ROCKWOOD FARM HOME BURNED

SECOND FIRE WITHIN FIVE DAYS DESTROYS REMAINDER OF DWELLING

The farm home of Mrs. Emma Roderick at the end of the Skelton Road was burned to the ground after the second fire alarm within five days, burned in Wednesday night about 9:30.

The first fire occurring last Friday night damaged the house to the extent of $800 and the contents to the amount of $500. The upper story was badly burned but the family had been able to live in the two lower rooms.

An unusually hot fire, built by Mrs. Roderick's son, who was making fudge, caused the fire last Friday. It had gained considerable headway when noticed by the family who were in another room.

The firemen were able to save the lower portion of the dwelling with the use of their pumps, with which water with a pressure of forty pounds was pumped from a small creek that runs down from the house.

Mrs. Roderick was at Escanaba on Wednesday night her son told the firemen. The blaze had been in progress about twenty minutes when it was noticed by neighbors who turned in the alarm. The house was filled with flames and the fire department arrived. Again using the pump, the firemen were able to protect the surrounding property, but the frame dwelling was ruined.

The loss is partly covered by insurance.

ONLY NOISE IS FIRE CRACKERS

Gladstone will have a quiet Fourth of July possibly the only noise of celebration being that of the fire crackers and caps that are in the hands of youngsters. Because of the big celebration contemplated by the neighboring city of Manistiquette, it was deemed advisable for Gladstone to co-operate by not making plans for the day, permitting Gladstone residents to take part in the Manistiquette observance. That city co-operated in a similar manner with Gladstone when they launched a big day.

Manistiquette offers a full day of fun, motor races, airplane exhibits, race street parades, hand music, speakers and fire works.

The shooting off of fire works is permitted on July 3, 4 and 5, according to state law. Chief of Police Lindahl has issued a warning to parents to see to it that care is exercised by their children in the handling of fire works. Fire crackers must not be thrown in cars and near people. This practice has been the cause of complaints received by the Police of late and must be stopped, Office Lindahl stated.

STOP LIGHT SIGNALS NOW IN OPERATION

The stop and go signal lights, recently purchased by the City were placed in operation at the intersection of Delta and Ninth Streets late Wednesday afternoon. It is thought that the automatic timing clock will be set at about thirty seconds. Alfred Radandt, who was in charge of the installation, made tests at thirty seconds on Wednesday, and this period of time seems to be correct for the average daily traffic at that corner.

The timing clock can be regulated for occasions of unusual traffic. There are three lights on all four corners the red stop signal, and the green go light, with an amber light in between the red and green, which flashes just before time for the red stop signal.

COMMISSIONERS HAVE MEETING

A meeting of the City Commission, adjourned from Monday night, because of lack of a quorum, was held on Wednesday night. Several matters came up for discussion and two resolutions were passed.

A beverage shop and pool room license was granted to the Rialto Building.

The Commissioners authorized City Manager F. R. Buchner to have plans, specifications and estimates of cost on the proposed Wisconsin avenue pavement from 10th to 16th streets, prepared. A petition from the property owners on Wisconsin between Central and 16th streets had been presented to the Commission some weeks ago.

The condition of shade trees on property in Gladstone was discussed at length by the Commission. Many of them have not been trimmed for several years and have branches hanging low above the pavement. It is provided by city ordinance that trees be trimmed to provide an eight foot clearance between the sidewalk and the lowest limbs, and the Commissioners have requested that residents comply with this regulation, or steps of enforcement will have to be taken.

The trees should be trimmed to provide even more than an eight foot clearance, Mr. Buchner stated, because following rains and storms when the branches are heavier, their weight bends them still lower.

RECORDED MITSCHAKOR

Henry Rosenblum started in business in Gladstone with a small stock of dry goods in the Old Fellow building now occupied by the Quality Bakery, with living quarters for his family in the rear. The store, about eighty feet long, was partitioned off with wallboard and in front was the beginning of the business that was soon to grow into the leading department store of Gladstone. There were tables piled with sundry articles and ready to wear and lines stretched above the counter displaying more clothing and dry goods. Mr. and Mrs. Rosenblum managed the store each taking their turn in waiting on the customers and tending to the household duties in the rear.

But this was all back in 1898. After only one year facilities proved inadequate and the board and partition was moved still further back to accommodate a larger stock of goods.

After five years the business had developed to such an extent that the entire floor was needed for store space and the Rosenblum family sought new living quarters. A stairway was built to the second floor, and a men's and women's rest room and apartment was established there. This was a big stride forward for the Rosenblum store and it marked the beginning of its kind in Gladstone with a larger stock than the oldest merchants, Kratz and Samuel Goldstein.

