He caught sight of a woman offering doughnuts for sale as he left the ship, and succeeded to purchase three of them by holding himself and placing a coin of his foreign money in her hand. The woman either felt that she was insufficiently paid, or getting some bogus money, because she set up such a loud series of wails that a policeman was attracted to the scene to settle the argument. He sent her on his way with the doughnuts, and silenced the woman.

There will be a program of several fine numbers presented at the meeting of the Young Peoples Society throughout last week at Hagerman Lake, near Stambauch, on Friday evening. There will be a business session, and a luncheon served by Mrs. Louis Skogquist at the close of the evening.

Chats with The Editor

EVERY legislator with whom this writer has come in contact and who appeared conscientious and sincere in his effort to promote worthy legislation, has displayed the utter lack of interest taken in his efforts by his constituents. Prejudice and self-interest are the two motives that prompt support or opposition, depending on the matter under discussion. Arranged against this lack of interest are the lobbyists, who make it their business to follow the work of legislators. These lobbyists may be classed in two groups, although generally speaking more classifications are called for. First there are those without principles or scruples who succeed in learning some of the proposals being advanced; then they get into touch with citizens who should be positively for or against and endeavor to hire out as their agents to promote or oppose. The other class represents special interests, public utilities, the organized manufacturers, anti-union leagues and most every other activity.

If the legislator fails to please any of these lobbyists he is threatened with a denunciation which will be sent to the people of his district. And of course such a threat must be directed to those who would be displeased by whatever action taken by the legislator, no matter how unimportant it may be in his work for the greatest good for the greatest number. What chance has an honest legislator against such an army? None whatever if he is of the ordinary weak-kneed type. He becomes nothing more than a tool of the crowd and does pretty much as he is wanted to do. But among the many are the few who have strength and honesty of purpose which stand in good stead, and out of the mass of the legislative grind comes some worthwhile enactments. These are some of the thoughts that may be well kept in mind when considering the worth of a legislator, and when one asks his constituents for their viewpoint, as did Senator Herbert J. Ruskon in a talk given here last week, that can be taken as a pretty good indication that his time is not being wasted while there is a session going on.

THE greatest trouble with most of us is with ourselves. We present an infringement of our rights, and yet are neglectful of the obligations which those rights impose; we fail to appreciate or notice the efforts of faithful servants over a long period of time, and yet let those same servants make one false move, according to our individual opinions, and we become resentful, even vengeful; prejudices carry us a long way.

If there is any doubt about these traits, just take notice what has already transpired in the lineup of our political campaigns. The nominees of the two major parties are the popular choices of their respective organizations to a degree seldom, if ever, equalled. In other words they come nearer to being the unanimous choices of their parties. Yet within each organization there are enemies inspired by petty considerations who seek in every way they can to do all the harm possible, even if it means the wrecking of the parties to which they may claim affiliation. There never could be complete agreement on all issues, for that is impossible in this day when so many important things come up for consideration. The voter should decide after considering the questions from all angles, just as if they were members of a jury, and after considering the evidence submitted in a trial, make their decision by a preponderance of the mass of matter entered in the case.

This writer is assuming that the very attitude we regard Herbert Hoover as a natural born leader, a man with fine training and a thorough knowledge of business, government and human affairs; a man, who if elected president should carve a name for himself in the history of this nation. Against him we find a man who has risen from the ranks by honest, sincere efforts; one who by the strength of his magnetic personality has attracted the masses to him, and who as a legislator and later as the executive of the largest state in the Union has been persevering in his efforts to better the lot of the common folk, without sacrificing the interests of the more fortunate.

Regardless of the outcome, the People may expect to be well taken care of by their new President. Some of the issues that will be discussed will be intended to set up petty prejudices. Those who permit themselves to be swayed by such considerations are the losers. Prohibition, religion, personalities should have no place in politics, not here in America where "life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness," are declared to be the unalienable rights of mankind, in its Declaration of Independence. The citizen who votes for or against a candidate because of his religion is to be pitied, for more likely than not, he is a citizen weighted down by the petty prejudices handed down by the past.

WHEN the politicians voted to foist prohibition upon the United States, they hoped, and with good reason, to rid themselves of the pernicious influence wielded by the liquor interests. The liquor interests were in politics to protect themselves and promote their interests and in doing so trampled injudiciously upon the rights of others. They deserved to suffer whatever fate chooses to hand them, so there is no sympathy lost in that direction. But in the place of the organized distillers there is springing up the organized illicit liquor dealer who does business on a big scale and who is absolutely unscrupulous in disposing of matters opposed to his interests.

