villages, where it would not be practical to increase the rates to a point where a profit would accrue to the company. He believes that the larger exchanges could well afford to pay a rate sufficiently high to cover the deficit of the smaller ones. This Commission represents the people, and its duty also is to see that the telephone company secures a fair earning on its investment. With these two objects in mind, there seems no reason why the rates should not be established on a basis fair to all concerned.

DETROIT is asking the Commission to lower the phone rates in that city. The company asks that they be increased. The raise granted for other cities is largely dependent on what is finally decided upon for Michigan's metropolitan. The rates there are already much higher than the basis in the smaller cities. A telephone in a large urban center is of more value than it is in the smaller community. As a matter of fact a telephone is a practical necessity in Detroit where it is a convenience easily done away with in the average residence in Gladstone. The general impression prevails here that if the new rates are granted, an improved exchange system will be installed here. The improvement would be welcomed and the people are not antagonistic towards the company, but we believe we speak for the majority when we state that even the new system would not justify the increase already under discussion. This is especially true when the figures prepared by our local officials disclose that the company is already earning nine per cent on its investment here.

THE Woin has Toiled, says an exchange. Years ago the Westerners use to sell Michigan their brooms, now we sell them our Ford's.

PATRICK H. Kelly is no more and his death marks the passing of another Congressman who has served Michigan. Kelly will be remembered mostly as candidate for U. S. Senate in the 1922 contest in which Charles H. Townsend was nominated. Senator Townsend was defeated for re-election by Woodbridge N. Ferris Democrat, who is now serving out the six-year term. Townsend died suddenly less than a year ago. Kelly, like Townsend although defeated, had a faithful and devoted group of followers, who mourn his untimely passing.

WASHINGTON INSIDE THE COAL SITUATION promises to be one of the big questions before congress this winter, the strike in the anthracite fields having raised a number of problems which probably will call for Congressional action. John Hayes Hammond, former Chairman of the Federal Coal Commission which conducted an investigation of the soft and hard coal industry, and urged that arrangements be made for permanent federal regulation, is again urging that serious consideration be given to these recommendations. In the meantime, the Federal Government, taking its cue from President Coolidge, has adopted a hands off policy and is sitting back to see what happens between the warring miners and operators in Pennsylvania. Luckily there is enough hard coal above ground to care for present needs and the government is prepared, should emergency arise, to help the public get substitutes for anthracite, in some quarters the belief prevails that the anthracite miners and operators are merely cutting their own throats and that the result of the strike will be that the public will learn how to get along very well without hard coal.

THE NAVY DEPARTMENT has determined that there will be no set back in the development of aviation despite the fatal crash of the dirigible Shenandoah and the disastrous attempt to fly from San Francisco to Hawaii. Hard luck always hits the Navy in big battles. Let there be one serious disaster and another is always sure to follow on its heels. This has been true many times in the past in the case of naval vessels at sea, but the Shenandoah wreck was probably the most spectacular disaster that has hit the Navy in recent years as the big airship was about the best known vehicle in the country and had been seen and admired by hundreds of thousands of persons from the Atlantic to the Pacific. The attitude of aviation officials, however, is that the officers and men killed on the Shenandoah and in other aerial crashes were victims in the case of science and that the work must go on until a plane has finally conquered the air and rendered it absolutely safe. One of the tragic things in this connection was that the Shenandoah was regarded as the safest craft the had ever been sent into the air. Its collapse means that greater efficiency will now be necessary.

THE BELIEF is growing that the biggest war debt now due the United States—the two billion dollars owed by France—will be adjusted and arrangements made for payment before the end of September. Members of the American Debt Commission feel that Finance Minister Callaux of France and his cabinet members are coming to Washington within the next two weeks as anxious to settle the debt as anyone in this country. No reasonable offer will be turned down by the American government as the adjustment of this big war obligation at the earliest possible date is regarded as essential to the economic betterment of both the United States and of France. American holders of Liberty Bonds and other war time securities will be protected, however, as this is one of the things that Congress has insisted upon.

CONGRESSIONAL LEADERS have been advised that President Coolidge wants tax revision placed at the head of legislative business in December. A definite tax reform plan will be prepared and submitted to Congress by Secretary Mellon, but many conflicting views of the complex problem of federal revenue and taxation are expected to be forthcoming before a new revenue bill is finally drafted and passed by the way an enactment. One of the important collateral issues of this bill of public policy for income tax payments especially in view of the great chorus of objections that have come up throughout the country since the income tax records were made available for public inspection on September 1. Newspapers almost without exception have condemned the publicly provided, despite its approval by the Supreme Court, and loud demands for prompt repeal were in order, backed up by the Administration.

JOHN W. WEEKS continues as Secretary of War, officially at least, keeping the president and his friends happy by denying that he intends to resign, but the understanding in authoritative quarters in Washington is that he will quit.

WAR EXPLOSIVES BEST FOR LAND CLEARING It is essential that upper peninsula farmers by special means on land clearing this fall and next spring, because it is known that the supply of war salvage explosives, available for distribution through county agricultural agents by arrangement with the government, is dwindling and will not last more than two years. It may be exhausted within 18 months. War salvage explosive has been the cheapest material Upper Peninsula farmers have been able to get for clearing their land. From now on it will be a case of "make hay while the sun shines." Since the fall of 1922, when the first 1,900,000 pounds of war department explosives have been used by the upper peninsula, Pyrotol is now being used and the amount distributed to counties in this part of the state from January to July, 1925, aggregated 253,000 pounds, as follows: Ontonagon 20,000; Iron 40,000; Houghton 31,000; Baraga 20,000; Dickinson 20,000; Marquette 20,000; Luce, 13,000; Menominee 21,700; Delta 20,000; Mackinac 7,000.

