FARMER'S MARKET OPENS JULY 28

IMPROVED SOUTH HILL WILL BE CONVENIENCE TO FARMERS

Gladstone's first market day will be Saturday, July 28th and quite a large number of farmers from the vicinity are expected to bring earthen produce for sale on the opening day. The date was deferred because it was found that the majority of the farmers were not ready to offer produce earlier.

The market will be under the auspices of the City Club as it was conducted a year ago. It will be located on Eighth Street, south of Delta Avenue.

A matter of considerable interest to farmers of the Flarock and Cornell district is the information that the South Hill has been improved by the City crew for use. Practically all of the ties have been replaced and placed in proper alignment, with a wood retaining wall to insure safety. The sand road has been graded several times and widened considerably.

The farmer's market proved very successful a year ago, and it is expected that it will again meet with the approval of Gladstone people.

John Mathy Was Barber When Shaves Cost a Dime; Baseball is His Hobby

John Mathy started in dealing out shaves thirty years ago when they used to take off a man's whiskers for a dime, and a hair cut cost a quarter. He got his early training at Menominee working for Joseph Cronan, now 75 years old, and still following the trade at Milwaukee.

Mr. Mathy came to Gladstone in 1907 and took a position with H. C. Henke. After five years he bought the shop of Walter Butler and went into the business independently. In the spring of 1924 he sold out his shop to Steve Trekas, and became a salesman for a wash machine concern. After eight months he again returned to Gladstone and opened a barber shop at the L. T. LaCom Billiard Hall. A year later he moved across the street to his present location, 815 Delta Avenue.

About two months ago he received a second barber hair to his friend, and since then he and John Mathy has been assisting him.

Methods Have Changed
In the evolution of the barber trade, in the change in methods used and the passing of styles demanding that barbers conform to certain regulations in their work.

When starting in thirty years ago, Mr. Mathy said, "A shave meant nothing more than lathering and scraping off the whiskers. There's a great deal more to it now."

Now state laws require that two towels be used for each shave. Regarding hair cutting back at that time, there were no clipper cuts, with the exception of clipping all the hair off.

"The first hair cut that demanded the use of the clippers that developed was the Jim Corbett Pompadour, nothing more than an extra-long hair cut.

A military hair cut that required the use of the clippers on the back neck struck the country. Mr. Mathy recalls that when he came to Gladstone in 1907 only two young men here boasted of this new military style. Roy Hamann and Frank Miller, the barber business was confined to service for men alone in the early days.

Children did not begin having hair cuts until about eighteen years ago. Mr. Mathy continued, "And the advent of the hair-cutting machine for women as patrons. For years the straight bob was the style, and then the shingle and its many variations came."

Mr. Mathy has always invited women patronage but has not catered to it as he has to the men.

"Don't come on Saturday," is particular in his admonition to women. Mr. Mathy says Saturday is men's day and he has to be in the shop on (Continued on page five)

ASSAYS PEOPLE TO SEND SUGGESTIONS, DECLARES SENATOR RUSHTON IN TALK GIVEN HERE

That the people should be more interested in the deliberations of their legislators, and advise them of their views on questions up for consideration, was the suggestion made by Senator H. J. Rushton of Escanaba, who recently consented to run for a second term after he had determined to continue himself to his law practice. The suggestion was made in the course of an address given at Monday's noonday luncheon before members of the Gladstone Rotary Club.

Lobbyists Busy Always
Senator Rushton pointed out that lobbyists are busy the year through especially active while the legislature is in session, often times causing that body to be flooded with form letters and telegrams advocating some particular bill or opposing it to render this service. The lobbyist's version of the intent of the legislation without themselves consulting the legislator. These forms of requests must necessarily be ignored, Senator Rushton declared, but he did say that he and every other legislator gladly welcome suggestions expressing the honest view of the sender.

Several questions that may be expected to come before the 1929 legislature were discussed by Senator Rushton, among them capital punishment, compulsory automobile insurance, conservation, road building and the care of the state institutions.