The crime wave grows apace; so-called honest but weak officials are made subservient to the wishes of the illicit trade, keeping plenty of cash to pay its way. That is the condition obtaining in most every large city and the wave is spreading. It threatens the nation, just as three quarters of a century back slavery threatened to disrupt the Union. And yet we find both major political parties trying to deny that prohibition is an issue in the present campaign. The promise of only one candidate suggests some hope, although nothing has been said about any particular plan, and arrayed against this is the huge cry from an organized minority which like the ostrich that hides its head in the sand, refuses to see the danger that hovers over the nation. We say that the people will make it an issue, but they must have leadership that is not even something constructive in the way of an improvement. Perhaps the time is not now, but it must come sooner or later, and the sooner is the issue fought out to a definite conclusion, the better will be the chance of avoiding the trouble that lies ahead.

TAXATION is a most troublesome matter. No system has yet been devised to work perfectly, and the inequities are such as to sometimes discourage the taxpayer himself. It is an age-old trouble and that is why it is refreshing to learn that something is going to be done in the way of finding an improvement. Announcement comes from Lansing this week that the present administration has given consent to the University of Michigan to conduct a state-wide tax survey with the view of compiling facts and figures which may be used as a basis for something different, and perhaps better. This will be done under the Economic Department of the University and without expense to the State. The information developed by the survey may or may not be used, depending on a decision to be made after it has been submitted. The taxation question now is handled in a haphazard sort of way. There is no fairness in the matter or manner of assessments, and every time a new proposal is forthcoming it is prompted by a desire to shift the burden away from real property into another source, but again there seems to be no well-intended effort at providing something more equitable. Whenever such proposals, among them the income tax, have been submitted to the voters of Michigan, the latter have decisively turned it down. The gasoline tax now working - unsatisfactorily was bitterly opposed in the beginning but is now generally looked upon as a fair means of raising funds for highway purposes, inasmuch as the tax against property has continued to climb forward, also the corporation tax enacted in 1921 has raised an average of $6,000,000 annually, by property taxes never decreased.

Perhaps the University's survey may suggest an improvement. Such a possibility seems remote, but it is so absolutely to be desired that it means something to even try. May it afford welcome surprise.

THERE is genuine regret over the failure of the Escanabeau baseball team to fill its engagement to play in Gladstone last Sunday afternoon, and also over the break-up of the game between the Wells and Nahma teams after wrangling over an umpire's decision. The marks the first serious difficulty encountered in the effort to make amateur baseball a popular game in this county and the hope was beginning to take hold that success would crown the efforts of those sincerely interested in saving the game for the sake of the boys of coming generations. Under the agreement entered into by the managers of the four teams at the start of the season, any disputes would be ironed out by them in a meeting to be called immediately following any disputes. We hope that the managers will meet without delay and arrive at the conclusion that fans pay an admission to see each team play the best article of baseball it is capable of producing, and that there is little sympathy for the players who seek to win by unscrupulous means. In this connection the players and their managers must remember that the umpire is the supreme authority in deciding questions that come up during a game, and that good sportsmanship requires that these decisions be accepted as final, even at a time when it appears that the breaks are being thrown to opponents. For it must be remembered that these decisions are subject to human judgment, and being human cannot be expected to be perfect.

Insofar as Escanabeau's failure to report for the game here, charity suggests that the management be given the benefit of the doubt, and that the team was "blown out" in the rain, which would prevent play. That, too, was bad judgment, because after a heavy fall of rain, conditions turned out favorably and the game could have been played without trouble. Worse luck for the local management, many tickets had been sold in advance and also many people kept in town by the early rain were ready to pay their money, these representing losses well nigh impossible to make up.

TRY as one might think otherwise, the conclusion must necessarily be arrived at that the days of professional baseball game are numbered. At least it will continue on the downward gait, because more people are taking up games in which they are active participants and care less for those in which they are spectators at any specified admission price. That is a good thing for the country and represents a gain more than sufficient to offset the loss of prestige suffered by what was considered the national pastime.

