

RECORDED

PREDICTS BRIGHT DAIRYING FUTURE

DENNISON SAYS U. P. WILL PROSPER AS SOON AS BETTER COWS ARE USED

That there is a bright future in the dairying industry and that the upper peninsula, and Delta county in particular, will make rapid strides as soon as the need for better cows is recognized, was the message of H. E. Dennison, field representative for the National Jersey Association, speaking Wednesday night before members of the Gladstone City Club at the monthly meeting held at the Fisher hotel. Another new high mark was set for attendance, about 60 of the 67 members being present.

Must Rise Production
"Delta county now has in round figures 7,000 cows producing an average of 150 pounds of butterfat annually," said Mr. Dennison. "This means a business of approximately $900,000 a year for your county, a sum which you can readily recognize means considerable to your county. But if the average production of each cow could be bettered by feeding and better breeding, be raised to 200 pounds annually, the dairying revenue for your county would be increased by $150,000. Likewise if the average production could be increased to 300 pounds, the business would come within the $1,000,000 mark, without great increase in the production costs."

"The cow that produces 150 pounds of butterfat just about pays for its keep. Two-thirds of the 7,000 cows in your county are doing less than pay for their keep, the other one-third pay a profit. The need then, as you can see, is to eliminate the losers and by better breeding and better feeding, improve the production. This is being done by those who are farming intelligently, and they are the ones making money."

Calf Club Important
Mr. Dennison told of the formation of boys and girl clubs as a means of educating the next generation. He told of many counties in this state and in others where the formation of a single club had paved the way to the development of dairying sections, which have since prospered to a point undreamed of just two or three years before such encouragement was extended.

Joe Turner of Escanaba, county agricultural agent, spoke briefly before Mr. Dennison. He explained what his work was, how it was divided into projects, such as crops, poultry, dairying. All such work must necessarily be extended over a period of years, but as an example of results obtained, Mr. Turner stated that five years ago Delta county showed a planting of 22 acres of alfalfa hay. A campaign to demonstrate the value and importance of this crop was not on at that time, and as a result figures for last year show that over 3,000 acres were planted to that crop, producing better profits for the farmer.

H. J. Norton, president of the club, presided at the meeting and expressed himself deeply gratified at the fine attendance and great interest being shown in the work of the club.

August Goodman will return Friday from Trout Lake where he has spent the week on business.

DEATH OF DAUGHTER FOLLOWS THAT OF FATHER, NELS CORSMEN

Funeral services were held Monday afternoon for Mrs. Cecil Gelzer, 42, daughter of Mrs. Carrie Corsem, who died Wednesday night, March 28th at her home at Port Arthur, Canada. Gladstone friends were saddened to hear of her death, coming within only two months after that of her father, Nels Corsem, prominent contractor and builder here. Who remembers this distinguished looking statesman? Well, he isn't a statesman, but he is one of Gladstone's most distinguished citizens, as he appeared some years back. The reader must guess the name as well as the name.

ELECTION SET FOR MAY 15 AS WAS EXPECTED

MURPHY AND PETERSON ARE RE-ELECTED WITHOUT OPPOSITION

In one of the quietest elections witnessed in Gladstone in many a year, James H. Murphy and Peter Peterson were re-elected for their second three-year terms as members of the Gladstone City Commission.

With no competition for the city offices, and only one candidate entered in the presidential primary held primary by each of the two major parties, there was no great interest in the outcome and the 350 who cast their ballots did so largely as a compliment to their candidates, Commissioners Murphy received 290 votes and Commissioner Peterson 281.

Herbert Hoover received 189 votes in the Republican presidential primary, a small vote for that party, while Gov. Al Smith of New York was given 131 votes as the Democratic preference, perhaps more Democratic votes cast here since the election six years ago of the late Woodbridge N. Ferriss as United States Senator.

Commissioners Thank Voters
Commissioners Murphy and Peterson expressed themselves as deeply appreciative of the fine support extended them.

"We want to thank the voters who went to the polls," they declared, "and in that way made us feel that our service on the city commission had met with their approval. We shall continue to devote our best thoughts to the proper discharge of the duties of a public officer."

He entered the service of the Soo Line in 1912 as operator at telegraph operator. He worked at various stations as operator until 1920 when he was promoted to chief dispatcher in this city.