New Building In 1910 By 1910 the business had again outgrown its quarters. In the early spring of that year, construction of the present Rosenblum building was launched.

The opening day of the new store was November 14th of that year. Mr. Rosenblum recalled that day with pride. "It was a Friday," he stated, "and given over to visiting only the country clerks, and the city crowd crowded the building to its capacity to look over the new store and the goods it offered." OPPOSE CHANGE TO ROAD ROUTE

SUPERVISORS ASK STATE TO CONTINUE U.S. 41 SAME WAY WEST ESCANABA

The Delta County Board of Supervisors held their annual June meeting at the court house at Escanaba on Monday and disposed of all routine business in record time, adjourning before four o'clock in the afternoon. Supervisor Helmer Bruce of Bark River township proposed a resolution, which was adopted, petitioning the State Highway Department to continue U. S. Highway 41-2, west of Escanaba along the present right of way or as near to it as possible.

A survey recently made proposed to cut off the town of Bark River, Wilson and others between Escanaba and Menominee, and Supervisor Bruce in his petition points out that as there is a through highway between the two cities over M-35, the towns on the other route should not be cut off from the present route.

W. H. Nedham of Escanaba, chairman of the board, and August Lundgaard, supervisor from Cornet township and president of the U. P. State Fair Board, were named as delegates to attend the U. P. Supervisors Association meeting to be held at Ontonagon June 27 and 28 in conjunction with the annual meeting of the Development Bureau.

A new supervisor, Ole Thorson of Wells, succeeding the resignation of George Harvey, was introduced by Chairman Nedham. Mr. Labre was authorized to attend the annual meeting of the Michigan County Clerks, to be held in Petoskey July 10-12, and this he plans to do in the near future.

The afternoon the Equalization Committee reported favorably on the assessment rolls of the several cities, villages and townships and the adjournment followed soon thereafter.

SYNOPSIS

Lieutenant MacReady and his patrol Bill Smith of the marines are detailed to duty at Yellow Canyon where a number of mail robberies have taken place. Soon after they arrive the bandits, led by Captain Davis and Howard, dynamite a train which is guarded by a few marines. Howard deserts the bandits and enters the wireless car of the train to call for help. Soon a host of aeroplanes arrive, and Howard, who is apparently one of the government forces, goes up in one of the machines. Laura Phelps, a sweetheart, is captured by the bandits.

They covered the thirty miles to Yellow Canyon in record time, even for that clear weather.

Word of their achievement had gone on ahead of them and the station town was gathered at the station as they drove in.

The poorly lighted station offered little opportunity to distinguish people but Howard's erect military form was easily recognizable as he appeared, the first to descend from the car.

A form rushed out from the small mob crowding on the platform and grabbed him fiercely by the arm. "Where's my daughter? She was on the train. What have you done with her?"

Laura's clear voice answered from directly behind Howard.

"It's all right, father. I thought under the circumstances, it wouldn't be necessary for me to go on to Walla Walla, You see, my main job in the Intelligence Department and he's been working against this gang all the time."

It was neither the time nor the place for prologues; and Howard felt Phelps' hands close around his own and knew that in that moment everything was for aught.

"You'd better, father," Laura warned, "because you see— I'm going to be married just as soon as he receives permission from the commanding officers."

Howard frowned.

"That's one of the messages I sent over the radio, after the fight was all over," he explained.

They had a hard time of it dodging questions from the excited townspeople; but the task of settling with the prisoners and returning to normal duty was the first consideration. Howard, as the ranking officer, took the initiative in making decisions.

Yellow Canyon was inadequate for housing two dozens dangerous bandits who might attempt a break at any moment they had fully recovered from the lethal effects. He detailed Lieutenant Phelps to the command and was scheduled to return to Fort Denison anyway, to convey the captives to the fortress prison.

A telegraphic communication sanctioned this plan and approved the sending of the box car on this additional run.

Howard pending definite orders for his own future movements, accompanied MacReady's men back to their quarters in the abandoned power house.

MacReady himself was given the most solicitous care. A room was fixed up for him in Phelps' home.

"En Passant"

Observations and Comment by Alice Fox

JACKSON STEPHENSON in his "Town Talk," says "The most lovable and lovable quality that any human being can possess is tolerance."

Another author says tolerance is the beginning of love, the end of love, and it is love. It is love from which tolerance grows and love that permits folks to exercise this quality, one needed in every day life by every individual in the world.

The City of Cleveland took steps a few months ago to teach tolerance in their public schools. A unit of the seventh grade course in social sciences was put aside for the teaching of tolerance by discussion.