The allotment for the upper peninsula is 100,000 pounds. Orders are now being placed with county agricultural agents and it is predicted that the demand will exceed the supply.

NOT THE LEAST among the President's worries at the moment is the great aircraft controversy, which promises to precipitate one of the big questions being discussed this winter. The crash of the dirigible SHENANDOAH, followed by Col. William Mitchell's sensational statement virtually charging Secretary of the Navy Willbur with responsibility for the loss of the ship, has touched off an official consultation which will burn for many months. Predictions are already being made in Washington that some official heads here in the development of military aeronautic equipment will be the chief topic of discussion of Governmental circles. Without waiting for the report of the Navy Board which investigated the Shenandoah disaster, Secretary Willbur broke into print personally defending himself from the charges of Mitchell and others. While the President is sizing up the situation and getting ready to take action, the War Department is taking steps to punish Mitchell by court martialing him and running him out of the Army in disgrace. Mitchell says that he welcomes such treatment but that he will keep on hammering away for better and more efficient aircraft control in Washington.

HAVING LEARNED a lesson from the last congress, which refused to heed his recommendations for tax revision, Secretary Mellon has decided not to take the bull by the horns again. Of course, he has a very definite idea of what he and the Treasury want in the way of tax reduction and amendment of the revenue law, but he will wait until Congress invites him to submit his views and will make nothing more than "suggestions" even then. The Democrats have already declared war on the Treasury's plan for paying the entire public debt of twenty-two billion dollars during the next twenty-five years. Their view is that this liquidation, one of the great financial operations in history, should be spread over a period of fifty or a hundred years so that future generations would bear part of the burden instead of those who are now living.

THE GOVERNMENT has decided definitely to make no move toward settlement of the anthracite strike until a request for intervention comes from one side or the other, or the country is faced with serious suffering because of a coal shortage. The feeling here is that the government will find ways and means to adjust its own difficulties to avoid federal interference, but the President is in no mood to trifle with the leaders of either the operators or miners and is preparing to ask Congress to enact legislation which will prevent similar strikes in the future. This probably will mean strict Government supervision of the entire industry.

BUSINESS HAS picked up with a roar around the Government departments with the return of the President, back in the Capital after his long vacation in Massachusetts. Mr. Coolidge came back with a mountain program of work awaiting his attention, but he has plunged into it with vigor. Most of the Cabinet members who have been away most of the summer have returned, too, to be on hand for now in for which they may be called upon.

WAR EXPLOSIVES BEST FOR LAND CLEARING

It is essential that upper peninsula farmers by special means on land clearing this fall and next spring, because it is known that the supply of war salvage explosives, available for distribution through county agricultural agents by arrangement with the government, is dwindling and will not last more than two years. It may be exhausted within 18 months. War salvage explosive has been the cheapest material Upper Peninsula farmers have been able to get for clearing their land. The allotment for the upper peninsula is 100,000 pounds. Orders are now being placed with county agricultural agents and it is predicted that the demand will exceed the supply.

PATTEN PITCHES A PERFECT GAME

NO HIT, NO-RUN, NO MAN REACH FIRST, IS RECORD SET AGAINST ESCANABA

Lefty Patten has pitched several good games for the Gladstone team during the baseball season just closed, but the one he hurled against the Escanaba aggregation there Sunday set a new record for Delta county, and for that matter the upper peninsula. There have been other no-hit, no-run games pitched in this section, but no far as this writer can learn, there never was one that was perfect in every detail. In this game there was not a single Escanaba runner to reach first. And there was a single ball hit the outfield, Patten and White taking 17 of 27 put outs by the strike out route, and the other seven being made by the Gladstone infield which worked perfectly.

If, as some of the 329 fans present supposed, the game was a test as to the relative ability of Patten and Stanby Millard there could be no guessing as the latter appeared in Escanaba uniform and lasted less than four innings. When Millard was relieved by Vassau after two had been retired in the fourth, Gladstone had pounded out nine hits and an equal number of runs. Regardless of whether or not the game was a test, it certainly was a fine illustration of the importance of keeping in playing condition. Patten has always been careful to keep in the pink of condition. The manager has been indifferent to the consequences of irregular rest and meals.

While Patten held Escanaba helpless throughout the nine innings, Gladstone's sluggers pounded out a total of 15 hits which were in two plays were made to count for 12 runs. Kircher was the batting star of the day with a triple, double and single. Patten had a triple and double. Gervais had two doubles, Knapp a double and single, Johnson and Nollen a single while the rest of the players had no less than a hit apiece.

The bombardment of Millard started in the second inning after he managed to squeeze through the first frame. Patten opened the second with a double and was sacrificed to third by Bovin's sacrifice. Johnson scored Patten with a single and went to third when Kircher doubled. Both runners scored on Jensen's double. Jensen was retired when he tried for third and the game ended when Gervais popped out after Knapp walked. That was five hits and four runs for that frame.

The scoring continued in the fourth after a scoreless third. Bovin grounded out but Johnson went to second when Nollen muffed Schram's throw to first. Kircher followed with a long three-bagger to the farthest corner of center field, scoring Johnson and he scored himself when Williams sacrificed. Jensen flied out for the second out but Knapp doubled and scored when Gervais also doubled. White was hit by a pitched ball and Patten followed with a long triple that scored two. Here Millard was relieved by Vassau who finished the inning when Bovin grounded out.

Gladstone added another run off Vassau in the seventh on White's single and Bovin's double and two more in the eighth on a walk to Williams, single by Knapp and double by Gervais.

The nearest Escanaba came to getting a man on base was the last man up in the final frame. McNellis' slow roller towards the box was chased after by White whose throw to Gervais got the runner by a step.