The office of chief dispatcher is being temporarily filled by Harry Erickson. Definite appointment will be made in about two weeks.

Mrs. Koblikska and little son are still here, but expect to leave next week to join Mr. Koblikska in making their home in Escanaba.

LITTLE NANCY ALQUIRE RUN DOWN BY AUTOMOBILE

Little Nancy Alquire, 4-year old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Addison Alquire, Minneapolis avenue, was struck and knocked to the pavement at the corner of Delta and Wisconsin avenues Monday night by a car driven by Guy Brunette. The little girl was run over and carried to the office of Dr. Miller by Mr. Brunette, where it was found that she suffered from a bruised face and badly shaken body, and the next day an X-ray happily disclosed that she had not suffered any internal injuries.

Onlookers were agreed that no blame be attached to the driver. He had just started from the Central Auto company garage, when little Nancy ran across the path of the car, and was struck by the right front fender. Mrs. Alquire was on Wisconsin avenue approaching Central from the west, little Nancy and Helen, 6 years old, by her side. As they approached Central, Helen started running across and Nancy tried to follow before the mother could restrain her. The accident followed, but fortunately it did not prove more serious than painful injuries.

Einar and Loyal Found Their Opportunity In The Home Town

Einar Olson, and Loyal Hanson, are examples of young men who have succeeded in the home town. Usually the city is held out to youth as the land of golden opportunity, but these young men preferred to stay in the town of their boyhood, and seek their "golden opportunity."

They opened their Mens' Clothing store at 712 Delta avenue August 13, 1925. Starting in with a small stock, they have added to it regularly, and their business has shown gains each year.

Mr. Olson is a graduate of Gladstone High School with the class of 1917. He worked at the Gladstone State Savings Bank as bank clerk and teller for three years and that business experience has been of great value to him.

In 1918 he enlisted in the service and spent two weeks at the Students Army Training Camp at Marquette. He returned to the work at the bank, and later went into the employ of Eloi Hanson.

Here too, he gained experience in dealing with the public. Loyal Hanson, partner in the business, was employed in his father's grocery store after attending High School, until entering the clothing business.

"I had always planned to enter some kind of business," Mr. Olson said. "Even as a small boy I decided business to be my vocation." When the opportunity presented itself, he saw the rule of their business, and we're not satisfied until our customers are," Mr. Olson often says, and they back it up by a willingness to refund the value of the article, or replace it if anyone is not perfectly satisfied. That has been the rule of their business since they had many cases of customers pleased with the excep-

VIOLA FOSTER NOW ACCOMPLISHED ORGANIST

Miss Viola Foster will return to Gladstone this week, after spending several months in Chicago for the purpose of studying the playing of the organ. She studied under Melgard, instructor of Jesse Crawford and other nationally famous artists, and has been pronounced an apt pupil, one who combines in her playing the most desirable features looked for in theater organists.

Miss Foster will make her first appearance in Gladstone at the Sunday matinee at the Rialto, where she has been engaged to play again. Miss Foster was formerly pianist at the theater and after the installation of the Barton organ decided to take up a special course of instruction in the playing of that instrument. She is assured a hearty welcome.

Glimmer Biers, who has been organist at the Rialto for the past several weeks, will return to Iron Mountain to play at the reopening of the Colonial theater there.

PRIMARY SCHOOL PLAN KILLED

SUPREME COURT RULES THAT AID FOR POORER DISTRICTS IS UNCONSTITUTIONAL

Hope for some relief for school districts with heavy tax burdens to maintain their educational institutions went with the ruling of the Michigan Supreme Court, announced on Tuesday, to the effect that the plan for special distribution of a portion of the Primary School fund was unconstitutional. The Both law of 1925 provided for a distribution of five per cent of the fund to the school districts with low assessed valuation in proportion to the school population.

$1,000 Instead of $10,000. The plan was opposed by the Detroit board of Education and the five per cent of the fund was held up by Auditor General O. B. Fuller for the years 1926 and 1927, pending the court decision. This money will now be distributed in the regular way and will give the Gladstone schools slightly over $1,000 for each of the two years. The new plan would have brought Gladstone over $10,000, the difference being the extent of the aid which the change would have made available.

