ARVID BERGMAN DIES SUDDENLY

Mr. Arvid Bergman, age 67, died suddenly early Wednesday morning at his home at Whitefish...

It was only about August 1, that Mrs. Bergman passed away at the St. Augustina hospital in Chicago where she was taken for an operation...

Arvid Bergman was born at Norland Sweden, on June 14, 1858 and came to this country in 1880. He followed the work of the woods and the river in the Whitefish community and in 1905 was married to Anna Hanson...

The sympathy of the entire community goes out to the bereaved children who have lost a most lovable mother and a faithful father in so short a period of time.

TWO KINDS OF DISCONTENT

Discontent rules the world. It is the inspiration of success. It plays politics. It guides the advance of civilization. Upon its shoulders rests responsibility for the world's crimes and its achievements. Without it there would be no progress, no invention, no discovery, no expansion, no development, and life would become stale and decadent.

Never before has the United States harbored as many malcontents of the want-to-be-helped and won't-help themselves kind as today. Thousands of men and women are dissatisfied with their lot and expect their government to improve it to their liking.

For the future prosperity and advancement of America it is well that the greater number of Americans be blest with Phillips Brooks that, "Bad will be the day for the man who becomes absolutely contented with the life that is living, with the thoughts that he is thinking, with the deeds that he is doing, when there is not forever beating at the door of his soul some great desire to do something larger."—Birmingham Eclectic.

CARDINAL POOL ROOM CLOSED BY LABUMBARD

Lester LaBumbard closed the pool and billiard business that he has conducted since last winter in the Cardinal building giving as his reason the excessive rent demanded and a desire to get back to his former work in the woods as a jobber and foreman. It is likely that Harold Cardinal will return here and open the place for business again.

RETURN FROM LEGION CONVENTION

C. R. Johnson and Peter Schultz returned Sunday morning from the Legion convention at Omaha and kept rest busy telling the other boys here of the grand and glorious time spent with their old buddies. Many are the hilarious tales Rube is telling about the rescue he made of Peter from the dangerous "dog-outs" that had no barred wire entanglements at their entrance but had some form of entanglements within, and Peter is telling of the many escapades of Rube from the tanks, schooners and steam rollers at every corner.

The boys thoroughly enjoyed their trip taking in the monstrous parade and the reviewing stand where President Coolidge sat, hearing him make his address on Tuesday morning and listening to the more than 100 bands and corps from every state in the Union. The floats in the parade were most beautiful to behold. Much comedy was injected into the convention and when Lou entered the parade carrying a tall corn stalk South Dakota entered with an ear of corn 20 feet long and six feet in diameter with the words on it, "Iowa grows the corn but they get their seed back to their farms from the woods as a jobber and foreman."

The Auxiliary also had a very active part in the joyful celebration. During the convention Mr. Johnson visited with his parents who reside in Omaha.

The Secret Adversary

By AGATHA CHRISTIE

(Copyright, Reed & Company)

"They watched me constantly for weeks. Sometimes they'd ask me questions by the hour—I guess there was nothing they didn't know about the third degree—but somehow I managed to hold my own. The worst was awful, though. . . I felt that the horrors in store for me would be too awful once they knew I'd been only shamming.

"It ended in my being sent to a sanatorium at Bournemouth. I couldn't make up my mind at first whether it was a sham affair or genuine. I think I almost hypnotized myself.

"One night I was whisked off to London at a moment's notice. They took me back to the house in Soho. They sent me in to wait on Mr. Rosenford. (Of course I didn't know his name then.) I was suspicious—I thought it was another trap. But he looked so honest, I could hardly believe it. However, I was careful in all I said, for I knew he could be overheard. There's a small box, high up in the wall.

"But on the Sunday afternoon a message was brought to the house. They were all very disturbed. Without their knowing I listened. Word had come that he was to be killed. I needn't tell the next part, because you know it.

She paused.

"Then the papers," said Sir James slowly, "are still at the back of the picture in that room."

"Yes," the girl had sunk back on the sofa exhausted with the strain of the long story.

Sir James rose to his feet. He looked at his watch.

"Come," he said, "we must go at once. You have been followed here—not a doubt of it. When we leave the house we shall be followed again, but not molested, for it is Mr. Brown's plan that we are to lead him. But the Soho house is under police supervision night and day. There are several men watching it. When we enter the house, Mr. Brown will not draw back—he will risk all, on the chance of obtaining the spark to fire his mine. And he fancies the risk not greater if he will enter in the guise of friend!"

Tuppence flushed, then opened her mouth. Both girls looked equally puzzled. The lawyer went across to his desk, and returned with a small newspaper cutting, which he handed to Jane. Tuppence read it over her shoulder. It referred to the mysterious man found dead in New York.

"As I was saying to Miss Tuppence," resumed the lawyer, "I set to work to prove the impossible possible. The great stumbling block was the undisturbed fact that Julius Hershelmer was not an assumed name. When I came across this paragraph my problem was solved. Julius Hershelmer set out to discover what had become of his cousin. He went out West, where he obtained news of her and her photographs to aid him in his search. On the eve of his departure from New York he was set upon and murdered. His body was dressed in shabby clothes, and the face disguised to prevent identification. Mr. Brown took his place. He sailed immediately for England. Since then he has been hand and glove with those sworn to hunt him down. Every secret of theirs has been known to him. Only once did he come near disaster. Mrs. Vandemeyer knew his secret. It was a part of his plan that that long herbe should ever be offered to her. But for Miss Tuppence's fortunate change of plan she would have been away from the flat when we arrived there. Exposure stared him in the face. He took a desperate step, trusting in his assumed character to avert suspicion. He heavily succeeded—but not quite.

"Now we're ready. I know better than even to suggest going without you, Miss Tuppence."

"I should think so indeed!"

Sir James' car drew up at the corner of the square and they got out. A policeman produced a key. They all knew Sir James well. The three entered the house, pulling the door to behind them. Slowly they mounted the rickety stairs. At the top was the ragged curtain hiding the room where Tommy had hidden that day. Tuppence had heard the story from Jane in her character of "Annetta." She knew Sir James well. The three entered. Even now she could almost swear it moved—as though someone was behind it. Supporting Mr. Brown—Julius—was there waiting.

Impossible of course! She must not give way to this foolish fancying—this curious insistent feeling that Mr. Brown was in the house.

Hark! What was that? A salient footstep on the stairs? There was someone in the house! Absurd! She was becoming hysterical.

Jane had gone straight to the picture of Marguerita. She unhooked it with a steady hand. The dust lay thick upon it, and festoons of cobwebs lay between it and the wall. Sir James handed her a pocket-knife, and she ripped away the brown paper from the back. . . . The advertisement page of a magazine fell out. Jane picked it up. Holding apart the frayed inner edges, she extracted two thin sheets covered with writing!

No dummy this time! The real thing!

"We've got it," said Tuppence. "At last. . . ."

Sir James took it, and scrutinized it attentively.

"Yes," he said quietly, "this is the ill-fated draft treaty!"

"We've succeeded," said Tuppence. There was awe and an almost wondering unbelief in her voice.

Mr. James schooled her words as he folded the paper carefully and put it away in his pocket-book, then he looked curiously round the dingy room.

"It was here that our young friend was confined for so long, was it not?" he said. "A truly sinister room. You notice the absence of windows, and the thickness of the close-fitting door. Whatever took place here would never be heard by the outside world."