For Better Institutions
The state of Michigan spends $36,000,000 annually on its roads and many hundreds of thousands more for conservation," declared Senator Rushton, "but when I asked $25,000 for upper peninsula institutions, Michigan State College, Houghton, Northern State Normal at Marquette or the State Hospital at Newberry, I was told by those in the lower part of the state who opposed such appropriations. But I refused such expenditures as even more important than good roads built for our pleasure trips and I propose to do all I can for the betterment of the state through the improvement of these institutions."

Lobbyists were scored in the course of the remarks Senator Rushton made at Monday's luncheon. He said he was in favor of the capital punishment bill and would do so again for a properly enacted bill, but he was not in favor of the new criminal code providing for timely trials and life punishment for conviction for the fourth felony would do much to stann out the crime wave in Michigan. Such convictions which were criticized because those sentenced were charged with possession of liquor should not be laid against the code, but against the prohibition law, he declared, which makes it a felony. The change, if one is demanded by the public, should be to make the possession of liquor a misdemeanor instead of felony, in that way eliminating the charge that was eliminating the code works an injustice.

Chats with The Editor

The judgment of the Gladstone records has been vindicated in the official record of Delta county...

But now that Atty. Jackson has about completed his first term and the people who are awake to what is being done by their public servants have had an opportunity to witness the sincerity, honesty and ability...

In announcing himself for a second term, Glenn confines his statement to a concise outline of what has been his activity during the almost two years he has been in office...

The feature of the thing is that Glenn has not simply been doing his duty toward the public, but he has done his duty toward the people...

Without fear, without prejudice, without favor—he has done his best. What more could the people expect?

ANOTHER chauteauqua has come and gone and again the sponsors have been asked to make up the deficit. The question naturally arises, "Is the entertainment worth while?"

Frankly, some of it is good, some not so good and the rest no good at all. On the whole we would say that the chauteauqua is a very worthwhile affair...

Under the present conditions it cannot be expected that the financial sponsors are capable of putting the proposition over. They are not in the entertainment business and should not be expected to know how to sell the idea to the public.

To those who sponsored the last and preceding chauteauquas, a measure of thanks and appreciation is due. They may reasonably expect that some measure of good has been the result of their public-spiritedness...

THERE is no attitude so exasperating as that of the rich who feel that their wealth gives them inalienable rights not admissible to others. We have just been reading a letter written to Clarence Cook Little, president of the University of Michigan...

The letter is inspired by President Little's attack on the narrow-minded tactics which prompted the blacklist, and having heard him talk on the subject, this writer is prompted to say that he is in because it typifies the American spirit of tolerance and desire for hearing both sides of all questions...

Through a newspaper report I learn of a recent public distribute of yours against the Daughters of the American Revolution, part of the attack being based upon an alleged "blacklist"...

Frankly, I would say that the policies of the Daughters of the American Revolution are not any of your particular concern. You are supposed to be an educator and not a censor of organizations, methods, or the particular organization with which you are connected.

Perhaps, I have reason to believe from my own knowledge that your position presents obstacles, the overcoming of which might be thought to require a maximum of your time and effort.

Mrs. Yerrick left here last December, spending the winter in Montana and returning in May. She has remained in the western city to visit with her daughter Maude of Ottumwa, Iowa who spent her vacation from her duties as Superintendent of Nurses at the St. Joseph's hospital, with her sister and mother in Whitefish and the Yellowstone.

About ten days was spent in motoring to and through the Yellowstone and the trip was one most thoroughly enjoyed by Mrs. Yerrick as well as the rest of the party. "Old Faithful" geysers and the Painted Pots were described by Mrs. Yerrick as being too wonderful for words. She looked down into the Old Faithful during its period of rest but scurried to the safety zone when the rumblings were heard. The party carried a complete camping outfit but did not use it because of the reasonable charge made for cottages around the Park. Miss Maudie Hollenbeck accompanied her mother back as far as St. Paul returning to her duties at Ottumwa, Iowa.