Base Ball Gossip

Merwin Kircher was the batting head in Sunday's game. Kircher has been coming through in the latter part of the season and as soon as his hitting ability is established he will be ready for faster company. His fielding has been above the average from the start. It needed a little polishing and this Kircher has been gathering with experience.

With the season ended, most of the players have returned to their usual lives. Lefty Patten left Sunday night for his home in Glen Flora, Wis. and from there will return to his school; Harry Knapp returned to Milwaukee; Frank Jensen left Monday for his home in Green Bay; Stan Millard expected to leave for his home in Tennessee. The rest of the team members have their homes here, except Eddie Williams who is now working for Clarence Snyder near Oiler.

Ball players on the whole are the most unappreciative lot one is ever called upon to deal with. One local player who has been holding an outfield position through the season was paid at $60 per month. When paid off on nine days after the Labor Day game, he returned with a claim that he had more money coming. When asked to explain, he declared he had been working by the month and should be paid for a whole month even though the team was disbanded with the completion of the schedule the first week of the month. Not satisfied to have shown his ignorance on that score, this same ball player declared in all seriousness that there had been a lot of money taken in that he had his share of and he'd like to know whose been getting it. Consider such an attitude in the light of the fact that the management will be compelled to file down to make up the deficit and you have some idea of a ball player's appreciation, especially who was not worth even nearly what he did get.

Stanby Millard declared after being knocked out of the box in Sunday's game that he believed he had pitched his last game. The writer, to whom the statement was made, retorted that what Millard needed was more nerve and a willingness to take better care of his health. And that is true. Millard has more natural ability, we believe, than any pitcher ever up in these parts. But he hasn't learned how to take care of himself. That he can pitch to make up to his level by the good games he did pitch this year. Just last week Tuesday he went to Rhineland and for that team pitched a 5 to 0 game against Vassau. Millard will probably have made a berth at Rhineland for next year.

The only reason why Escanaba fans don't like Lefty Patten is because he has been such a consistent good pitcher against their team throughout the year. He has been poison to them in more ways than one.

We don't know that we have ever attempted to tell former managers how to run a baseball team, and after a year's experience we are less prepared than ever to do so. It is easy enough to avoid some of the former mistakes, and it is just as easy to make some other kind of mistake. The fellow who tries to manage a ball club is bound to be the "goat."

WITH OUR ADVERTISERS
It was Wednesday, the day for raisin bread. He was worried for he knew that since one thousand men voted on what millions wanted most in a shaving cream there was no longer an excuse for a dingy film on the teeth. Although he knew that it was much better than the average 16-cent sucker he wondered which one of the 57 varieties to buy. As he walked across McCall street he instinctively jumped out of the way of the world's finest automobile before he realized that no metal could touch him. The worried look increased and he told himself that he could use the extra fifty dollars a month and wondered if after all, good oil wasn't cheaper. As he entered the office he caught a glimpse of himself in the hall mirror and was convinced after all that clothes do make the man. But, alas, the indignation part of it was that not even his closest friend would tell him, yet he was certain that if he wore his garters around his neck he would change them often.—The Owl.

when it has been found that little permanent good is accomplished. Time and money are consumed without definite results and sooner or later the patient has to submit to the operation.

One of the methods of treatment was by means of the strychnine solution, that is, solutions which pucker and dry up the tissue. It was found that in some cases this worked for a while, but a good dose of strychnine caused the tonsillar tissue to spring up again. A more modern method of attack upon the tonsil which is large enough to be a menace to health, strutting the breathing passages, or by obstructing the breathing passages, is the use of the X-ray. Up to the present date, throat specialists are not agreed as to the benefits of this treatment.

If the tonsils are enlarged or displaced as is usually the case, the quickest and safest thing to do is to have them taken out by a competent surgeon. Many a child has had to undergo the low grade but constant poisoning of the system, heart troubles, rheumatism with its St. Vitus' Dance or some other disaster through the failure to remove diseased tonsils. Many a child has had the shape of the face spoiled and the contour of the chest changed because obstructions were not cleared away.

Such changes of the breathing apparatus and the formation of the chest which is the lung cavity, are of the most serious nature if allowed to develop without hindrance. Chest constriction reduces the space for the lungs and prevents them from developing. This makes the child susceptible to tuberculosis, as well as to other diseases. It may bring about trouble during childhood or it may be the cause of adult illness.

Do not delay the proper care of the nose and throat.

In a Critical Situation

In a critical situation, when illness is acute, spinal adjustments are more speedily effective than in the chronic conditions more frequently encountered. In many such conditions almost immediate results are secured. Acute illness is generally due to external infection of some sort. Everyone of us is every day exposed to infection of some nature, but only those with low-erend power of resistance succumb to the invasion.

Consequently, spinal adjustments, freeing the nerve lines to deliver vital energy where needed, not only build up resistance, but turn loose the power of Nature itself to combat the invader—Disease.

An "Easy" case of Measles

"Our daughter Evelyn, four years old, had the measles this winter, but was not sick at all with them as she takes adjustments. Following the measles, her ears started to suppurate, but two adjustments did her entirely of this trouble. We cannot praise Chiropractic too highly for the wonderful results Evelyn has experienced. We have also had splendid results in colds, headaches and other disorders. To any sufferer we recommend Chiropractic—first."—Mrs. M. G. Blackburn, Chiropractic Research Bureau, Statement No. 2122-M.

The lower nerve under the magnificent glass is pinched by a misaligned joint. Pinched nerves cannot transmit healthful impulses. Chiropractic adjusting removes the pressure. The upper nerve is free as nature intends.