If there is any doubt of the popularity of other games, just take note of the readiness with which Gladstone's younger generation has taken to the game of tennis since a court was provided by the FTA from funds made available by a popular subscription. Before the court was completed there was a waiting list of prospective players and now comes the announcement that I. N. Bushong, head of Gladstone's largest industry, has joined with Mrs. Bushong in providing funds for a second court. That is a spirit that builds a community and the countless number of boys and girls who are going to be benefited by participation in the game of tennis will live to thank the citizens who provided them with a place in which to engage in the game.

Other games are spreading rapidly in other places and will be seized upon eagerly in Gladstone which means for play has been provided. Municipal golf courses are rapidly being provided by all progressive communities at a rapid rate, making play within the reach of all, and the game has captured the imagination of youthful America. Volley ball is also popular and so is a number of other games. Europeans who study America return home with the impression that Americans are too serious in the pursuit of material wealth, but if Americans can divert their minds with healthful recreation and play there need be no fear of consequences.

"When you play, play hard; when you work, don't play at all." That is the spirit of America.

LOADING ON THE HIGHWAYS

The automobilist who travels along trunk line highways when traffic is heavy at a snail's pace is just as grung as a man on the speeder. He is usually present on Sundays and holidays, holding up traffic or forcing all who are back of him to go by. With heavy traffic in both directions, it is not always easy to pass.

The state removed the speed regulations on the highways in order to speed up traffic, although due caution must be exercised by all drivers at all times. Motor vehicles are becoming so numerous that it is essential that traffic be kept in motion at a rapid pace. The loafer on the streets in a metropolitan area will soon receive a warning from the police to hurry along, and more at

A recent bulletin issued by the University of Wisconsin, states that 7 ton of Gas House Coke is equal in fuel value to 10 tons of the best grade of Pocahontas coal. The stack loss on all grades of coal except anthracite is approximately 68%, on coke it is 27%. A hot air furnace burning coke can be fired so that it needs attention but twice daily, morning and evening. Coke contains no ash, no clinkers, very little slag, there is no waste. It is clean and dustless.

We are booking orders for Coke now, the price on the basis of fuel value is less than peccotants.

"BEACH GOLF," NEWEST OF FADS

A new idea in summer sports has developed itself among this season's bathers who also happen to be golf enthusiasts. It is called "Beach Golf" and is played on the same principles as the original game of golf, excepting that instead of link greens the beach sands replace it. The golf sticks are somewhat larger of a special design for that particular game. Photo shows the girls of "Sunny Days" giving an exhibition of "Beach Golf" at the Clarendon beach, Chicago.

READERS TELL READERS

Chicago, July 18, 1928
The Delta Reporter,
Gladstone, Michigan.
Dear Friends:
Just a little note asking you to change the address of the paper from Mrs. Gordon, Box 4400, Berkeley Ave., to Harry J. Stocke, 7714 So. Carpenter St., Auburn Park Chicago, Ill. I have moved west in the Haled Street district but I live far enough south to miss all the tawdry scum of that country. We are enjoying another heat wave. Last night I planned into Lake Michigan. I planned out almost as fast as I went in for it was cold. An offshore wind made it so but it has been nice.

My landlady and landlord have motored north for two weeks so I am batching until they return. The radio is moving new and slow, and last but not least, the Reporter will help pass the lonely hours so don't fail to send the next issue to my new address.

Sincerely yours,
Harry J. Stocke

Miss Viola Neveaux, employed at Chicago, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Napoleon Neveaux, Superior, Wis. writes her parents an interesting account of an eastern tour from which she has just returned. Miss Neveaux is employed at the Chicago Title and Trust Company.

Her account of the trip follows:
Dear Mother:
This is Saturday afternoon and I have decided to stay here and write you a letter about my trip.

Our first stop was at Niagara Falls. The falls are beautiful, especially at night when the different colored lights are turned on them. We stayed there one day and then took the boat to Toronto and from Toronto we took the boat to Montreal. It was a lovely trip and the lake was as smooth as glass. There was an orchestra on the boat and we danced. We were on the boat a day and a half.

From Montreal we took the day trip to Portland, Maine and the scenery is beautiful, passing the Berkshire Hills and the mountains. We just stayed over night in Portland and left for Boston. Boston is a very pretty city and we spent one day there sight seeing and seeing all the battle fields of the Revolutionary war. It was very interesting. The east is full of historical places.

Then we went to New York and the day we landed it was pouring but we took a boat trip up the Hudson River just the same. It cleared up in the afternoon. We enjoyed the trip because the scenery is just beautiful. That night we went to the Roxy theatre which is the largest movie house in the world.