The children by talking over their inherited and acquired racial and religious prejudices concluded that they were nothing but bunk. The children by the very discussion of it acquired that love for their fellowmen that permitted them to exercise tolerance and develop the quality.

If Cleveland has found a way to teach tolerance, Cleveland has made a big step forward.

IF THE WEATHER MAN doesn't deal us some warm days mighty soon we won't have time for the summer season before fall is due again.

FLOYD GONYEA, of Cudahy, Wis. a former Gladstone resident and now a resident of Cudahy, Wis. who we ought to remove that sign, "Ice Cold Pop," from the Tourist Hotel. He drove by that way one morning soaked from the rain and with a wind blowing that made him think he was nearing the Polar region instead of Gladstone. Then that sign, "Ice Cold Pop," met his gaze. He shivered two more times and finally wished they'd take it down.

OUT IN SOUTH DAKOTA after President Coolidge spent his last summer vacation there, somebody named a little mountain after him. That's all the little hills and valleys around Superior, Wisconsin have names. Now how is Mr. Coolidge going to like that?

BACK IN the school days we all learned rules about not ending sentences with prepositions, and starting them with conjunctions. But when we observe how some of America's best writers shatter those rules, we write as though the only rule is writing so folks will understand you.

Bruce Barton starts out his sentences with "And" frequently, and Henry Justis Smith, in advising students of journalism, says that grammar slips in a few prepositions to end his sentences. About the only rule we don't find broken is commencing a sentence with a period.

NOW ANOTHER National calamity is about to befall us. Radio stations are thinking to combine in broadcasting the congressional record. There's going to be lots of sets winging their way out of windows when folks tune in on the nearby discussions, orations and filibustering in which our dear congressmen indulge.

MR. PRESTON called to say that "twain" he at all told Mike Goodman down at his tire shop to "take the air out of those worn out inner tubes, because he might want to use it (the air) again." "Twain" is some other than C. C. Strickland.

Mr. Preston thinks it's a peach of a Scotch joke, but we don't know whether he's Scotch or not, and Mr. Strickland isn't so it certainly isn't a SCOTCH joke. 'Sall there is to it.

RETURNS CHECK MADE OUT BY POOR DEPT

If all were like one Escanaba lady, there would be no need for the Poor Dept. and N. J. Foley of LaPine would be out of a job. Not long ago some cabbage plants were purchased for use at the poor farm. The check drawn on the poor fund and charged to the Poor Department, was sent in an envelope imprinted with the name of Supt. of Poor. The check came back, along with a letter in which it intimated that if the payment was being made from the poor fund, she guessed she'd rather have the $2.00. And also that future letters should not be sent with the imprint of the Poor Department. She said some people might not understand. Practice requires that the vouchers drawn on the county be charged against the funds intended for, so, how is the county going to pay its debt?

DELTA COUNTY'S directory lists 54 Johnson's in Gladstone, more than any other name. The good old name of Olad can next with only eleven less than the Johnson's have.

But what we're worrying about is what has happened to the once prominent name of Smith that used to be widespread in Gladstone as well as every other community.

YOU HEAR FOLKS RAVE about the wonderful dory up at Masonville, and the way they're catching trout in some little dark stream, but the unfortunate part about all these fishing haunts is that the fishing is good just before you get there and just before you leave.

OUTING ENJOYABLE

DESPITE COLD DAY Sunday was enjoyed by a large crowd of Eskans and their families despite the lack of sunshine, and the mild wind that persisted in blowing all day Sunday.

The picnic was held in the hall at Moss Lake and the day spent in games and social diversions. A picnic dinner was served. Mrs. Fred Hawkinson was chairman of the committee in charge.

HOTEL PROSPECTS ARE ENCOURAGING

G. W. Sweigert, who has been conducting a systematic survey of the hotel situation in Gladstone for the past two weeks, presented his report to a committee of interested citizens at a meeting held Tuesday night. He is a representative of the Hochberger System, Inc., a company that has been successful in financing hotel projects all over the United States and Canada.

The report is a very comprehensive and presents a bright outlook of the possibilities in the hotel business in this city. According to figures compiled by Mr. Sweigert, there is a volume of business as yet undeveloped which would be attracted by a new and modern hotel, more than sufficient to assure the successful operation of a 40-room building, which he recommended. The method recommended for its financing is one that is being used successfully in other places and calls for investment by local citizens of about $60,000, the balance to be secured from bonding companies.

Committees were appointed without delay to investigate the recommendations made in Mr. Sweigert's report and study action is planned if they are found satisfactory. One of the matters that needs to be determined is the matter of a new and modern hotel, more than sufficient to assure the successful operation of a 40-room building, which he recommended. The method recommended for its financing is one that is being used successfully in other places and calls for investment by local citizens of about $60,000, the balance to be secured from bonding companies.