The Escanaba Chamber of Commerce initiated the campaign to help for the poorer school districts in 1922. The 1923 legislature bolted action at the last minute and it was again taken up at the 1925 session and was passed in a modified form. Attorney Allan Reese of Houghton and Attorney Glen W. Jackson cooperated with the State Attorney General's department in fighting for the constitutionality of the law before the Supreme Court. The case having been argued last week and the decision delayed because of the death of two justices of the court.

Need for Change Recognized
Since the campaign was started, there has been widespread sentiment developed favorable to providing some assistance to the school districts with high taxes and some effort may be devised to provide relief as a consequence of the work which has been done.

The state now determines the standard of the schools. To maintain this standard, some school districts must pay as high as $31 per thousand dollars of assessed valuation, while others do so with a tax rate as low as $5.00. Gladstone is among the districts with the highest taxed for school purposes the railroad property here paying to the state instead of directly to the city.

Twelve children were born to them, fourteen of whom are living. Alvin the oldest, is employed at Muskegon, and the others are living at the parental home.

Chats with The Editor

WITH no contest and no issues involved in Gladstone's election, Monday was a very quiet day and local voters must direct their attention elsewhere for topics of interest.

One of them, Frank N. Cookson, ran third and was re-elected by a scant plurality. Another, Charles Jackson who had been appointed to complete the term of Mayor Waddell who resigned rather than subscribe to the action taken by the council, was defeated and the biggest surprise was the defeat of Benjamin Gero.

This writer was among the outsiders to declare at the time of the trouble that it had been engendered by petty political considerations that reflected against the initiators, and Mr. Gero may safely be pointed out as the ringleader. His defeat indicates that he was acting contrary to public wishes and demands and should serve as a warning to the new administration.

Mr. Gero may have been sincere in his belief that Manistique would be best served by a change in city managers. His inference is such that he could easily have won the people over to his side had he been inclined to use a little political tact in the action to discharge the manager.

Manistique voters also settled the question relative to daylight saving time. This is of widespread interest as there are other towns and cities who either have or have wanted to make the change for this coming summer.

This writer in several visits to Manistique last summer sensed the dissatisfaction felt with the advance in time. It had created a condition whereby any matter connected with the use of time necessitates an explanation as to the kind of time indicated.

Another consideration in regards to any change in time deals with the effect upon the tourist trade. We must remember that every year they are coming in ever increasing numbers and their convenience must be considered in anything we might undertake.

Personally, this writer likes the idea of having an hour more of daylight at the end of each work day. It would suit our plans for the summer months to a nicety. But just because we like it is no reason why we would urge it upon the public, unless we could point out to which way it would be a benefit to the community as a whole.

ATLANTA, the county seat of Montmorency county will soon be without a bank, according to announcements by the stockholders of the existing institution. Residents will be compelled to travel a good many miles to deposit their savings and transact the countless other little items of business for which banks are so handy.

GOV. GREEN did have a difficult assignment, namely to name a United States Senator to succeed Woodbridge N. Ferris. And in appointing Arthur Vandenberg, Grand Rapids publisher, we believe he followed his own personal inclination after having had opportunity to consider the political advantages that might accrue to himself by the appointment of some other individual.

There is every reason to believe that the new Senator is highly qualified for the important job. The appointment gives his claim to preferred consideration in the primary of next September at which time candidates must run for the unexpired term of the former Senator, as well as for the full term to follow. If Senator Vandenberg can make an impression upon the public mind, something he has failed to do since announcing himself as a candidate, he should have no trouble in being elected, for the opposition will more than likely be divided.

THE Parent-Teacher Association is receiving fine support in its campaign to provide a children's playground in a central location. Many citizens have been aroused to a point where they declare the funds should be provided by a tax levy, because it is a project that is intended to benefit the entire city. This is not a surprising attitude, for it is based on a spirit of equity. But we would point out that the opportunity to provide the playground is a privilege that might well be subscribed to voluntarily, those so subscribing being thus enabled to derive satisfaction for a good deed well done.

It is always more satisfying to give voluntarily than to have to pay anything with that horrid designation—tax.

Gladstone--Present and Future

(Editor's Note--In reading these letters, it must be remembered all were written in response to a request on the streets, and also that several of the replies were received by Secy. Sahlberg of the City Club before other letters were given publicity. This to explain any similarity in the thoughts expressed.)