"You feel—as we all feel—THE FRENCH OF MR. BROWN. Yes"—as Tuppence made a movement—"not a doubt of it—MR. BROWN IS HERE."

"In this house?"

"In this house." You don't understand! I AM MR. BROWN. . . . Stupefied, unbelieving, they stared at him. The very lines of his face had changed. It was a different man who stood before them. He smiled a slow cruel smile.

"Neither of you will leave this room alive! Shall I tell you how it will be done or later the police will break in, and they will find three victims of Mr. Brown—three, not two, you understand, but fortunately the third will not be dead, only wounded, and will be able to describe the attack with a wealth of detail! The treaty? It is in the hands of Mr. Brown. So no one will think of searching the pockets of Sir James Peel Edgerton."

There was a faint sound behind him, but, intoxicated with success, he did not turn his head.

He slipped his hand into his pocket. "Checkmate to the Young Adventurers," he said, and slowly raised a big automatic.

But, even as he did so, he felt himself seized from behind in a grip of iron. The revolver was wrenched from his hand, and the voice of Julius Vandemeyer said drawlingly:

"I guess you're caught red-handed with the goods on you."

The blood rushed to the K. G.'s face, but his self-control was marvellous, as he looked from one to the other of his two captors. He looked longest at Tommy.

"Yes," he said beneath his breath. "Yes! I might have known."

Seeing that he was disposed to offer no resistance, their grip slackened. Quick as a flash his left hand, the hand which wore the big silver ring, was raised to his lips.

"Ave. Cuesat! to morient! mout," he said, still looking at Tommy. Then his face changed, and with a long convulsive shudder he fell forward in a crumpled heap, whilst an odor of bitter almonds filled the air.

Shorter State Ferry Day

The state auto ferry day was short of half a trip at both ends on October 1. The first boat at each end now starts out at 7:30 a. m.; the last trip each way is started at 7:30 p. m. Both boats remain in commission and one leaves each end at one and a half hour intervals, as heretofore—St. Ignace Republican News.

mouth impulsively. "You know who Mr. Brown is, don't you?"

"Yes," said Sir James gravely. "I have been morally certain of his identity for some time—ever since the night of Mrs. Vandemeyer's mysterious death."

"Ah!" breathed Tuppence.

"For there we are up against the facts. There are only two solutions. Either the choral was administered by her own hand, which theory I reject utterly, or else—"

"Yes!"

"Or else it was administered in the brandy you gave her. Only three people touched that brandy—you, Miss Tuppence, I myself, and one other—Mr. Julius Hershelmer!"

"Yes! Finn stirred and sat up, regarding the speaker with wide, astonished eyes. Springing to her feet, she cried out angrily:

"What do you mean? What are you trying to suggest? The Mr. Brown, is Julius? Julius—my own cousin?"

"No, Miss Finn," said Sir James. "Not your cousin. The man who calls himself Julius Hershelmer is no relation to you whatsoever."

IT PAYS to be honest. That applies in public as well as in private business and every day life. Certain officials in the city of Escanaba wanted to adopt a new plan for the care of the poor of the county. They would have had it appear that the plan was intended to benefit the townships at least to the same extent as it would Escanaba. Gladstone's supervisors joined with those from the townships in voting that they didn't believe in any such thing. After the plan was defeated or at least deferred for another year, W. J. Hanrahan came out openly to declare that the plan was intended to benefit Escanaba the most and that the county should be considered as a unit, rather than that there should be city and township units in caring for the poor. That admission came only after the meeting had been adjourned but it was just what was needed to bring back a better understanding among the supervisors. Several of them indicated that they would have favored trying a change had the sponsors of the plan laid their cards up on the table and admitted that they were aiming at...

DURING the session, Supervisor Hanrahan, who is chairman of the board, gave what might be considered a very good talk in favor of the county system. It was based on arguments and promises that were backed by a reasonable amount of facts. Chairman Hanrahan simply followed the same tactics that had been followed previously in the campaign. After the meeting he spoke for himself, and while the promises of savings were still only promises, yet the fact that he admitted that Escanaba had much to gain in the change made it more certain that there were reasonable grounds for demanding a change. And his talk won friends for the proposal. Several of the supervisors made it plain that they were not opposed to Escanaba because it was Escanaba, but they were so opposed when Escanaba wanted something for itself and tried to make it appear that it was making it only for others. Such magnanimity on the part of Escanaba is entirely unexpected and uncalled for. It is expected that each public official should look out for his own constituents, but in doing this it does not follow that the interests of the other sections should be overlooked. If the City of Escanaba can gain sufficiently by a county system, the supervisors from the townships are not absolutely averse to make a little sacrifice. That is the attitude that they assumed at the last meeting of the county board.

THE GENERAL agreement is that there is a possibility for considerable saving to the county in administering for the county's poor. Those possibilities are will be better understood at the end of next year, after the new superintendent, N. J. LaPine of this city has had an opportunity to study the needs. In naming Mr. LaPine to succeed Mr. Olmstead, the board has chosen a name big enough and capable enough to get the best there is possible under the present county unit system. He is well acquainted with the people of the county and the needs of the poor will be certain to receive his careful attention, with regard always to the interests of the county as a whole. Mr. LaPine has on more than one occasion been sought for public office. Always before he has turned a deaf ear to such calls. That he has now consented to assume public work will be gratifying to his numerous friends who have felt that he could be of much service. Mr. LaPine is now on a business trip in western Canada and he will not assume office until the first of next year. Mr. Olmstead will in the meantime continue his term on active duty and will be retained in an advisory capacity. He has given many years of service to the work, a trying job for any man. It is not amazing that the thought that it should be that there is room for improvement. There are many things to contend with in such work and a less courageous man would have been ready to retire long ago. And to really say the people may be thankful to Mr. Olmstead for a long service well performed, and at the same time look for improvement in the management conducted through the incoming superintendent, Mr. LaPine.

HIGH taxes are never welcomed by anybody who has to pay them. There is always some encouragement when it is noted that the trend in taxation takes a drop; likewise when the trend is upward, the public likes it not so well. There was unquestionably some very good reasons for the Delta county Road Commission to request $80,000 for road purposes for next year. Had the supervisors seen fit to allow that amount, it was promised that township roads would get the attention promised them for several years. The commission felt that next year was the opportune time to concentrate its attention on the roads that serve as connecting links for the move out of the way places in the county. The State Highway department takes over the construction and maintenance of trunk lines beginning the first of the year and the county Commission will be permitted to concentrate its attention on these smaller, but nevertheless important township roads. The Board saw fit to cut the amount to three mills, or just a little over $60,000 and with this the Commission will have another $24,000 from the state as the county share of the license and gas taxes. These two sums combined make a total larger than ever before available for township roads, and it is to be hoped that the Commission will find it possible to take care of the roads in townships certainly deserve to get improved roads, for as contended by Supervisor Rose and some others, the taxpayers in the outlying districts have paid county road tax for years without deriving any material direct benefit. It is their turn now.

IT WAS all very well for Escanaba to put up its fight in its own way. But why should the paper there class itself with Gladstone in allying and showing how smart they are there?

SOME wise bird from Texas suggests that housewives be paid salaries of $15 a week. Some housewives will like that idea—provided that is the whole salary.