The next day we took an all day sight seeing trip of New York and of course went to the top of the Woolworth Bldg. We took in all the sights worth seeing on that trip.

back uptown and downtown and in the slums of the city where you wonder how the people live being crowded up that way but they seem to get along all right. On Sunday I went to the Actors Chapel for 12:15 mass where all the actors who are Catholics and the other people take the side aisle. It is the church where Rudolph Valentino was buried and from the priest who said the funeral mass gave a sermon the Sunday I was there. He is a wonderful man. In the afternoon we went to Coney Island and what a mob of people there was. It was a hot day and they were all sitting on the beach in bathing suits.

In the evening we took a night trip around New York taking in Chinatown and going through the tunnel they have just built underneath the Hudson river. It is 1 1/2 miles long and took seven years to build. It is for auto traffic only.

I like New York very much and the hotel we stayed at was in the heart of the theatre district, that is the Great White Way and Broadway at night is gorgeous with all the lights. It is just like day and nobody ever goes to bed.

Then we took in Atlantic City, the playground of America. They have a boardwalk along the ocean about 7 miles long and men wheel you around in wheel chairs on the walk.

We spent one day in Philadelphia but we didn't like it very much so we left it and went to Washington. This is a beautiful city and everything is so clean. The streets are so wide and there are so many trees. Of course we took a trip to the White House, capitol and we saw them make paper money. We went up the Washington Monument.

Of course we took a trip to the White House, capitol and we saw them make paper money. We went up the Washington Monument. I never saw anything so pretty.

However, we were glad to get home again because it is tiring packing and unpacking, hurrying to catch a train, trying to see everything there is to see and all that but I am not sorry I took the trip. It was my first trip and probably will be my last one but it was worth while. I like the east very much.

A Weekly Panorama of Events in the National Capital by Peter Keegan, Special Correspondent for Delta Reporter

They will be "news" from the day they begin their public service. HERBERT HOOVER is personally and politically dry, but it is understood the Republicans do not care to over stress the prohibition question because of the bad reaction it might cause in the wet east, the battle ground. Al Smith is red hot after the vote of the big eastern states. The Democrats take it for granted that they will readily carry the ten states of the "solid south," so their efforts will be concentrated on the big eastern states. Smith believes he can win eastern states on the wet issue.

THE DEMOCRATIC party, with Governor Al Smith the leader, is a brand new party—rather an old party completely made over. The Al Smith party is a de-Bryanized party. For twenty years the Democratic party stood for Bryan. But there isn't a suggestion of Bryan about the party as now represented by Smith. Bryan called for Wall Street; Al Smith cultivates the support of business men. Bryan was dry; Al Smith is wet.

UNDER BRYAN leadership, the Democratic party was dubbed by Republicans as the "calamity party." This was due to Bryan's evasive attacks against the wolves of Wall Street. He scared business. Every four years business was nervous until it was known that the Bryan party had met with defeat.

BUT Al Smith has selected a great captain of industry—John J. Raskob, one of the country's biggest and most successful financiers. Democratic national chairman. Business no longer has reason to be nervous about the Democratic party. And neither has business a fear of Herbert Hoover. The result is that there is nothing to prevent business going forward this year, although presidential contest is impending. Business as usual should be the rule. There is nothing to be scared about. No matter which party wins, there will be no attacks on legitimate business. The indications are for a good business year.

HERETOFORE THE Democratic party has been handicapped by lack of finance. Business men wouldn't contribute. But this year the Democrats have every assurance of ample finance with which to conduct a nationwide campaign. Chairman Raskob will be able to raise whatever campaign fund is necessary to meet all expenses of a brisk, highly organized campaign. The Republicans will have to hustle to raise a fund to match the Democratic war chest.

HARRY F. Sinclair will not be among campaign contributors to either party this time. Neither party would think of accepting a dime's worth of help from him. He can save his money.

PARTY LINES are going smash this year in many spots. In the east there are Republicans aplenty who are shifting to Al Smith, and in the south and west there are many Democrats—dry Democrats, especially among women—who are shifting or privately pledging their support to Hoover. In southern states, where the Al Smith nomination has caused much irritation, many Democrats, according to reports, are justifying their support of Hoover on the ground that during the war "Hoover was good enough for Woodrow Wilson."