Gladstone, Mich., March 16, 1928

Mr. A. T. Sahlberg, Secy. Gladstone City Club, City

In reply to your letter of the 9th I feel that days of unwarranted boasting and unfounded expectancy have given way to sober reflection and conservative thinking. We are in an era of constructive development and steady upbuilding. Progress is slower perhaps but sturdier for the benefits of massed thinking and the favorable mental attitude of all the people are the factors that sway a community toward the upper level.

The Industrial Committee of which I was chairman gave considerable thought to the survey we were asked to make and while space makes it impossible to review it here we are optimistic that what we have now will undoubtedly remain indefinitely but that encouragement should be given to the smallest prospect that could give employment and distribute a pay roll or encourage expenditures that would maintain circulation of our money within our own community, not fighting outside distributors but endeavoring by a display of loyalty to home efforts to induce outsiders to locate their main plant or a branch here.

All citizens can contribute largely to our community upbuilding by their own act in thinking of Gladstone first and will thereby undoubtedly find numerous opportunities and merchants willing to cooperate in the proper spirit. It often seems to hear the remark "Why don't they do something?" or "Why don't the city do this or that," forgetting momentarily that "we" are "they" or we are the city.

You mention my apparent faith in the city as expressed in my house building and can only say that besides the desire I have also been influenced by hundreds of examples by others for I have always been impressed that Gladstone was a city of homes and in a city of homes must be a good place for anyone to build in such a manner that still others will be encouraged to do likewise. Many improvements have been made so gradually in the past few years that we hardly appreciate them until we take a review of the more recent activities.

Having visited a good many places and been in touch with dozens who have changed their abode I find few indeed who do not either return or at least agree that Gladstone holds a "warm spot" in their heart. Closer contact in a smaller community, sports friends when needed, loyalty of workers to employers and reciprocal consideration helps build the harmonious feeling so necessary.

Other letters undoubtedly will treat of the material resources and prospects while I have thought best to dwell upon the unseen assets which I will term the "Gladstone Spirit." Concentrating our efforts and working as a unit, speaking a good word that would encourage and interest others, building up the reputation we already have of being a fine town, will bring the hoped for results for if we think of a thing long enough and work with that thought in mind we usually find it to be a reality in the end. The future is in the hands of those already here and does not depend upon some mythical outside source to whom we are prone to look for help. An endeavor to maintain what we have and build further from within, encouraging outside prospective additions by united effort must have the good results the Club hopes for.

Sincerely, Jas. T. Jones

Copyright 1927, Warner Bros. Pictures, Inc. Dolores Costello in "OLD SAN FRANCISCO" is a Warner Bros. picture of this novel.

Synopsis Enrico de Salazar y Vasquez, priest and romantic Spaniard, claims in 1776 for King Phillip of Spain the land surrounding San Francisco Bay. The Vasquez hacienda is erected on the vast and beautiful acres overlooking the bay, and life moves along in the idyllic and carefree manner of Old Spain. In 1849 two grandsons and their mother are the last of the proud line. The discovery of gold disturbs their peaceful existence. The eldest grandson is cruelly slain.

CHAPTER II—Continued At the moment the young Don Hernandez gained the stable yard. His intense fury must have shown in his face because the soldiers suddenly spurred their stolen horses and galloped through the arch and away, leaving Stener to face the consequences of his own fatality. Stener realized he had gone too far to retreat. Oup look into the young white face staring at him across the bullet torn body was sufficient to urge action. Clumsily swinging into the saddle he headed for the open road, cocked pistol in hand. With only a few yards between them he fired at the last remaining son of the house of Vasquez. But his mouse shrieked and the deadly shot lodged in the earth. Laid with feet young Vasquez grabbed a laral from the belt of a corpse standing at a side and whirling it skillfully over head, let it sail through the interfering space, faster than a racing horse, until it settled around Captain Stener's body. Immediately he was jerked from the saddle and fell with a wounded thing to the ground.

Whirling laboriously, Vasquez pulled the body through the wreckage as his father's brother's wife and friend looking down upon the two men with his eyes were between one and hated. "You have killed a Vasquez! It was no longer a boy speaking. Stener closed his eyes and avoided the cold, steel expression of the captain's face, and a shiver of fear went through him when he found from under half closed lids, that young Vasquez bent over his brother's bleeding body and gently took the sword from his clenched fingers.