SENATOR James Couzens made a public speech at Birmingham, Mich. the other day. Michigan's senator has the backbone to express his opinion, let the chips fall where they may. That is why certain interested hard to defeat him in the last election. In his most recent speech Senator Couzens declared that the next war will not only entail the conscription of property, but also of wealth. Given an emergency on the part of the government consists in requiring equality of sacrifice on the part of all its citizens for an end considered to be of national importance. Wars will end when all nations are sufficiently enlightened to cause of conscription of wealth during an emergency.

THERE were 37,155 delegates registered last week at the national convention of the American Legion, held at Omaha, Neb. Nearly that many more were believed to have failed to register. Such a large attendance at a national convention gives an idea of the large membership in the one organization representing former service men. The convention program was gone through with in good order and the delegates refrained from taking up issues not pertaining to their concern. John R. McQuinn of East Cleveland, Ohio was elected national commander.

THERE was a time when our government was opposed to monopoly. We heard much then about the trust, trust, and every other trust. Where once the government opposed, especially under the regime of Teddy Roosevelt, it now seems that combinations are being encouraged. A recent combination is that of Armour & Company, together with the Morris Company. We are told that the investigation covered more than two years time and that 322 witnesses testified and that the overwhelming weight of the testimony was in favor of the free competition. The merger was not materially lessened by reason of the merger. "On the contrary," declares Secretary Jardine of the Department of Agriculture, "the evidence is persuasive that it was for the purpose of affecting economies in the conduct of Armour respondents' business by reducing overhead expenses and increasing the volume of sales of the finished products." All of which may be true, and there is little that can be done if the government is satisfied. The time will probably come when the people will wish for less of monopoly.

In the final analysis there are only two classes of people: the generous and the stingy. Heaven, when you arrive, will be made up only of generous persons. The stingy individual—and he is publicly classified by everyone including himself—has no part in the scheme of the Christian religion, either here or hereafter. This religious fakir who pays for his spiritual security in thin dime installments, seven days apart and employs a cheaper schedule than that for his charity clubs, will do well to read—the red cards—the 13th chapter of First Corinthians. The cruel thing about the attitude of this group is in their loss of genuine satisfaction that goes with the other theory of life. The virtue of being generous is the best religion. The stingy person has completely missed the first essential of spiritual enlightenment.

For all you can hold in your cold dead hand is what you have given away.

MEMORIES

Items of interest of Gladstone and its citizens of years gone by.

22 YEARS AGO (Gladstone Delta, Oct. 10, 1903)

The Bluffside is already losing the bright tints of autumn and the leaves are deep on the ground; all the signs show that winter will come early. A clear, frosty day will not be much worse than the dark, dreary drizzle.

Mrs. H. W. Blackwell returned last Saturday from a month's visit in Ohio.

The board of education met Wednesday evening and transacted routine business besides buying a handsome set of hearts for $70.

Roy Hammel returned Monday from his trip to Appleton, and once more the rubber wheeled vehicle is visible in the park.

Six farmers went to Menominee court house to ask for a reduction of their taxes by the state tax commission. They were informed that the mission of the state representatives is to raise taxes, not to lose on them.

With the opening of the hunting season gun-headache reappears among sportsmen. This is a variety of misery in the think-tank entirely distinct from that next morning remembrance, and arises from the jar and vibration produced in firing a load of buckshot into a sparrow, or other game. An old experienced hunter advises hunters to hold a piece of rubber between their teeth when firing. Any old chunk of gun saloon will do.

P. J. Baker spent last Sunday communing with nature along the banks of the Escanaba. He observes the struggles that the settler has in overdoing the primal cause that has filled the country with stumps and underbrush and notes his meager means of enjoying life; then Baker comes home, and feels good all over to think that he has the "dequod" to make himself comfortable.

20 YEARS AGO (October 14, 1906)

Brant is a busy man nowadays and his business is driving him. Sheppard too, is making the most of the fine weather, for masses cannot work in the winter. Gladstone must have been a fairly good market for stone this year. Many the foundations have been put in, both in new buildings and old ones. The cement walk has become very common and will be the main resort hereafter. Few people can afford now to lay a board walk that must be tended carefully for a few years and then replaced by a new one.

Henry Schaewe, of Gladstone, made application to the supervisors for a license to operate a ferry across the bay and was given permission this week, as a competent and reliable man, to operate for ten years. The ferry proposed is a scow, to be towed or propelled by its own power, which ever seems best to the ferryman, and to be run by the first of next June.

The first conviction under that ordinance which makes it a misdemeanor to let cattle stray took place Thursday when Alexis King placed a suit to the charge and paid a fine and costs. The cow strayed upon the Edenic premises of Ald. Burrows, and something dropped. This is evidently the opening gun of the campaign.

21st foreign factory branch for that company.

The Shaw Crane Works at Muskegon that started on a small scale 25 years ago has just passed the manufacturing mark of crane No. 5000. The plant is the largest of its kind in the world.

Michigan, second largest iron producing state in the union, saw a production decrease of 13 per cent between 1923 and 1924. Twenty states in the union produce iron ore. Minnesota leads them all.

Detroit today has more than 200 branch banks in operation while Grand Rapids has 31, Flint has 11. Bay City has seven and Saginaw five. It sets the state of Michigan $200 a day operation each of the ferries plying between Mackinaw City and St. Ignace. During the rush months the boats earn better than $40,000 each month.

The first and so far the only oil burning locomotive in the state is operating at the Ford plant at River Rouge. It used to cost Port $73.60 for coal for every hour the coal burning monster worked whereas the new type burns but $56.20 worth of fuel oil for the same period.

Plans quietly are progressing in Detroit for the federal building that Detroit is to be one of the nation's war department procurement depots capable of providing at short notice almost one million articles from sugar and coffee to powders and explosives and from wheelbarrows to airplanes.

A corps of clock experts are employed in the Ford institutions to keep the clocks in repair that tick off the seconds in the hour. They have not more than 100,000 employees. Not a minute is wasted. Precision in everything is the watchword.

In a small, bright room in the Ford Diesel laboratory sits a little watchmaker who keeps tab on all the time that is used in the Ford factories, on its railroad and on its steamship lines. He is responsible for the correct time and to date he has not made an error or let a minute slip.

For the first three months of this year Michigan exported goods to foreign countries valued at $53,442,144. She held 6th place among the 52 states and territories in value of exports and lead Ohio, nearest competitor by $15,000,000.

Value of the Chase S. Osborn library at Duck Island, located at home of Michigan's former governor, is placed at $150,000 by Thomas E. Johnson, superintendent of public instruction. The library contains 7,000 volumes, many of them almost priceless, and many of them printed in various languages.

With but one exception in the political history of the state, Rep. Gerrit Van Hook, Holland, has served more consecutive terms in the Legislature than any other representative. He was former Rep. James Jerome DeWalt.

Forest Fires that the Conservation Department was powerless to handle are credited with the decided decrease of the honey crop in upper Michigan. The vast areas of the land from which the bees gathered their supply were burned black.

Chase S. Osborn, former governor and former game commissioner, stating it is useless to try to safeguard the famous 7,000 volume library on Duck Island in the St. Mary's river in fire-proof vault to house the books. Recent forest fires almost wiped out the $150,000 collection.

All school children in Michigan have been warned by Tom E. Johnson, superintendent of public instruction, to exercise the greatest caution in crossing highways. Mr. Johnson says the injuries to children by autos is on the increase.