It is to be noted that the Lipka Amusement Company has played the people of our city at two different times during the past two years. We have found Mr. Lipka a very dignified gentleman, a man of modest demeanor and broad intellectual qualifications.

His concession operators are at all times of high type citizens. He employs no floaters or undesirable. At the present time over sixty percent have been with him since his organization of his show, some eight years ago.

I can conscientiously recommend them to any community as a good clean entertainment.

"En Passant"

Observations and Comment by Alice Fox

THE FORD IS RECOGNIZED as the farmer's car. Few farmers there are who do not know of it, and about one as Henry does himself. But the other day we chanced to meet one of those old-fashioned men of the soil who had never taken the trouble to learn how to drive the family flyer, or did he know it in the driveway?

So he couldn't repair any broken Ford, but he could haul out his old nags for a tow and praise the name as the only and sure means of travel. The horse made a step and a half about every three minutes. The farmer couldn't see where the driver had to turn at all. And with a broken one in company, she sure did.

A GINK FROM SOME spring poets association, who signs his name as intelligibly as if the signature were made on a sign for a hockey team, writes offering to sell a wonderful collection of poetry. It's a collection of poems and sayings that we all should know, but somewhat of us. It's supposed to be a veritable editor's crutch, a prop to say when he isn't having one, or thought. It's all indexed too. But the gink didn't make a sale because the poems sounded like the first burps after a spring fever attack, all about pink butterflies, and dripping water falls. Nope, that fellow may think we all ought to know his poems, but how's he going to prove it?

MARK TWAIN once wrote, "America is the noisiest country that ever existed." He had traveled up and down the world, and he was making a guess. But if he thought the world and the folks back then were making a lot of noise—such a stillness—if he could only hear us now.

"SAY DO YOU think you own this road?" a motorist inquired from a driver approaching him on a country road, after he had tried vainly to mount the deep ruts to allow the other fellow to pass him. Meanwhile the other driver sat leaning at the wheel, puffing his cigar, without making any attempt to try to get his car out of the way. The exasperated first driver finally made his inquiry, and received the answer, "Yes, I do." There was no chance for argument then.

burst open. He whirled quickly to close the door, but he was unable to do so. She was breathless from hurrying and his eyes flashed angrily at the scene before him.

"What the devil brings you here?" stammered Buckwell releasing Dolores from unfastened arms.

Buckwell about his stiff cuffs into place, quickly straightened his large tie and gave the ends of his waxed hair an upward twist.

"So, you had him follow us, eh?" observed Buckwell, "I might have known you weren't as innocent as you pretended." His lips curled contemptuously at Dolores—the same lips that a moment before had been so eager to kiss her.

"I called at the Vasquez home to apologize for something that happened last night. When the servant said she was here with you—I know something was wrong and took the same short cut back to follow you."

"What will you do with me now?" she asked, eager to get away from the place.

"I'll see you later," he remarked, smiling at her obvious uneasiness. "I'm going to save your property, but you must remain and help. And though it will cost me much—I know I shall some time be amply repaid." The nearness of her child's presence, sweet and startled, made Buckwell cast discretion to the winds.

"I want to go home!" he said to her with a certain rage. Buckwell and other afternoon frequenters of the place were coming up the stairs. The rotunda was gay with strollers and Dolores decided that she had better close her eyes to the vulgar and go on.

"Oh!" she gasped in startled mortification and stood still. It was a shock to know that such pictures of a woman were to be run down the stairs and back to the peaceful dignity of the rancho. But as she turned her eyes met the suave, leering countenance of the Captain of waters.

"Right this way, Miss," he said and pushing past the pair, drew her away a certain release.

"What the devil brings you here?" stammered Buckwell releasing Dolores from unfastened arms.

Her struggles were futile.