H. ROSENBLUM STARTED IN WITH SMALL STOCK

Thursday sales began, and he recalls the day business as one of the biggest in the history of his career. A sales force of eighteen people were employed. Favors were given match boxes to the men on one side of which was a picture of the proprietor, and on the other, a penny was inserted in a small opening with the inscription, "Keep me and you'll never be broke." Teaspoons and flowers and other fitting souvenirs went to the women visitors. Some of these tokens of the opening day are still in the possession of the older residents of Gladstone.

"My ideal store the time I entered business on a small scale in the Odd Fellows building was to have the biggest store in Gladstone, and give the local people as good a buying opportunity as they could secure in the stores of the neighboring city," Mr. Rosenblum said.

"The volume of business was trebled after the first year," he continued. It continued to grow as the years passed until a few years ago when Mr. Rosenblum turned his attention from the mercantile field to the farm.

Came to America at 17 Henry Rosenblum was born in Lithuania in 1840 and came to America to seek his fortune as a lad of 17. He had worked on his parents' farm in Lithuania and secured employment as a farm hand in Greenfield, Mich. He was just two Michigan until a better opportunity presented itself. After one year he took a clerical position in the dry goods store of Samuel Goldstein at Tawas, Michigan. Even then as a clerk he performed his daily duties with the same industry and energy that would be the proprietor of such a business. After three years in Mr. Goldstein's employ, he went to Cadillac to a similar position, and later to Clare to a better clerical job.

In 1891 he entered a business partnership at Superior, Wis. During the panic that began in 1893, the business suffered, and Mr. Rosenblum sold out his share to his partner. A year later he came to Gladstone to begin work for Samuel Goldstein, who had moved his dry goods business to this city.

After four more years, in 1898 he took his first step to make true his dream of establishing the biggest dry goods business in Gladstone.

Planned Retirement As the years passed Mr. Rosenblum planned that when his son, Herbert, grew to manhood he would succeed over the business. When the time came, Herbert's interest in the ready-to-wear line, and he felt that there was little opportunity for Rosenblum store to grow further in Gladstone, Mr. Rosenblum then made plans for his retirement. The store was leased for a period of ten years in February 1928 to the J. C. Penny Company, and they will take over the building on July first. Most of the entire stock has been disposed of, and as Mr. Rosenblum sits amidst the empty show cases and vacant shelves these last days to receive the long straggling visitors, he has ample time to think of the days of his business career.

They have just two now, but are making plans for a third, and intend to look for more suitable locations. Mr. Rosenblum plans to invest in the chain of stores and later on may take an active interest also.

Dolores Costello in "OLD SAN FRANCISCO" is a Warner Bros. picture.

Synopsis

Don Hernandez Vasquez and his beautiful granddaughter Dolores occupy the old Vasquez ranch, handed down from the first Vasquez on a grant from the King of Spain. The property that came to San Francisco by the discovery of gold in California missed the Vasquez hacienda where indolent ways did not keep abreast of modern progress. But the Vasquez acres are covered by Buckwell, political boss of San Francisco. His lawyer, Brandon, with Brandon's nephew, Terry, are sent to the ranch to buy it. Brandon fails to accomplish his task, but Terry falls in love with Dolores. Buckwell is incensed by the failure and plans to oust the old Spaniard land grant. Terry goes to warn Vasquez and resumes lovingmaking with Dolores. Vasquez ignores Terry's warning and tells him Dolores is to marry young Spaniard, Don Luis Terry, heartbroken, leaves for San Francisco. Dolores, and plans to forget his heartache in pleasures of San Francisco's Barbary Coast.

Dolores is hurt by Terry's abrupt leaving. Dolores goes into Frisco to seek Terry's aid in saving the ranch.

Dolores nodded in relief, although she did not like the implication of the word party.

"I'm waiting on his table," explained the waiter. "Just so right on up these stairs and open the first door to your left."

"Thank you." And relieved of all misgivings, she followed his directions.

Reaching room 10, Dolores started to open the door, then released the knob and knocked instead. She knocked until her hand hurt, but could not summon sufficient courage to open a stranger door unbidden.

The walls of the The Poodle Dog were made to keep in all sounds, so she did not hear the music, singing and general boisterousness within. But one of the men guests, who was less interested than any one present, happened to be leaving and opened the door as if in response to her knock.

"I am looking for Terry," she exclaimed not conscious of having used his given name.