Workers in Detroit live as far as 20 miles from their places of employment, no by the use of the automobile, but more time in going to and from work than they used when walking a mile or two. Many workers in Flint reside 10 miles and more from their places of employment.

Seventy-eight percent of last year's automobile production in Michigan sold for $1,000 or less. In 1920 the output of cars at these prices was 59 per cent of the total.

Michigan last year contributed a large share to the one and one-quarter millions of automobiles that were scrapped. Within two more years the estimated number of cars that will be scrapped annually will be two million.

Because land deals made in Oakland county 20 years ago were imperfect so far as mortgage discharges are concerned the courts there today are busy with at least a dozen actions to quiet titles.

Vanuren and Berrien counties produce 90 per cent of the state's grape crop. Van Buren county is the original home of the Michigan grape and it also was the original county in the state to produce wine.

Michigan State prison inmates at Jackson are now busy manufacturing 100,000 auto license plates for 1926. The $50,000 for Michigan's 1926 use are delivered.

Michigan's 1924 lime production had a total value of $675,000. More than 73,000 tons of lime were put on the market. The Prescott company, Menominee under Ford's direction, will soon be carrying the peens and the rich, Mexico's first automobile factory has been started by Ford, this making the

(A Weekly Panorama of Events in the National Capital by Peter Keegan, for the Delta Reporter.)

WAS "BILLY" Mitchell afraid of the Naval Court of Inquiry? The Navy firmly believes he was and leading officers insist that he has lost the public approval he had at the start of his campaign (or a unified ad service. Mitchell counters with the fact that Army court martial proceedings were impending and he did not wish to jeopardize his case. The Navy was known to be "loaded for bear" when Mitchell made his appearance before the court and leading officers privately said they hoped to completely run Mitchell in the eyes of the people. The fighting colonel was regarded as being unfamiliar with the operations of dirigibles like the Shenandoah and the Navy hoped to "show up" his lack of such knowledge. Mitchell's charges of "almost treasonable inefficiency" against the Navy following the Shenandoah crash has been a thorn in the side of the sailors. The fact that they have not been given an opportunity to prosecute their case by having Mitchell prove on the stand that he has little or no knowledge of that branch of aeronautics.

THE TALK in diplomatic circles these days is the strong stand which China is expected to take in demanding that the Powers relinquish their grip on that country. Not since the boxer uprising has Chinese sentiment been so strong for freedom from foreign domination. Chinese customs are not collected by foreigners who also have the right to set before their ex-courts. Belief is growing that China will bluntly demand at the forthcoming conferences, that the Powers giving up their treaty rights. If China should do that, it is agreed, no show of force would be made by the Powers as a military occupation of China is out of the question at the present time. China's weakness lies in the rival factions vying for control and all anxious to remain on good terms with the leading nations.

WASHINGTON is eagerly awaiting the return from Gen. Woodrow Wilson to hear at first hand what many believe may be an admission that she is planning to be married again. In the face of emphatic denials the rumor is spreading that Mrs. Woodrow Wilson has accepted the offer of her name with that of Dr. F. Sterling Ruffin, an old family friend. Ruffin has refused to comment. Mrs. Wilson's great charm and vivid beauty, for all of her 60-some years, have made her a target for the clique which has always disliked her. Friends of Mrs. Wilson insist that she will dedicate the remainder of her life to carrying out the work of her late husband. President Wilson. Many eligible bachelors have called at the noted 8 street home since the customary mourning period ended and this fact, coupled with the rumors which originate abroad, are the basis of the latest gossip.

A CLEVER plan to help Senator Esmo's building program is seen by many in the Senate. Proceedings against the Department of Justice. The Department, in common with many other governmental agencies, is now occupying rented quarters. Harry Warden, a prominent contractor, ordered the Department to pay more rent or vacate the building it occupies. He later released and allowed the Attorney General time in which to consider the situation. Esmo's program, which provides for construction of sufficient buildings to care for all governmental bureaus is opposed because of the expense involved. It is certain to create a stormy scene in Congress because of the present economy program.

COLONEL Tom Miller, former Allen County Custodian, is planning on returning to Washington before Congress opens to personally tell the Attorney General just how he came into possession of $47,000 in bonds said to have been part of the German funds taken over by the government in war times. The Department of Justice has finished its investigation and many believe another scandal depends. Miller's friends insist the securities were acquired properly and that it was just the same as numbers as those given under his charge in war times. Miller is now in France.

IT IS reported that Alice Roosevelt Longworth and the Princess Blibesco, wife of the Russian minister, are planning to collaborate on a book. The volume will give interesting sidelights on the workings of the Washington political and diplomatic set.

HEART AND HOME PROBLEM

By Mrs. Oscar Branty of Detroit

Dear Mrs. Branty: There's lots of things on my mind today, that I need counsel in, and I am coming to you, with the firm conviction that I will obtain advice. I am 22 years of age and my problem is a matrimonial one. I have had two offers of marriage. The man I would choose is two years my senior, and I love him dearly Mrs. Branty. His parents have never been very well-to-do, and he has not had all the advantages he would like to have had. The other is 32 years old, and a regular English slide. He just bores me. My parents have firmly decided that he is the man for me. He is from a very wealthy family, has social position and of course I would always have everything I could wish for—but happiness. That's the way I look at it Mrs. Branty. My true love is worth more in a minute than this dude is in ten months. He has the real makings of success. He has had two years in college and is an electrical engineer, and I know that he is going to be a big success. This other one, will always have plenty, and appear as a success because of the labors of his forefathers to leave him a vast fortune. I know I could never be happy with him. My parents are only looking for the wealth part of it, and say that love is just a silly whim of mine, and it will all come in time I know different Mrs. Branty. Please write right away, and tell me what to do. My parents wish my wedding to be next month.

Your parents should not choose your life mate for you Norma. I think that is very selfish on their part. You should follow the dictate of your own conscience.

I feel sure that the younger man is the one for you, and I know you feel it too. From what you say, I take it and has the right in him, to win success. You might not be surrounded with such grandeur, but what is wealth? It can't buy happiness, and that is the greatest thing in the world. Just stop to think. It is what we are all striving for in the long run. Everything we do, we are doing it to bring greater happiness. Explain the situation to your parents. It is hard to believe that a mother can be so selfish as to expect you to sacrifice your life and happiness to obtain more wealth, though I can see her unselfish motive in thinking that money will bring that happiness to you. I am glad to see that your views are different, and stick to them.

Dear Mrs. Branty: I want to tell you all about how discontented I am. Do you ever get to feel that way? Gee it's awful. Nothing pleases you, and you just don't know what you want, or why you want it. It seems that I get regular sidges of this malady called discontent. For a few days I am at the zenith of contentment, and then I descend to the lowest depths of despair for no particular reason that I can see. It just happens that's all. I go to bed feeling perfectly happy, and perhaps in the morning when I awake, I am all wrong with the world again. What can I do in case like that? When I stop to think of the matter, I see how foolish I am, and try to throw off all the moments of sorrow, but that is well nigh impossible. I wish you would tell me what to do. I was going to write to you before, but thought you would only laugh at me, but I am so downcast right now, that it wouldn't make much difference. I hope you will answer this in the next issue of the Reporter. I live in Chicago, and am a floorwalker in a Department store. Sometimes I think that it is because I haven't enough to do that I get feeling this way. It isn't lonesomeness because my home is here, and I have lots of friends to chum around with, in my days of mlrh.