SOME DEMOCRATIC Congressmen in Alabama, Tennessee, North Carolina and Kentucky are threatened with defeat this year because of the strafe sturped up by Al Smith's nomination, but Republicans, it develops, are to have a fight on their hands in some congressional districts of Pennsylvania, New Jersey and Massachusetts. Pennsylvania considering the state as a whole will remain Republican, but Democrats figure they have a fine chance to win two or three congressional districts. But Republicans have equal hopes of scoring in a few congressional districts in some of the states of the Democratic South. Some political surprises are in store. There's a mixed up political situation.

THERE ARE those who are in violent opposition to governor Al Smith, yet who admire him for his bold courage. Al Smith is recognized as a man who speaks out from the shoulder. He thinks that present prohibition conditions are terrible; he would do everything he could to enforce prohibition, but he has the courage to say that he believes modification of the Volstead act is necessary so that each state could control prohibition in accord with public sentiment—which help to reduce law violation. Both Smith and Raskob consider that the present Volstead act is an act of intolerance. Smith would be more tolerant on all matters relating to personal liberty.

TWO SMART women, smart politically, most likely will be in the next Congress. Granting that the four sitting women members are re-elected the two new women nominees will increase the number of "stateswomen" to six. But the two new ones—Ruth Owen Bryan of Florida and Ruth Hanna McCormick of Illinois—will be the first. One the daughter of the great Democrat, William Jennings Bryan, and the other of the great Republican leader, Mark Hanna. Both women have had a political experience. They are widely known. They will come to Congress with high pres-

ARTHUR LAUSEN, Mgr. N. 9th St.

To the Voters of Delta County

At the Republican primary election to be held Tuesday, September 4th next, I shall be a candidate for the office of Probate Judge, and earnestly and sincerely desire the nomination. I realize that the task I have set for myself is a big one, and that it can be done only through the active help of my friends, but I am very hopeful of success.

Twenty seven years ago Judge Yelland came to Escanaba from lower Michigan. The next year he was appointed City Attorney of Escanaba and served two years as such. Then he was elected Prosecuting Attorney and held that office four years. In 1908 he left the prosecutor's office to become probate judge, which position he has held for the past twenty years. The people of this County have been very generous to Judd, and he has taken full advantage of his opportunities.

Likewise the people of this county and its cities have been kind to me, in that they have allowed me to serve as their prosecutor during ten of the twenty years I have practiced law here, since my graduation from the University of Michigan Law School in 1908. I have also been given the opportunity to do much public work of various kinds in which we have all been interested as citizens. Having lived in this County all my life, being brought up and educated and trained here, I have always had the best interests of the County and its people close to my heart, and I think my record in public and private life compares favorably with the common standards by which we measure men.

I am ambitious to be of greater service to my people. I desire as well to advance myself in my profession. Unless my friend, the present Judge of Probate, Mr. Yelland, has a monopoly on the right to hold that office, and to exercise the opportunity for public service it affords; or unless he retains it by "divine right of kings," I feel, and many of my friends feel, that he has held the office long enough, and that he either ought to step aside for a younger man, and give some one else a chance to progress, or seek something higher and better in his profession as a lawyer. Hence I am a candidate.

Aside from these considerations, and with all respect to the manner in which the present judge has handled his office, I have a rather fixed idea that a new man with new ideas might carry out a program of real service in the Probate Court. As a juvenile judge, I should aim to do something more than to lecture the unfortunate boys and girls who come before me. I should want to do more than commit them to an institution of the state which may prove only to be a school of crime for them. I should want to look into their hearts and their homes, into the chance they have had, and then find some one who could and would help them find themselves that they might become useful, law abiding and happy citizens.

I also feel that estate properties for sale ought to be subject to public bidding, before authority is given to make a sale in private. Also that estate funds available for loans should be open to the public, and the securities taken given careful examination by disinterested bankers and real estate men who know values.

But the greatest public trust the Probate Court has, centers around the huge sums of the tax payers' money, which are spent each year under the direction of the Probate Court, which in its discretion and without compulsion, judicially determines those who are entitled to legitimate public aid. If nominated and elected I pledge that every application for help from these funds will be thoroughly investigated on its merits, and so granted or denied, without fear, favor or discrimination, and regardless of political expediency. And in this I shall seek the cooperation of city and county officials and the Board of Supervisors.

Respectfully yours, TORVAL E. STROM Political Advertisement ordered and paid for by himself.