The Secret Adversary

By AGATHA CHRISTIE

(Copyrighted Daily, Mond & Company)

On the morning they took up the search once more, and were reluctantly forced to the conclusion that the house had not been searched to any considerable time. They might have left the village altogether but for a fortunate discovery of Tommy's. As they were retracing their steps to the gate, he gave a sudden cry, and stooping, picked something up from among the leaves, and held it out to Julius. It was a small gold ring.

"That's Tuppence's!"

"Are you sure?"

"Absolutely. I've often seen her wear it."

Julius drew a deep breath.

"I guess that settles it. She came as far as here, anyway. We'll make the path our headquarters, and raise hell round here until we find her. Somebody must have seen her."

Forthwith the campaign began. Julius wired to town for his car, and they started the next morning with unflagging zeal. Julius was like a bound on the leash. He followed up the slenderest clue, but, as day succeeded day, they were no nearer to discovering Tuppence's whereabouts. So well had the abduction been planned that the girl seemed literally to have vanished into thin air.

Another preoccupation was weighing on Tommy's mind.

"Do you know how long we've been here?" he asked one morning as they sat facing each other at breakfast.

"A week! We're no nearer to finding Tuppence, and next Sunday is the 29th! Today's the 26th, and time's getting short. If we're ever going to get hold of her at all, we must do it before the 29th—her life won't be worth an hour's purchase after that. My Bertram's game plan will be played out then. We've wasted time and we're no forer."

"I'm with you there. We've been a couple of nutts, who've bitten off a bigger bit than they can chew. I'm going right back to London to get the case in the hands of my British police. Scotland Yard for me! I guess the professional always scores over the amateur in the end. Are you coming along with me?"

Tommy shook his head.

"What's the good? One of us is enough. I might as well stay here and nose round a bit longer. Something might turn up. One never knows."

"Sure thing. Well, so long. I'll be back in a couple of weeks with a few inspectors along. I shall tell them to pick out their brightest and best."

But the course of events was not to follow the plan Julius had laid down. Later in the day Tommy received a wire.

"Join me Manchester Midland hotel. Important news—Julius."

At 7:30 that night Tommy alighted from a slow cross-country train. Julius was on the platform.

"Tommy grasped him by the arm.

"What is it? Is Tuppence found?"

Julius shook his head.

"No. But I found this waiting in London. Just arrived."

He handed the telegraph form to the other. Tommy's eyes opened as he read:

"Jane Finn found. Come Manchester Midland hotel immediately—Peel Edgerton."

Julius took the form back and folded it up.

"Queer," he said thoughtfully. "I thought that lawyer chap had quit."

CHAPTER III

Jane Finn

"My train got in an hour ago," explained Julius, as he led the way out of the station. "I reckoned you'd come by this before I left London, and wired accordingly to Sir James. He's booked rooms for us, and will be round to dine at eight."

Sir James arrived punctually at eight o'clock, and introduced Tommy. Sir James shook hands with Julius warmly.

"Immediately the first greetings were over, Julius broke out into a flood of eager questions. How had Sir James managed to track the girl? Why had he not let them know that he was still working on the case? And so on.

Sir James stroked his chin and smiled. At last he said:

"Just so, just so. Well, she's found. And that's the great thing, isn't it? Eh? Come now, that's the great thing?"

"Sure it is. But just how did you strike her trail? Miss Tuppence and I thought you'd quit for good and all. But I guess I can take it we were wrong."

"Well, I don't know that I should go so far as to say that. But it's certainly fortunate for all parties that we've managed to find the young lady."

"But where is she?" demanded Julius, his thoughts flying off to another tack. "I thought you'd be sure to bring her along."

"That would hardly be possible," said Sir James gravely.

"Why?"

"Because the young lady was knocked down in a street action, and she sustained slight injuries to the head. She was taken to the Infirmary, and on recovering consciousness gave her name as Miss Jane Finn."

"She's not seriously hurt?"

"Oh, a bruise and a cut or two. Her state is probably to be attributed to the mental shock consequent on recovering her memory."

"It's come back?" cried Julius excitedly.

"Undoubtedly. Mr. Hersheltman, since she was able to give her real name, I thought you had appreciated that point."

"And you just happened to be at the spot?"

"Mr. Hersheltman—Mr. Brown—seems quite like a fairy tale."

But Sir James was far too wary to be drawn.

"Concidence are curious things," he said dryly.

Nevertheless Tommy was now certain of what he had before only a suspicion. He had seen the girl in Manchester was not accidental. Far from abandoning the case, as Julius supposed, he had by some means of Tuppence's, the mysterious, the elusive Jane Finn, led her to earth. The only thing that puzzled Tommy was the reason for all this secrecy.

"After dinner," he announced, "I shall go right away and see Jane."

"That will be impossible, I fear," said Julius. "It is very unlikely that she will allow her to see visitors at this time of night. I should suggest tomorrow morning about ten o'clock."

Julius flushed. There was something in Sir James which always stirred him to antagonism.

"All the same, I reckon I'll go and see her tonight and see if I can't ginger them up to break through their silly rules."

"It will be quite useless, Mr. Hersheltman. The words came out like the crack of a pistol, and Tommy looked up with a start. Julius was nervous and excited, and with a gasp he raised his glass to his lips and sipped slightly, but his eyes held Sir James' defiantly.

"For a moment the hostility between them seemed likely to burst into flame, but in the end Julius lowered his eyes, defeated.

"For the moment, I reckon you're the victor."

"Thank you," said the other. "We will say ten o'clock then? With commensurate ease of manner he turned to Tommy. "I must confess, Mr. Brown, that it was something of a surprise to me to see you here this evening. The last I heard of you was that your friends were in grave anxiety on your behalf. Nothing had been heard of you for some days, and Miss Tuppence was inclined to think you had got into difficulties."

"I had, sir," Tommy grinned realistically. "I was never in a tighter place in my life."