Yours is a strange case alright Hank, I admit, but there never was one so strange yet that we couldn't find a remedy for. There must be some cause for your periods of discontent. Hank, and let's get to the bottom of your situation and learn that. I am sure that you are not in love. You didn't mention any such emotions in your letter, but when I read between the lines, that thought suggests itself to me. You must get your hobby, and tastes. When you don't just feel right with the world, it sometimes helps to follow along to indulge in something a little more extra than usual, even if it is something to satisfy the cravings of an appetite, or some amusement that pleases. I find that lots of women are put in the good mood again by requesting an opera. You would best be able to judge the entertainment for yourself.

Hank, if you haven't enough on your mind, get busy right now. Why don't you read more of the kind of reading that will give you something to think about. If you are interested in further education, it might be well to attend night school for a time. There's just a host of things you can do. Then there's that little word called backbone, we see lots of examples of people who lack it, you have observed them too. Put your foot down, when you feel discontented, and tell yourself that you're just the luckiest man a livin' and be glad of it. There's a little game you can play, called the "chick" game. Everyday do something to be glad about, and pretty soon, you won't have to look for those somethings. You will just naturally appreciate the things you have. Let's hear from you again Hank, and lots of luck.

FISHING IN STREAMS

Jury in Lake County Case Decided River Navigable. The jury in the trespass case brought by Frank Collins, of Toledo, a Lake county land owner, against Gideon Gearhardt, the Reed City, trout fisherman, decided Tuesday that the Pine river in Lake county is navigable that Gearhardt was not a trespasser. The case in the last analysis hung solely on the question of the river's navigability because Gearhardt's lawyers, in their final arguments, abandoned all other theories of defense.

The jury having determined that the Pine river is navigable, it remains for the judge to decide on the constitutionality of the 1891 statute which provides that navigable private waters planted by the state are public waters for the purpose of angling. He has to take the case under assessment. From the legal standpoint, the case was two cases in one.

The battery of attorneys for Gearhardt was seeking to show that the Pine river is navigable, that the sector Collins owns was a logging water way and in the old days it was used to carry virgin pine and hemlock to the downstream mill. Under a statute passed in 1891 it is made allowable for the citizens to fish in all navigable waters. This law has not been overturned and so if it is proved that the Pine is navigable, it would appear that Gearhardt is safe under the statute. But Collins' attorney's intend to contest the statute's constitutionality on the grounds that it permits confiscation of property (brook trout) without due process of law.

The other phase of the case is concerned with the question: "Can the owner of the bed of a stream—whether navigable or not—solicit trout fry, raised at public expense, and then make the trout private property by invoking the rule of trespass?"

TO SAVE TROUT

If John Baird, director of conservation in Michigan, is to have his way trout fishing will be a thing of the past for a time at least. According to a report given to the State Conservation Commission by that official, included in the report are the following suggestions: All trout streams are to be closed. Small mouth bass would also benefit according to Baird's report. The length at which these fish may be taken from the water would be increased from 10 to 12 inches and the limit would be five instead of ten. Still another suggestion would prohibit trolling in a motor boat in the inland lakes. Baird also urges a closed season on pheasant for five years in the upper peninsula.

And his blood ran icy cold;
Then the feeling monster answered,
"Don't you recognize me now?"

STATE, COUNTY TAX HIGHER. BUT ROAD TAX LOWER

(Continued from Page One) McNally to amend the road item to four mills. This was defeated by a vote of 14 to 13 after a heated debate. Another compromise amendment moved by Supervisor Rose to make it three and a half mills also lost by the same vote, the roll call on both being for the larger amount. Genesee, Green, Gustafson, Kasten, LaBelle, Lundgaard, Matson, McNally, Nordham, Peterson, Robert, Rose and Hanrahan Against, Bruce, Burns, Bushong, Cameron, Hall, Hawkins, Jacobs, Johnson, Judson, Kessler, Mickis, Miller, Norden and Shepeck.

Allow $5,000 for Parks Supervisor Judson started a move to eliminate the $5,000 appropriated for county parks but this was withdrawn after considerable discussion. Another counter move to strike out from the budget all donations except for charitable purposes was initiated by Supervisor Rose, and this was voted down, 15 to 13. This would have eliminated the $1500 appropriated for the Development Bureau.

The board appropriated another $5,000 for the maintenance and acquisition of county parks. Supervisor Nordham of the Park Commission announced that John A. Semer had withdrawn his offer to sell a site on the Ford River road south of Escanaba for the sum of $10,000. This had been met with considerable discussion from those who believed the price asked was unreasonable. Another offer has been submitted to the board by the I. Stephenson company of Wells offering the site north of the Escanaba river near the Soo Line railroad bridge for $11,700. There are 95 acres in this tract. No action was taken or recommendations made.

The bounty on wolves was left at $10 for next year and $1,000 was appropriated for this fund.

To Audit Justice Accounts

The auditing committee was instructed to engage auditors to audit the books of all justices of the peace doing county work. Supervisor Bruce informed the board that no audit had been made for seven years, not since the one initiated by former Supervisor Carl Mason of Gladstone. The audit will go back to the length of the bonds under which the justices are held.

Dr. Cutton of Escanaba was reappointed as trustee of the sanatorium at Powers and J. A. Kenny was reappointed as county school commissioner.

Built New Nurseries Home A report from the trustees of the Powers sanatorium revealed the very fine work that is being done there. The report showed that a nurses' home had been built at a cost of $25,000 and had been paid for the first year. The income from paid patients amounted to over $14,000, the report showed and Mr. Clark, one of the trustees also appeared before the board to explain how an act passed by the last legislature would raise the state aid from $6,000 to $15,000 a year. This act was passed through the efforts of Mr. Clark and Dr. Sawbridge of Stephenson.

The board allowed a bill for $109.99 presented by Mr. Jaeger, a farmer in Ford River township, for loss of pigs bitten by a mad dog. Affidavits were presented from a veterinarian, to the effect that the pigs had died as the result of the dog bite.

DEFEAT PROPOSAL TO CHANGE PLAN FOR POOR RELIEF (Continued from Page One) time as the suggested savings were tried out under the present township unit system. Supervisor I. N. Bushong was defeated for loss of pigs bitten by a mad dog. Affidavits were presented from a veterinarian, to the effect that the pigs had died as the result of the dog bite.

Supervisors McNally of Garden and Judson of Escanaba spoke urging that the change be tried, while Supervisor Hawkins of Gladstone asked that action be deferred for another year. Supervisor Jacobs asked that action be taken at this meeting but when Supervisor Matson of Gladstone made a motion to defer action until the next October meeting the vote was 15 to 11 in favor of the delay, the following supervisors voting for a postponement of action: Bruce, Bushong, Cameron, Green, Gustafson, Hawkins, Johnson, Kasten, Lundgaard, Matson, Mickis, Miller, Norden, Robert and Shepeck. Those against deferred action were:

Burns, Genesee, Jacobs, Judson, Kessler, LaBelle, Nordham, Peterson, Rose and Hanrahan. Supervisor Hat of Maple Ridge did not vote. After the adjournment of the meeting late Tuesday afternoon, Mr. Hanrahan again brought out the county system subject, and it led to a discussion that may have opened the way for agreement at the next annual meeting. He admitted for the first time that Escanaba would receive the greatest benefit and this seemed to take well with some of the other supervisors. Mr. Bushong in talking on the subject declared that what would prove a help to Escanaba, would help the county, as the county seat was the hub of the county. He made plain that he had not voted for a deferment because he was adverse to help Escanaba, but rather because he had not been made to see how the new plan could have been made to work efficiently without a good organization to back it up.