Old San Francisco

Dolores Costello in "OLD SAN FRANCISCO" in a Warner Bros. picturization of this novel.

Synopsis

Don Hernandez Vasquez and his beautiful granddaughter, Dolores, occupy the old Vasquez ranch handed down from the first Vasquez by a grant from the King of Spain. The prosperity that came to San Francisco by the discovery of gold in California missed the Vasquez hacienda where indolent ways had not kept abreast of modern progress. But the Vasquez acres are coveted by Buckwell, political boss of San Francisco. His lawyer, Brandon, with Brandon's nephew, Terry, are sent to the ranch to buy it. Brandon fails to accomplish his task, but Terry falls in love with Dolores. Buckwell is incensed by the failure and plans to void the old Spanish and grant. Terry goes to warn Vasquez and resumes loving him with Dolores. Vasquez ignores Terry's warning and agrees to marry young Spaniard, Don Luis Terry, heartbroken, leaves without seeing Dolores, and plans to forget his headache in pleasure of San Francisco's Barbary Coast.

Dolores is hurt by Terry's abrupt leaving. Dolores goes into Frisco to seek Terry's aid in saving the ranch. She finds him on a drunken party and returns home disillusioned. Buckwell witnessed her visit and intrigued, goes to Vasquez ranch. Under guise of aiding, he lures Dolores to San Francisco.

Terry's fighting Irish blood was aroused and he backed Buckwell in to a corner with a volley of rights and lefts. Buckwell was slower, but many pounds heavier, and every blow that he gave carried his full weight behind it.

Dolores stepped aside and watched breathlessly, in an agony of fear. Terry hit her.

It was no time for idle sparring. Terry's anger was too much aroused. He wanted to avenge Buckwell's insult to Dolores without further delay. With a quick upper cut he crossed a right to Buckwell's chin that sent the Car of the Trade Union careening back over the divan where he sprawled, half stunned. Terry stood over him, panting.

"You will regret this insult," fumed the disheveled Buckwell, brushing dust from his dark coat.

"You only get what you deserve, and you won't dare squeal," retorted Terry contemptuously, then turning to Dolores, "Do you know who he is?"

"Only his name and that he promised—she offered to help Grandfather and I keep the ranching."

"Well, he is Chris Buckwell—the very rotter who is trying to steal your home. It was he for whom my uncle tried to negotiate—that's how I know all about him. He is the biggest grafter in San Francisco!"

"Oh!" Dolores looked at Buckwell in amazement, then flared indignantly. "You the benefactor—are the man who is trying to ruin us. You deceived my Grandfather, and you tricked me into coming here!" her voice rang out clear and strong.

Buckwell felt her scorn, but shrugged it aside with a smirk. His expression became cruel and he said with a leering smile, "You made but one mistake, my dear. I never try—I always accomplish and I never waste time!" Bowing gracefully he turned his back on Dolores, then facing her, "For this insult it shall be my welcome pleasure to deal with you later." Turning on his heel in military fashion he calmly led the oom with the air of a conqueror rather than that of the vanquished.

The two young people watched Buckwell until the door closed behind him.

Terry brushed his hair back in to place with his hand and turning to Dolores said pleadingly, "I'm terribly sorry about last night, but after your fiancé arrived, I—"

He paused awkwardly.

"My what?" questioned Dolores, looking at him intently.

"Your fiancé—the young Spaniard—your Grandfather told me all about it." Embarrassed Terry bravely, "And you believed him!" Dolores threw back her head and laughed. "He wanted us to be engaged, but we never have and I never will be. I don't like him enough—for—that!" Dolores smiled and the very room

"Hush!" silenced Dolores, with a quick glance toward her Grandfather, who was still dozing at the far end of the room.

"When did they come?" broke in Terry in an undertone.

"Only now, Senator—there are many of them. And trembling excitedly, he crossed himself again. "What is the trouble? Who has come? What do they want?" Don

"I demand that you retreat at once."

Luis knew nothing about the threat to confiscate the Rancho and was completely mystified by the servant's announcement and the alarmed understanding of Dolores and Terry. He stood with mouth agape waiting for someone to explain.

"Some men have come who have no right to be here," explained Terry briefly. "I'll go out and see about it. He put a comforting hand on Dolores's arm for a moment. "I would be unwise to alarm your Grandfather unnecessarily."