"Helped out by questions from Sir James, he gave an abbreviated account of his adventures. The lawyer looked at him with renewed interest as he brought the tale to a close.

"You got yourself out of a tight place very well," he said gravely. "I congratulate you. You displayed a great deal of ingenuity and carried your part through well."

Tommy blushed, his face assuming a prawn-like hue at the praise.

"That's since then? What have you been doing?"

"For a moment, Tommy started at him. Then it dawned on him that of course the lawyer did not know.

"I forgot that you didn't know about Tuppence," he said slowly.

The lawyer laid down his knife and fork sharply.

"Has anything happened to Miss Tuppence?" His voice was lowered.

"She's disappeared," said Julius.

"When?"

"A week ago."

"How?"

Sir James' questions fairly shot out. Between them Tommy and Julius gave the history of the last week and their futile search.

Sir James went at once to the root of the matter.

"A wire signed with your name? They knew enough of you to get hold of that. They weren't sure of how much you had learnt in that house. The kidnapping of Miss Tuppence is the counter-move to your escape. If necessary they could seal your lips with a threat of what might happen to her."

"That's just what I thought, sir."

Sir James looked at him keenly.

"You had worked that out, had you? Not bad—not at all bad. The curious part is that they certainly did not know anything about you when they first held you prisoner. You are sure that you did not in any way disclose your name to anyone?"

Tommy shook his head.

"That's so," said Julius with a nod. "Therefore I reckon some one put that wire—no, earlier than Sunday afternoon."

"Yes, but who?"

"That's mighty outlandish, Mr. Brown. Of course it is not."

There was a faint note of derision in the American's voice which made Sir James look up sharply.

"You don't believe in Mr. Brown, Mr. Hersheltman?"

"No, sir, I do not," returned the young American with emphasis. "Not as such, that is to say, I reckon it out that he's a gopher—just a big name to frighten the children with. The real head of this business is that Russian chap Kravonoff."

"I disagree with you," said Sir James shortly. "Mr. Brown states—" he turned to Tommy. "Did you happen to notice where that wire was handed in?"

"No, sir, I'm afraid I didn't."

"It's queer, sir, in my kit."

"I'd like to have a look at it some time. You've wasted a week. We'll deal with Miss Jane Finn first. Afterward, we'll set to work to trace Tuppence from bondage. I don't think she's in any immediate danger."

The other two assented, and after making arrangements for meeting on the morrow, the great lawyer took his leave.

At ten o'clock, the two young men were at the appointed spot. Sir James had joined them on the doorstep. He alone appeared unexcited. He introduced them to the doctor.

"Mr. Hersheltman—Mr. Brown—"

"Dr. Boylance. How's the patient?"

"Going on well. Expecting to get up the night of this. I don't know how many had heard saved from the Lusitania. She seems to have something on her mind, though."

"I think we can relieve her anxiety, May you go up?"

"Certainly."

Tommy's heart beat sensibly faster as they followed the doctor upstairs. Jane Finn lay in bed, her eyes closed, the mysterious, the elusive Jane Finn! How wildly improbable success had seemed! And here in this house, her memory almost miraculously restored, lay the girl who held the future of England in her hands. A half gown broke from Tommy's lips. If only Tuppence could have been at his side to share in the triumphant conclusion of their long quest! Then he felt the thought of Tuppence recede to the side. His confidence in Sir James was growing. There was a man who would unflinchingly face out Tuppence's whereabouts. In the meantime Jane Finn! And suddenly a dead clutch at his heart. It seemed too easy. . . . Suppose the whole thing was a trap! A stroke down by the hand of Mr. Brown?

In another minute he was laughing at these melodramatic fancies. The doctor held open the door of a room and they passed in. On the white bed, Jane Finn lay, her eyes closed, her hands round her head, lay the girl, whose eyes held the future of England in her hands. It was so exactly what one expected that it gave the effect of being beautifully staged.

The girl looked from one to the other of them with large wondering eyes. Sir James spoke first.

"Miss Finn," he said, "this is your cousin, Mr. Julius P. Hersheltman."

A faint flush flitted over the girl's face.

"How do, Cousin Jane?" he said lightly.

Back as Julius stepped forward and took her hand.

"How do, Cousin Jane?" he said lightly.

"Tommy caught the tremor in his voice."

"Are you really Uncle Hiram's son?" she asked wonderingly.

Her voice seemed vaguely familiar to Tommy, but he thrust the impression aside as impossible.

"Sure thing."

A shadow passed over the girl's face.

"They've been telling me things—dreadful things—that my memory went, and that there are years I shall never know about—years lost out of my life. It seems to me as though I were no time since we were being hustled into those boats. I can see it all now." She closed her eyes with a shudder.

Julius looked across at Sir James, who nodded.

"Don't worry, sir. It isn't worth it. Now, we've seen Jane's something we want to know about. There was a man aboard that boat with some mighty important papers on him, and the big name in the country have got a notion that he passed on the goods to you. Is that so?"

The girl hesitated, her glance shifting to the other two. Julius understood.

"Mr. Brownford is commissioned by the British government to get those papers back. Sir James Peel Edgerton is an English member of parliament, and might be a big gun in the cabinet if he liked. It's owing to him that we've recovered you out at last. So you can get right ahead and tell us the whole story. Did Danvers give you the papers?"

"Yes. He said they'd have a better chance with me, because they would save the women and children first."

"Just as we thought," said Sir James.

"He said they were very important—that they might make all the difference to the Allies. But, if it's all so long ago, and the war's over, what does it matter now?"

"I guess history repeats itself, Jane. First there was a great hue and cry over those papers, then it all blew down, and now the whole caboodle's started all over again—for rather different reasons. You can hand these over to us right away."

"But I can't. I haven't got them."