Too Much Politics Mr. Miller of Rapid River gave what was probably the best explanation of the attitude of the township supervisors. He stated that there had been too much of the political element that had entered into the distribution of county poor aid, that a county superintendent who must act under an official subject to the votes of the electors. Supervisor Helmer Bruce, an old member of the board, and an outstanding member in ability through those years, took the position even at the last that he did not believe the county would have been saved any money under the change. Declaring that every time something new had been tried it resulted in additional expense as reflected in a higher county budget. It was his honest opinion that if savings were to be made, these could be effected under the present system.

SNOW REMOVAL At the request of Highway Commissioner Frank Rogers the state administrative board on Tuesday set aside $140,000 for snow removal work during the winter of 1926-7. The money was made available in advance, to allow purchases of material.

According to Mr. Rogers the department has sufficient funds to combat the snow on the highways this winter. Last year approximately $125,000 was spent. Will any of this work be done north of the straits?

ANOTHER FLIER IN KALISHEK FAMILY

Miss Isabel Kalishek stopped in the office the other day and in the course of our conversation had an about her best: flying flier. Miss Kalishek is the younger sister of Babe Kalishek, well known in these parts for daring deeds. Miss Kalishek is seven years of age, and started her career in the flying world two months ago. She arrived Friday from Fondulac, Wis., with her brother Clifford who is also an expert this time. They are spending the week at the home of their mother, Mrs. Mary Bellica at West Gladstone. They expect to leave next week for Florida to continue their work.

Miss Kalishek appeared to possess a very daring nature, and mentioned her fearlessness in telling of her experiences. She gave her first exhibition two months ago, and performed before a crowd, the first time she attempted to reproduce the stunts of her sister, whom she had seen in action. Since that time she has had several exhibitions. Her first motor Derby company, performed throughout Wisconsin. Her brother does parachute jumping. She has also taken part in Push ball performances, using Polo cars.

"I'm going to try motor cycle racing next," Miss Kalishek exclaimed, and was surprised at any amazement that she should tackle such.

Six spirited and original numbers were presented by the company. Their musical talent was outstanding. The Marimba is an instrument which has been in use for centuries among the native tribes of Central America, and the work of these artists, seemed to carry the audience to these regions so typical was it of their native land.

This organization has gained international fame. Its numbers were very well received, by the throng of music lovers who attended.

The sale of tickets is continuing under the direction of the Misses Helen LaFaver and Georgia Zinc who lead the two Senior teams in charge of the Course.

The next number will be given by Edna Means on December 1. It is hoped that a still larger crowd will attend and avail themselves of this opportunity for real worthwhile and educational entertainment.

SYNOPSIS

CHAPTER I.—With David, half-breed, Heron Steele, of the American Museum of Natural History, on his way to northern Canada, by a strange canoe, St. Onge, factor at Walling River, introduces himself and accepts an invitation to make a short stay during his stay. From St. Onge he learns the "Windigo," and the disappearance of a canoe and crew, with the season's take of furs.

When Steele rejoined his business he found at once. He even had a suspicion that she appeared his changed appearance. At the thought, something like a thrill swept him—he followed by a spray of annoyance. He had not seen an attractive woman in months and was paying the penalty. Yet, as he watched her pour the tea while her father displayed cartoon after cartoon, a quality—rare then more common—, an evident flashes of fire, a save of personality in this factor's daughter, which meant she and background—inspired in itself upon him, and a strong curiosity to know the history of these people whom he had stumbled upon in the bad-lands south of the Albany. He learns the cause of the fear and heart-ache which this lonely girl had so poignantly revealed in the gorge, some weeks before.

"You are collecting Indian relics and utensils for the American museum?" asked the Frenchman. "You are an ethnologist?"

"Yes, I have been in the field four years for the museum."

"You have found much of interest?" "Last year and this summer, I shipped by Hudson's Bay canoe considerable stuff from Fort Hope and Henley House. Lake Makahabeton on the Albany has some remarkable burial places, unlike anything I've seen. And the Ojibways up there are still very wild and superstitious—medicine men, secreters, feet of spirits and the Windigo, and all that."

"The factor paused, fork in air. Slowly he replaced it on his plate, un- touched; then asked:

"You have never been in this valley before?"

"No," replied Steele, paused at his host's tense manner, "but what I heard on the Albany interested me. It seems to be Windigo country among the Albany Ojibways—under a sort of taboo. It must be a terrible handicap to your trade, although the very fact that you're here proves that it is not generally considered hand-icapped country by the Indians."

"The features of St. Onge stiffened. With a glance at his daughter who watched him with parted lips and wide eyes, as though fearful of what he was about to say, he replied bit- tingly:

"That is our problem, monsieur. The company rarely sends a post on this river which, for a hundred miles below the rapids here, is to the Ojib- ways a place of spirits; then sends me here to get the fur of the upper country. At Albany, they laugh at this talk of Windigo and spirit keep- ing the Indians from trading here. They even order me to send hunters to trap the valley below us—when they have already tried for generations."

"They only betray their ignorance by heilting Indian superstitions, sir. I was followed and shot at on the Albany this summer for photographing some Ojibway children. They be- lieved the lens was an evil eye and that the children would be be- witched."

"But they missed you!" laughed the Frenchman. "Yes! Our inspector, Monsieur Lancelles, in his desire to get fur ignores the conditions here entirely."

At the mention of the name Lan- celles, Steele sensed a swift change in Denise St. Onge. His curious eyes caught a faint color in the girl's temples as she avoided his glance. In a moment she had control of herself but he wondered if this then was the cause of her hesitance.

"My position is very difficult, you see," continued St. Onge. "Lafamme controls the upper country with his whisky. We get considerable Little Current and DeWaring River trade, but Michel and I have to meet them with our goods over at Portage Lake. There are many who fear to come to the House of the Windigo on the Spirit rapids, as they call it."

"Stranger your people it Albany fail to realize this?"

"Why, my Indians, except Michel, who is a hard-headed troiquois from the Nipissing and laughs at this devil talk, will not now go into the bush alone. They are always seeing and hearing things. Our hunter, Tele- boule, refuses to leave the post since he found some prodigious tracks in the woods and heard screaming at night. Moreover, our people are pan- ic."

in Michel, monsieur. He is more than my right hand here."

"Yes, he looks like a good man. Did you notice David's clothing? Deesle's face lighted as he mentioned the swiftly canoe."

"He seemed most intelligent," replied St. Onge, "and took a canoe which could pack four hundred over a portage if he wished."

"He can canoe!" Then Steele gazed with his host's curiosity. "What worries me is how to keep him from wringing Lafamme's neck when we reach Ojibway and, aside from getting supplies, we wish to stop at Ojibway, Colonel St. Onge."

The factor was palpably interested. His narrowed eyes seemed to search those of his guest in an endeavor to read his thoughts. Then, leaning for- ward, allows on table, he asked timidly:

"I am sorry, but that is David's secret."

"Oh, I see! It is right then, that you do not tell. But I am curious, monsieur, for today when he reached here, he asked at once how many days' travel it was to Ojibway lake."