For a brief moment a spark of recognition came back into the dying man's eyes and a smile of understanding and love passed between them.

to his brother's more firm and lively, bowed in grief, with his hand pressed affectionately against his lifeless shoulder. "Gone!" he sobbed, and would have been standing by to avoid, unless crossed themselves. Their mother's soul had passed on to run his creation! One poor, slumped against the chapel and began sobbing with the ball ropes.

Stener Vasquez, with head bent, had watched the whole scene from the time her young son had, through the lens. She knew that her first born was dead. She watched with unflinching eyes while her last boy fought so valiantly to avenge their name. When the fight was over she calmly turned her eyes and laying a gentle hand on the living boy's head and bravely, "You have done well, my son—a Vasquez tear had been in her eyes, she looked beyond to their burial plot and saw the graves and crosses of other Vasquez who had gone before. Ah, death did have a sting and her mother's heart felt its cruel torture!

The little chapel bells rang merrily, and guests on their way to Vasquez estate turned back, or came on only to offer sympathy. And all through the night the chapel bells tolled their sad news. Adventurous ruffians from all parts of the world began congregating in California to die for their pot of gold, and San Francisco, the peaceful little home of the romance Spaniards, became a seething cauldron of crazed activity.

Houses were looted, stores were deserted, and Stener was not the only captain to leave his ship. "Miss, meek and consumed liquor in the rough, care-free spirit of a mining camp life. In short, the Spanish village had become the arena of a wild mad world. The harbor was crowded with ships of all descriptions and noisy, raucous sailors, and on the shores a myriad of tents appeared to shelter the shifting population. Frame shacks were erected over night and when not used as bases served as supply bases for tools and provisions.

A regular procession almost constantly passed by the Vasquez estate, and Don Hernandez, the new master of the house, was wont to watch from the balcony with folded arms and a frown upon his face, but in his heart was a boyish restlessness that was difficult to suppress. Senora Vasquez was always slightly contemptuous of the table and hated the rush because its bustling influence had been responsible for her son's death. Her aristocratic breeding and love for beauty made her senses rebel against the sight of ragged, bearded with camping outfits, kitchen utensils, household furnishings and unemptied red flannel shirted men as they passed her door and ruined the beautiful serenity of life. To her it was obvious to be forced upon the sight of ragged, bearded, splendid white men and Chinks all pawing their lot together and going off to the fields like brothers.

The Senora could not understand why women would give up an easy, pleasant life to follow their wandering husbands to the new wild territory, and she never ceased to be amazed at the sight of husbands and wife struggling along under the weight of heavy packs and dragging young children by the hands in their efforts to make speed.

Vasquez and his mother were literally sitting on their doorstep watching the world go by. A world peopled by creatures so remote in station and desires from their own high minded and chivalrous instincts that there was no mutual ground of understanding. For instance, they saw a hard-facéd "Madam" drive past with a bevy of painted girls. Reclining in chairs in the wagon bed. One of them called, waved and smiled to get the attention of two men on one of the other wagons, who were straddling a board and plying rods while they jockeyed along. (To be continued.)

Mrs. Leo H. Wenzel left Monday morning for a two weeks visit in Lower Michigan. Warren J. Vaska and Fred Vaska Jr. of Rapid River visited here last Friday. Mr. and Mrs. William Mottel and daughter Patricia left Wednesday night for Chicago for a five-day visit.

It didn't take Mr. Olson long to tell him what he needed, and outfit him with a real hustling outfit that would match up with the northern climate.
The Olson and Hanson business suffered a serious setback when they incurred a $600 loss through their fire on April 4, 1924. It was a big loss to the new business only about eight months old, but Linnar and Loyal managed to "stick with the ship" and came out of it alright. No traces of the thieves were found. They made their entrance to the store through the coal chute in the rear. Their loot consisted of twelve suits, overcoats and merchandise in all lines.
"The store for men, and women who shop for men, is their slogan. For men they have furnishings, and for women who shop for men, courteous service."
"Women do a good deal of men's shopping," Mr. Olson said. "In the big articles like suits and coats, you find them making their own selections, but in smaller accessories they leave it up to the women's choice."