"You haven't got them?" Julius punctuated the words with little pauses.

"No—I hid them. I got uneasy. People seemed to be watching me. It scared me badly." She put her hand to her head. "It's almost the last thing I remember before waking up in the hospital."

"So on," said Sir James, in his quiet penetrating tones. "What do you remember?"

"It was at Holyhead. I came that way—I don't remember why. . . ."

"That doesn't matter. Go on."

"In the confusion on the quay I slipped away. Nobody saw me. I took a car. Told the man to drive me out of the town. I watched when we got on the open road. No other car was following us. I saw a path at the side of the road. I told the man to wait."

She paused, then went on. "The path led to the cliff, and down the cliff between big yellow gorse bushes—they were like hidden fences. I looked round. There wasn't a soul in sight. But just beyond the bushes, a man in a pole in the rock. It was quite small—I could only just get my hand in, but it wasn't long before I took the little pocket from round my neck and thrust it right in as far as I could. Then I tore off a bit of gorse—Mr. Brown did this—and plugged the hole with it so that you'd never guess there was a cavity of any kind there. Then I marked the place carefully in my own mind, so that I'd find it again. There was a queer boulder in the path just there—for all the world like a dog sitting up begging. Then I went back to the car. The car was waiting, and I drove back. It just caught the train. I was a bit ashamed of myself for fancying things maybe, but by and by, I saw the man opposite me wink at a woman who was sitting next to me, and I felt scared again, and was glad the papers were safe. I went out in the corridor to get a little air. I thought I'd slip into another carriage. But the woman called me back, said I'd dropped something, and when I stooped to look, something seemed to hit me—bare. She placed her hand to the back of her head. 'I don't remember anything more until I woke up in the hospital.'

There was a pause.

"Thank you, Miss Finn. It was Sir James who spoke. 'I hope we have not tired you?'

"Oh, that's all right. My head aches a little, but that's all I feel bad."

Julius stepped forward and took her hand again.

"So long, Cousin Jane. I'm going to get busy after those papers, but I'll be back in two shakes of a dog's tail, and I'll tote you up to London and give you the time of your young life before we go back to the States! I mean it—so hurry up and get well."

In the street they held an informal council of war. Sir James had drawn a watch from his pocket. "The boat train to Holyhead stops at Chester at 12:14. If you start at once I think you can catch the connection. I'll come with you if you like. I am sure I could speak at a meeting at two o'clock. It is unfortunate."

The reluctance in his tone was very evident. It was clear, on the other hand, that Julius was really disposed to put up with the loss of the other's company.

Ten minutes later the two young men were seated in a first-class carriage en route for Chester.

For a long time neither of them spoke. When at length Julius broke the silence, it was with a totally unexpected remark.

"Say," he said, "I've thoughtfully, 'did you ever make a darned fool of yourself over a girl's face?'"

Tommy, after a moment's astonishment, searched his mind. "Can't say I have," he replied at last. "Not that I can recollect, anyhow. Why?"

"Because for the last two months I've been making a sentimental idiot of myself over Jane. First moment I clapped eyes on her photograph my heart did all the usual stunts you read about in novels. I guess I'm ashamed to admit it, but I came over here determined to find her and fix it all up, and take her back as Mrs. Julius P. Hersheltman."

"Oh," said Tommy, amazed.

Julius uncrossed his legs brusquely and continued:

"Just shows what an amazingly fool a man can make of himself! One look at the girl in the flesh, and I was cured."

Feeling more tongue-tied than ever, Tommy ejaculated "Oh," again.

"No disparagement to Jane, mind you," continued the other. "She's a real nice girl, and some fellow will fall in love with her right away."

"I thought her a very good-looking girl," said Tommy, finishing his tongue. (To Be Continued)

No matter where crude rubber prices may go—Firestone advantages in securing raw material, in manufacturing and distribution are always active to make good the pledge of Most Miles per Dollar.

Racing drivers—hill-climbing and endurance record holders—taxicab, motor truck and bus operators—and hundreds of thousands of car owners—are daily emphasizing the unheard-of mileage and service delivered by Firestone Gum-Dipped Cords.

Gum-Dipping is one of the biggest factors in tire performance and long mileage, making Firestone Gum-Dipped

HEART AND HOME PROBLEMS

By Mrs. Oscar Brandy of Detroit

HEART AND HOME

If you have any questions troubling you, shift your burdens to Mrs. Brandy, and watch for her answer in The Delta Reporter. She is a woman of considerable experience, and you will never regret following the advice she gives. Don't spend sleepless nights, and days of worry, when you can send an anonymous letter and receive a reply that will assist you in arriving at a decision. Her answers to the queries of other folks may help you.

Dear Mrs. Brandy:

I have been married six months and although my husband shows me all the attention I could wish for I am constantly thinking that he is going with other women. He was very popular with the opposite sex before our marriage, and sought by many. I have no proof for my presumption, but am living a life of misery, and unhappiness because I honestly do believe that he has other company. My friends think that I am foolish to let this fact worry me, and place more trust in him than I do. However, that does not help me a bit. Please tell me how I can find out if my presumption is true. I have read your answer to Heartick, and do honestly believe in all her moments of passion, she was not as heartick as I am right now. As you probably gather, I love this man very much, which makes my doubting him the more terrible.

DOUBTING

Dubbing you signed yourself correctly in "doubting" for that is all it amounts to. You speak of your love for your husband, but not even trusting him doesn't quite jibe in my estimation. You admit that you have no proof whatsoever for your presumption, and yet you go on making yourself miserable thinking about what does not exist. Be happy and contented, and trust others, if you would be trusted yourself. I have found that as a general rule those folks who have faith in no one, are not the kind that can be trusted themselves. Don't cross the bridges till they come. I believe if you will think the matter over clear-headedly you will see where you are at fault. Don't allow yourself to become of the fault-finding kind. That is the easiest thing in the world to do. It not only spoils the happiness of others, but your own too.