"That St. Onge should be so inter- ested in the man, who, by the use of whisky, was winning the fur trade of the whole Indian country of the Walling, was natural, but the observ- ant Steele sensed more to the story than mere trade rivalry, in the at- titude of the factor. However, he dropped the subject and returned to the lost canoe."

"It is by far the strangest case I have heard of—four men in loaded canoe, wiped out without leaving a scrap of birchbark or a silver of spruce as a clue, and a wonderful opportunity for the study of this Windigo superstition at first hand."

"Eighteen thousand dollars in fur!" sighed the factor, whose face was drawn and old, as they left the table.

CHAPTER II

"Will you come with me to the trade-house, monsieur?" For a time his daughter will be busy with the dishes. Then we shall have some music, Denise?"

"If you wish," and addressing Steele she added anxiously: "It will be gay music tonight, monsieur, I promise you—in honor of your arrival at the House of the Windigo."

"But I like your sad music, mado- moiselle," he said, "and I am clever at washing dishes, if I could be of service."

There was challenge in her black eyes as she countered: "Ah, monsieur, but you are more clever, I fear, at con- cealing your thoughts."

As he walked with the factor to the trade-house he wondered precisely to what she had alluded.

St. Onge was writing a lengthy re- port of the situation at Walling River, to his chief at Albany, three hundred miles downstream, so Steele joined David and Michel, who were sitting on the porch, smoking the ten- topper pipes. In front of the Indian shack a group of shawled women talked in hushed voices. Next them, three men, squatted on their heels, Indian fashion, conversed heads to- gether. No shrill shouts broke the quiet. Even the play the Indian children seemed suppressed. Truly, thought Steele, St. Onge had not exaggerated. The air hung heavy with dread. Of the fabled Windigo had wrought its spell. At this rate it would not be long before the foxes would bark in the clearing of the abandoned post—before padded feet would rumble at will in what was now a house. And the girl up there—what would become of her?

"Well, David, has Michel told you of the fur canoe?" demanded Steele. David's broad face wrinkled in a grin. Taking his pipe from his mouth, he spat deliberately before he an- swered with another question.

"How long we stop here?"

"I don't know. Why?" Steele was interested.

"Well, Michel an' Daveed like to drop down to de big strong water. We strike back in seven-eight sleep, maybe."

"What's your idea? It's not just to make another search on a mere chance of finding something. There's something else cooking under that black bat of yours."

But David was noncommittal. "We talk a look at de las' camp fur canoe made, and shore below, for little piece."

Steele was secretly delighted at the excuse this expedition of David's would give him for prolonging indefi- nitely his stay at Walling River. As a student of Indian mythology and worship of the supernatural, the prob- ing of this mystery—the study of its effect on the post Indians—demanded his best efforts. It was a rare opportunity for an ethnologist, a student of folklore, to father data at first hand. But over and beyond that was the riddle of this girl whose hands of an ar- tist were now busy with the dishes up there in the factor's house.

"But what do you expect to find, Michel? There have been two canoes over the ground. The Windigo have swallowed canoe, fur and man."

The small eyes of the Indian snapped. "Daveed and Michel native see M'sieu Windigo. We lak to hav' look at leen. Tee-fo-que, with a gen- uine tovid the three men grouped in front of the shack, he bear Windigo one, two, many man. He in' track canoe number one' heop. But he hav' fear to tak Michel to de track. Maybe down on de big rapids, Daveed an' Michel shake an' sell de Windigo. Maybe he do but he is leav'ing—de an' feed hem—some dead. And the subtle hand, while the bare features of the Indian set stiff with hate.

"Ah, ha!" thought Steele. "These two old boys have got something in their heads."

But knowing his people, he did not press them for an explanation. Later, alone with David, he would be told. So he filled his pipe and sat down. Michel, he asked, "why did the Indian factor build this place at the head of these rapids instead of up at Ojibway lake where they could back Lafamme, face to face, for the trading of the whole country?"

For a space Michel smoked, ignor- ing the question; then he grunted through the stem of his pipe:

"You see M'sieu Lancelles at Al- bany?"

"No, I stopped with the Hudson's Bay people. Why?"

"What, see you see M'sieu Lancelles maybe you know why," was the reply. "Where were you before you came here?" asked Steele.

"This Albany?"

"You know him, then. But he can't be a good fur man to build here—in the bad-lands, at these Spirit rapids of the whole country?"

"The man who build does not fool; he not keep set for fur—he keep set for 'noder reason." After which startling statement Michel became a sphinx to Steele's further questioning.

More than ever mystified by what he had heard, he left the men on the river shore, and rejoined his host.

In the warm candle light of the factor's quarters Steele soon lost himself in the playing of Denise St. Onge. There was no trace of the troubled eyes of the reserve of the girl who had sat mute through the evening meal, listening to the talk of the men in the gay creature who now conversed with her violin mad dances of the Polish and Hungarian peasants, love songs of Italy, French and German

"It is superb, madoiselle—you're playing," he cried impulsively, "you have appeared, professionally, of course, in France?"

She shook her head, wistfully. "At the Conservatoire they had planned for me—a career, but father was con- sidered to be Canada—and I could not have him come—alone."

"She was the favorite pupil of the great Alady," murmured St. Onge, proudly, "but her love for her old fa- ther could not suffer a separation, so she is sharing with me—" the French- man roared and nervously paced the room, then, with gesture of a dog's nervous fidget, the loneliness and the—hell of this spirit-ridden valley."

Steele's eyes were on the fine profile of the girl as she followed her father's nervous pacing. Frankly ignoring his presence, she made no effort to conceal the solitude pictured by her sensitive face. What a crisis she had made! To give up career, life—all that people, cities, civilization meant to the artist—how could St. Onge have permitted it? What a tragedy he had stumbled on at Walling River!

"I've told David he could go down the river with the foxes, but Steele hastened to change a few painful sub- ject."

"They will find nothing, monsieur."

"Has Michel told you exactly what they are going to look for, Colonel St. Onge?"

The factor stopped his pacing. "Why what is there to seek, monsieur, except the evidence which we are op- portuned to?"

"Based on a familiarity with the way David's mind works, coupled with an idea of my own, my guess is that they will not spend much time follow- ing the shore."

"Steele's black eyebrows lifted in surprise. "What do you mean; they are going into the back country?"

"Precisely," he replied.

"To find a trail?"

"A trail—through the muskeg? But they couldn't get out that way. A St. Onge's black?"

"That's what puzzles me, colonel."

"Oh, you are wrong! My men never stole that fur. We shall find some- thing yet for to prove they were broken up in the big rapids—"

Relieve Headaches? Certainly!

A question we frequently hear is "What can you do for my headache." The answer is—"We can relieve it in almost every case, and most times very quickly." How quickly depends upon how serious the condition which causes the headache.

For the fact is that a headache cannot exist by itself. It is a symptom of a deeper trouble, and its cause must be removed before you are safe from a recurrence. That cause may be from the eyes, liver, kidneys, stomach, or intestines.

Wherever it be, it is in itself an effect of imperfect nerve transmission due to spinal pressure on nerves. It is the work of the Chiropractor to locate and remove such pressure. Those who have taken his adjustments will tell you that he does this, very successfully.