"You belong to this party—and are just getting here," exclaimed the youth in open admiration. "I thought something was lacking and now I know that it was—you! Come on in!"

To Dolores' amazement he put his arm around her waist and tried to draw her into the room. Breathless with fear, she pushed him aside.

"Go to the devil, will you?" flared Terry, and staggering to the open door found that Dolores had disappeared.

Utterly despondent and disgusted he tottered into the bar room and gulped down a drink of straight whiskey.

He could not think what had brought Dolores to The Poodle Dog. "Engaged to one man, flitted with me and visiting this place alone at night—and she said she had never been to Frisco! What kind of a girl is she?" Terry gave it up but he could not drive her from his thoughts, even with an excess of liquor.

Out in the hall Buckwell watched with the same loving smile. Although his eyes were on Terry, his thoughts—like Terry's—were on Dolores. Good white women had never had any suitor for Buckwell. He preferred—well, the

To Dolores' amazement he put his arm around her waist and tried to draw her into the room. Breathless with fear, she pushed him aside.

The party was exposed to her view. She recoiled and stood in breathless horror, looking into the room. How different from what she had anticipated!

Dinner was over, although some of the men and girls were still lounging around the table in a milder intoxication. The dancing was fast and furious or so slow that the dreamy couples sat in reverend silence way. Dolores felt that she was peering into another world—a place peopled by creatures with whom she did not care to mingle. In the midst of the hideous revelation she saw Terry—her handsome, clean, clear-eyed Terry—he had a girl in his arms and was dancing the "Grizzly Bear" with stumbling feet.

As each couple caught sight of Dolores they stopped whatever they were doing and looked at her through bleary eyes and whirling brains. She resembled a picture of some beautiful, frightened girl in a story book, and they wondered what she was doing there. Terry had stopped dancing and was holding his silk hat high above his head for a girl to kick at, when he too caught sight of Dolores in the doorway. Tossing the hat aside he staggered forward scarcely seeing her in vision. The discarded partner, drunk only jealous of a new flame, tried to pull him back, but hurrying forward, Terry unsteadily approached Dolores and made a pitiful attempt to smile.

Hurt surprise changed to contempt when she realized his condition.

"What chow din' eat?" Terry managed to get out.

Dolores did not turn away, but she closed her eyes to blind out the repulsive sight before her. His hair was matted and moist, his eyes were bloodshot, his face looked swollen

NEW YORK COMEDY SUCCESS, "NEW BROOMS," FOR FOURTH DAY OF CHAUTAUQUA

SCENE FROM COMEDY "NEW BROOMS"

"It's a wise father who knows as much about his own son—at any rate that is what Tom Bates Senior tells his son in Frank Craven's comedy success, "New Brooms," which is to be presented by the Kackley Players on the fourth night of our coming Community Chautauqua.

"New Brooms" ran for a solid year at the Fulton Theatre, New York, and followed this with a record-breaking engagement of six months at the Blackstone Theatre, Chicago. It was acclaimed by press and public everywhere as even funnier and jollier than "The First Year," by the same author and, at the same time, just as true to life in its comic and pathetic phases.

This comedy is presented under the personal direction of Olive Kackley, who has so delighted Chautauqua patrons with her plays of past seasons.

others. After seeing Dolores his desires were changed; he wanted her. And to use a well known expression of the time, "When Chris Buckwell wanted anything—he got it." Not five minutes later Buckwell had instructed his man to drop the Vasquez ranch matter—he was going to give it his personal attention. Dolores, rode on back to the Rancho and was thankful there was no one to witness her tears. She had never imagined it possible for anyone to be so miserable. Had she only known what the future held her suffering would have paled to insignificance beside the appalling tragedies that were destined to befall her during the next few days.

CHAPTER IX
Buckwell Sets His Trap

The momentary glimpse of Dolores that Buckwell enjoyed during her ill advised visit to the Poodle Dog in search of Terry had aroused the Cur of the Tenderloin as nothing else had done in years. Women were not new to him, neither did they offer any pleasure to his faded appetite. But with Dolores it was different. Her fresh beauty, her youth, her innocence appealed to him as sparkling water to a desert traveler—and as satisfying.

Rollins, 65 who passed away at his home at 114-12th St. Tuesday night, will be laid to rest in Fernwood Cemetery Friday afternoon following Masonic funeral rites at the John Latimer home at 114-12th St. The service will be held at 2:30 with Rev. Lindblad, and Mr. Rollins moved his business to 114-12th Street. He is a former Soo Line Engineer working as a brakeman at Hankinson, and at Gladstone before moving to North Dakota. When he received his pension about six years ago, he decided to return to Gladstone and enter the grocery business.