Dear Mrs. Brandy:

I am writing to you in the hope that you can give me some method whereby I can get thin, I am eighteen years old, five feet, five inches tall, and weigh 151 pounds. I have tried everything advertised, without results. I try to take exercise by going on hikes, rowing, swimming etc. and regulating my diet. Please tell me if you think that it is just natural for me to be this size, or if you really have any hope of my reducing.

JADA.

Of course you can reduce Jada. No, I don't think any of us are afflicted with the malady of stoutness fatally, but it takes patience, and work. You are probably exercising but not systematically. I have a set of exercises that I am sure will bring results. They will take ten minutes of your time in the morning, and the same at night. If you will send a stamped addressed envelope, I will forward them to you at once.

Dear Mrs. Brandy:

I am a girl of eighteen, and would like to have you tell me how much sleep I should get each night. I am employed as a stenographer, from eight till five in the afternoon. I spend about five evenings of each week in the company of my gentlemen friends. My parents think that I get home too late. I am always in between eleven and twelve unless I attend a dance or some such affair. This gives me on the average of eight hours sleep per each 24, and I think I am getting plenty. What do you think about it Mrs. Brandy?

BOB.

Well Bob, I do think you are keeping too late hours. No, you don't need more than eight hours sleep a day, but that is no reason that you should spend the balance of that time that you are not on duty, chasing pleasure. Haven't you any other aim in life than satisfying your desire of a good time? Your parents are right in thinking that you are out altogether too much.

Dear Mrs. Brandy: I am too thin, and am in hope that you can give me some suggestion for my clothing that will improve my appearance. I buy some of my garments ready made, and make some myself. However, I have no success either way. It just seems that nothing is becoming. I don't know whether it is because I have poor taste or not, but I think you will know.

MARG.

If you are as thin as you say, Marg, you should be endeavoring to get stouter. Eat lots of foods of a nourishing nature. Send me your address, and I will send you menus mapped out for a week that will help you put on weight. In the meantime, concerning your query about clothes, you should not wear stripes lengthwise, but they would be good going around you. In your choice of patterns, avoid all lines that tend to add height to your figure. Large plaids also increase size. Do not choose plain materials. Fancy outfits will become you.

Dear Mrs. Brandy: I am a member of a vaudeville, am a young girl of 19. I have been quite successful in my vocation, and am gaining in popularity. There's only one thing that bothers me, and that is that girls in this profession are not exactly respected.

I fail to see the reason why. To come to my real problem, I am stationed in a small town in Michigan for the next three months. I happened to find your paper in the hotel, and at once decided to put the question to you. It seems that no matter where I am placed, after a few days, the folks so to say, think they've "got my number," and after that they sort of tolerate me with that insinuating air. I always conduct myself in a ladylike manner, and would like your advice in the matter.

"CURLY."

Yes Curly, I know that girls in your position are seldom respected, and many times as often they deserve respect. This may not apply in your case, so forget about the gossip. That's all it is. Destructive criticism don't amount to anything. Consider for yourself the type of individual who blows it forth. Your friends, and those who become acquainted with you, will know that reputation is not applicable. Feel above that underhand line of talk.

Savin' for College

"WE'RE SAVIN' TO GO TO COLLEGE"

Many of America's most prominent men "worked" their way through college.

While they were still in their "teens" they planned their education; did little odd jobs around home; learned the value of money through work—and SAVED some of the money earned. It is natural to assume that an education thus obtained is appreciated and correctly applied. When money value is learned early in life, there is slight danger of forgetting in later years the lesson learned. Children should be encouraged to earn "a little money"; then they should be taught to save a part of it. Do it to your children. Please remember that this bank welcomes the TERRIT accounts of children.

WHAT OTHERS ARE THINKING

This weeks question: Do You Think the People of Delta County are Benefited Sufficiently By the Annual County Fair?

MRS. JAMES LAVALLÉE—
I attend the County Fair every year, and I find it very interesting. From what I have observed, I think it most beneficial. I have always had some thing on exhibit at the Fair and regard the officials as fair and pleasant to deal with. I have obtained fifteen blue ribbons for fancy work. Last year I got first prize on plums, hazelnuts and flowers. I have taken particular notice of the produce displayed, and think it is an evidence of the good work done by the County Fair. The farmers, and in general everyone in Delta County is competing against each other for the highest grade of each article displayed and it naturally results in better produce.

CLIFF MURKER—
The County Fair is a great benefit, alright, but I think they get the crowds to attend more to witness the fireworks attractions such as the horse races, aeroplane stunts, etc. than to see the exhibits. It is looked forward to as a day of recreation. If they had just a line of produce for folks to see, the attendance would be greatly diminished. I consider it a wonderful help for the farmer. It puts him on a more common footing with everyone else. It helps him to the extent that every man is trying to raise a certain brand of cattle or kind of produce that will excel that of his neighbor, and permit him to go home with a blue ribbon pinned on his coat. Farms have greatly improved in the last few years. Their methods have changed, especially from the mechanical end of it. It permits an exchange of ideas. The farmers of Delta look over with the farmers of Perkins, whom perhaps wouldn't meet otherwise for years.

R. GAZLEY—
I think it's a big benefit to all of us, and we should take an interest in the day. It creates competition between everyone. The women try to see who can make the best jelly, and the men are battling for the largest ear of corn, while otherwise, they might be content to go on as usual with no extra energy expended for the quality of their goods. Gladstone always attracts in large numbers and I think the surrounding towns do the same. The fact that one day is set aside for the local people is evidence of the popularity of the County Fair.