THIRTY YEARS OF HEADACHES

"As a child I had suffered with sick headaches and in later years they grew more frequent. I took bottle after bottle of aspirin tablets. The time came when they did no good, so I had to have a doctor and take a hypodermic. I was filled with poison from taking so much dope and grew so nervous I could not sleep. I began taking adjustments and gradually grew better; got better control of my nerves and slept all night. The headaches grew farther apart. Now, I have not had a headache for three months and am feeling better in every way than I have for years."—Mrs. A. R. Lang, Chiropractic Research Bureau, Statement No. 2092-8.

SCHOLARLY SQUIBBLES

IF For a boy at school. (with apologies to Kipling). By P. R. Hayward.

If you can keep your books when all about you. Are losing theirs and blaming it on you. If you can work, although your fellows flout you. And make allowance for their languor, too. If you can do the square thing by your teacher. Nor ever keep your eyes upon the prize. And, when you're praised, not call yourself a preacher. Nor ever talk too smooth, nor look too wise.

If you can learn, and not make facts your master. If you can shine—nor make success your aim. If, when your castle falls in grim disaster. You build it up, and plod on just the same: If you can see the fellow who has cheated. Stand well above you when the term is done. And never hint you have been mistreated. But let the Future say which of you won.

If you say no, when others may invite you. To help them at exam time on the sly. Nor even let their threatened anger fright you. If you can look your teacher in the eye If you can leave your game when study calls you; If you can leave your lessons for your play. GLAD HE PICKED THIS GOOD STOMACH REMEDY

Put a Stomach in Fine Condition—Ends Dizzy Spells, Catarrh and Makes You Sleep Well.

Indolent eating causes acute indigestion, gas, heartburn, heaviness and sour stomach—sometimes the distended stomach causes that dreadful feeling of near suffocation. Isn't it worth something to know of a remedy that will stop this distress in a few minutes—quicker than anything else you can think of. This is no common stomach remedy for it took years of time to combine Pepsin with the other effective agents that make Dare's Mentha-Pepsin so good that the worst indigestion and gastritis and other chronic stomach ailments are speedily overcome and the most deranged stomachs are made clean, strong and healthy. Mr. Calvin Dilks of Alloway, N.J., a man of few words, knows this for he writes: "I entirely rid myself of an old catarrhal condition of the stomach with Dare's Mentha-Pepsin." No matter what your stomach trouble is get a bottle today at G. F. DeHlin or any druggist anywhere, with the distinct understanding that if it doesn't do you the world of good your money will be returned.

LOCAL GIRL BRIDE OF ESCANABA MAN

MISS SCHUSTARICH AND JOHN BARTEL IN PRETTY WEDDING CELEBRATION

A wedding of unspeakable beauty was that celebrated at the All Saints Catholic church Monday morning when Miss Gertrude Schustarich daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Schustarich of Michigan avenue, became the bride of John Bartel, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Bartel, of Escanaba.

The ceremony was performed by the Rev. E. Malar at a nuptial high mass celebrated at 7:15 o'clock.

The bride entered the church on the arm of her father, John Schustarich, with Miss Evelyn Johnson, playing Lohengrin's wedding march. At the foot of the altar they were met by the attendants who joined them from the Sacristy. Miss Ruth Weingartner was bridesmaid, with Miss Mary Bartel of Escanaba, a sister of the groom, as maid of honor. The attendants of the groom were George Weingartner of Rock and Tony Vogel of Escanaba a close friend of the groom.

They ascended the steps to the Sanctuary where the ceremony was performed with little Betty Lois Johnson, a cousin of the bride, strewing flowers before them.

Miss Schustarich presented a picture of beauty garbed in white bridal satin, with two baskets, one forming a corsage at one side, and the other on a side flare of the skirt embroidered in pearls and brilliants. She wore a train of silk net and satin fastened at the shoulder with clusters of brilliants. A bridal veil was arranged coronation fashion caught with pearls, and richly embroidered. Miss Schustarich carried an ivory prayer book which was among her wedding gifts. From it hung baby heading, and small streamers of satin ribbon.

Her bridesmaid, Miss Ruth Weingartner, looked charming in Nile green seersucker crepe, heavily beaded. She carried a basket of roses. The maid of honor, Miss Mary Bartel, wore a pretty gown of cuckoo tan satin, and carried American Beauty roses. The flower girl, Betty Lois Johnson, wore a beautiful little dress of delicate pink, with a wreath of wax orange blossoms. She carried an ivory basket of blossoms which she strewed before the bridal party. She also acted as ring bearer, presenting the ring on a white

A shower of rice greeted the bride and groom as they descended the steps of the church, after receiving congratulations from their many friends who were present at the ceremony.

A wedding breakfast was served at the Delta Hotel of Escanaba at 9:30 o'clock with plates laid for thirty, relatives and members of the bridal party. The table was elaborately decorated in pink and yellow chrysanthemum. The meal was served in six courses.

WHAT OTHERS ARE THINKING

OUR MISTAKE

In last weeks issue we quoted Addison Algulis as stating that 75 per cent of the people of the U. S. were illiterate. His statement was that 24 per cent of the people in the United Peninsula were in this class.

WHAT IS YOUR ATTITUDE TO WARD THE PRESENT MEANS OF PREVENTING FOREST FIRES?

EWALD ERICKSON
In my opinion, the present means of stopping forest fires are along the right line, only they don't go far enough. The signs that we see all over are good reminders. "Everybody loses when timber burns" and the like, are to the point, and make the passing motorist stop and think of just how a forest fire really affects him.

Carelessness is the recognized cause. A person can't realize the far reaching effects of throwing a cigarette stub into a pile of dry leaves and brush. One thing sure about forest fires are going fast, and they'll soon be a minus quantity if the situation is not met in some way.

I think we should get at the source of the fire. One hundred per cent fire departments can't command the situation. It's up to the people in general to each do their share. When carelessness is at the bottom of it, we ought to be able to stop the hazard of forest fires.

NOBLE SWENSON

My idea in regard to the prevention of forest fires is that they should clear the under brush when timber is cut. Cutting down trees and leaving the brush and dry stuff there makes a perfect fire trap, that should be gotten away with. Mr. Pinchot, head of the National Reforestation Department holds this view, and is making all efforts to get a law through providing for the compulsory disposal of this brush. This is the only solution of the problem. Get rid of the cause of the fires. It is a recognized fact that the blazes start in the underbrush. I think the time is not far off when such a law will have been passed and our fires will be less frequent.

As time goes on more and more is being done to aid in fire prevention. The fire towers now in use help a great deal in locating the blazes and sending aid.

CHARLES GREEN

The only way, forest fires could be prevented would be to station persons at certain intervals to use a rifle on the gully rype. I think the signs we see along the highways are better than anything else, although the situation is not being handled correctly. There's too many people just naturally careless. They have no regard for anyone's property, and much less for the great open spaces. They throw their matches, cigarette and cigar stubs out without a thought of fire, and furthermore, when the matter is brought to their attention, they don't care. These are the folks to get hold of, and make them mark time. When they throw off their carelessness, then we'll have forests.

R. E. OLSON

Fire towers are helping lots at the present time in the locating of forest fires and getting them in control before they have wrought their damage. Further steps should be taken to prevent these blazes that are destroying our timber land. We all know the situation exists, but the average individual just goes on leaving the action in the problem to be taken by someone else. One can't realize the results of throwing one match to the winds. One sign that we see along the roads a lot is "Break your match." I think it is exceptionally good. If motorists would get in the habit of breaking their lighted matches, we would certainly be reducing forest fires.