EINAR OLSON—
The Fair is undoubtedly a big asset, but I think that the educational end of it is not the drawing card to many. There is a certain class who attend to witness the stunts put on, shows etc. just as they would attend a Carnival or Circus. Others visit the exhibition rooms, and really profit by the displays and see where their locality stands agriculturally. It gives the farmers something to look forward to, and work to outdo their neighbors. It is true that wherever there is competition there is progress, and the progress of this part of the country in farming is due to a big extent to the annual County Fair. The farmers go home with new ideas, and plan for the next year to excel their present crop. The livestock is what interests the most. The fair concerns every resident of the county, man, woman and child. There is something there for each, and competition each can get in to.

R. A. HALE—
I am greatly in favor of the County Fair, because of the wonderful educational opportunity it affords. I know of no other institution so beneficial. The competition certainly results in better quality of farm produce, and the determination to win, instilled in those who compete for the different honors is what makes for success in anything. To become a member of some such competitive group and work for turning out the best article, is one way to learn this big asset, determination, and become skillful in using it.

L. W. GORDON—
No, I can't see where the County Fair is any great benefit to anyone, as it is now carried on. If it were made up of exhibits of other parts of the country, for instance, Canada, it would be worthwhile. It is attended as any other circus, or carnival, or some similar event. If you've seen one fair, you've seen them all. There's no special benefit in going to Escanaba, to see some jelly made by some Rapid River woman, and a quilt made by a Perkins resident. From the financial end of it, I can't see where it benefits anyone but the merchants in the County seat.

EVANGELIST SPEAKERS LEAVE HERE TOMORROW
Rev's George and Ernest Burt, father and son of Beaverton and Onaway, respectively, will leave tomorrow for their homes, after having held services at the Church of Latter Day Saints throughout the week. Both are evangelist ministers. They arrived here last Friday and have held meetings each night since. The church was crowded to capacity at each session to receive the instruction of these men.

MILDRED MINEAU IS LAID TO REST

evening at seven o'clock after an illness of only a few hours. She attended her classes at school this morning, and came home at noon complaining of a headache. She was kept home in the afternoon, and at five o'clock when Mrs. Mineau arrived from work her condition had grown somewhat worse. A physician was called, but there seemed little cause for alarm. Convulsions set in a little later, with death following shortly after seven o'clock with the sorrowing members of the family gathered at the bedside.

Mrs. Mineau who has been confined to her bed suffering from the shock, and stricken with sorrow, is recovering, and was able to attend the funeral. Those who survive are her parents, Mr. and Mrs. William Mineau, brothers Leonard, Arthur, Clifford, Wilford, Carlton and one sister, Bernice. A pall of gloom overspread the features of all as they heard of the death of the young woman. Sincere expressions of sympathy were heard on every hand and are extended to the bereaved parents, brothers and sister in their hardship.

Those who attended the funeral from out of town, relatives and friends are, Mrs. E. LaMountain, Miss Famine LaMountain, Mrs. Frank Lensen, Mrs. Gust LaCombe, Mrs. Wm. Van Gaal, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Peterson, and son William, all of Oconto, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Bouclair and daughter Delores, Mr. and Mrs. E. Mineau also of Escanaba. They have returned to their respective homes.

CARD OF THANKS
We extend our sincere thanks to the relatives, friends and fellow citizens who sympathized and aided us at the time of our great affliction. Kind words and kind deeds have helped to lighten our great sorrow in the loss of our daughter and sister. Words cannot express our deep appreciation. We especially want to thank those who sent floral offerings and those who donated the use of their cars. Mr. and Mrs. William F. Mineau, and Family.

Our Reporter Observes--

THAT Fair time seems to bring with it thoughts of the peppy winter months.

THAT the odor of "pickles in the making" is present around all homes these days.

THAT advertising much pay alright when its followers leave their positions on display on all the telephone poles and vacant buildings for two months after the event.

THAT we're all still waiting to see maroon and green Fords kick up dust on the Main drag.

THAT with our first frost a few nights ago came sickly looking gardens and the disappearance of flies.

THAT fall openings with elaborate decorations make our stores like rich oriental emporiums.

THAT Wednesday folks were able to don their boots, and with their shot guns head for the marshes to capture their quota of the season's duck spoil.

THAT wood and coal piles are going up to insure warmth when Father Time takes out his spite and revenge on us.

THAT when Escanaba was a base ball game, they can't put themselves on the back hard enough, but when they go down to defeat, it made a matter of little mention and the victors of the game wholly ignored.

THAT the Escanaba-Gladstone road is hard on the springs of a car, and incidentally makes you hit the top of the car once in a while, when your bus hits little holes, irregularities, and inclines, that adorn that highway.

THAT attention has already become centered in high school football, and folks are looking forward to a winning "11."

THAT we all want a city band, and the chance to stand back of the town. Line musicians as a municipal organization. Let's not have our communities think that out of a population of 5,000, we haven't enough folks skilled in the art to provide a city band.

THAT with the reopening of the organizations, lodges and fraternalities of the city, there's more pep, and life to the old home town.

BEAR AND 2 CUBS SEEN IN VICINITY

A bear and two cubs is quite an unusual thing to be parading around in this civilized country, but nevertheless these members of the animal kingdom feel quite at home at the old Tom Gaiter homestead, one mile west of Chalston. The farmer was in town last Saturday, and on paying M. P. Foy a call told of his meeting with them. They were able to ascertain only his first name, he being known by "George" among friends around here.

George says the bears were stealing his pigs, and have been hanging around the pens of late. He scared them off, but does not intend to let them live to a ripe old age if they molest his animals. He is specializing in raising animals of fur value. His line consists of foxes, ferrets, and skunks.