"Wait, Senator," commanded Don Luis, stepping forward authoritatively. "It is my place to intercede for my host, and defend his honor if they stoie a leg to his right now. He was all puffed up with his own importance.

"Before Terry could stop him he arose from the room.

"Won't you please go?" Dolores clutched Terry's hands in her excitement, and he was strangely happy to discover that her trust and confidence were in him rather than Don Luis.

"Of course, sweetheart!" And because their love was so new and they thought no one was looking they stole a kiss.

Reluctantly Terry left her, but before he had crossed the patio Dolores called out, "Wait—I com-

Her unguarded shout awakened Vasquez from his nap with a start. Listening intently and looking all around, he gradually became more thoroughly aroused. Instinct warned that something of importance was occurring. Tossing aside the robes that Dolores had covered over him, he stood up and leaning against the chair for support, looked around the room. His gaze settled on the covering servant by the doorway.

"What has happened?" Vasquez demanded in a dazed, sleepy voice, measuring the land—think it is their." The old servant had been a part of the small household for so long that he knew all about their reduced circumstances and present difficulty.

"So!" exclaimed Vasquez fiercely, "they have come!" His sleep bewildered brain tried to reason things out, and he wondered

"It's good to see some life around here!" greeted Don Luis cheerfully. Then he caught sight of Terry and stopped. "Pardon me, I did not know you had a guest."

"This is Mr. O'Shaughnessy, from San Francisco," supplied Dolores. "And Terry," she continued turning toward him, "I want you to know, Don Luis, my childhood friend, who presents me with toads and worms and bugs whenever I have a birthday." Dolores laughed merrily.

Rising, Terry extended his hand. He meant it when he said, "I am more than glad to know you."

Don Luis quickly withdrew his hand and twisted his moustache. His eyes glared jealously. "I came to spend the afternoon with you—the remark was directed to Dolores alone—" but was informed that you had gone into town and that your Grandfather was resting. "I have been entertaining myself as best I could in the library." He was a bit reticent in his announcement, having been so surprisingly neglected.

"I am sorry if you have been lonely," said Dolores.

Terry found himself wishing she had not spoken in such a respectful tone. Although he was confident of Dolores' love, it rankled a little to know that the Spaniard had shared her close friendship since childhood.

Don Luis was exceedingly annoyed. Dolores was his—as far as he was concerned—and he resented having a totally strange and apparently eligible, and perhaps interesting, stranger meet him in his home in her presence. He poured out a glass of wine and taking it to a chair a little remote from the table proceeded to sip it meditatively. All three of them, suddenly started by a noise in the patio, turned toward the doorway to see what was happening. The servant rushed in and stopping before Dolores quickly crossed himself and gasped several times for breath before he could speak.

"They come!" he managed to say. "They carry chains—they what had happened to the friend who was going to intercede in their behalf. It was a merciful blessing that he was ignorant of Dolores' trip into San Francisco with Buckwell. The old man's head went up and weakness vanished with his rising indignation.

The Vasquez name and honor—being desecrated; property rights of his first Spanish ancestors in America were being ignored and all because he was old and alone.

The sagging lines in Vasquez's face became set by the sheer strength and power of his determination. His narrow, drooping shoulders lifted and blurred eyes took on a fierce glint.

"They cannot compel me to leave the home of my fathers. What has happened to the laws, created for man's protection?" Vasquez muttered to himself, although the frightened servant cowering in the corner nodded silent agreement to the matter he had known since childhood. With lengthened tottering stride Vasquez strode to the fireplace and lifted his great sword from its niche above the mantle. His thin, colorless lips kissed the beloved inscription on the hilt and the white head bowed as if in prayer. "A Vasquez Avenge a Vasquez!" he said, with a spurt of his youthful vigor, and strode out through the patio, grimly determined to defend his rights.

In the meantime Don Luis approached the surveying crew as they were driving a stake into the hallowed ground of the Vasquez burial plot. "Stop!" he commanded, holding up a protesting hand as he drew near.

The men looked at him, then at each other as if to say, "Well, what have we here?" They had never come across such a romantic figure in real life.

"I demand that you retreat at once."

Don Luis knew nothing about the threat to confiscate the Rancho and was completely mystified by the servant's announcement and the alarmed understanding of Dolores and Terry. He stood with mouth agape waiting for someone to explain.

VOTERS OF DELTA COUNTY

If it be a crime to be 'boyish and undignified' at my age—43 years; if it be a crime to be healthy and active in my practice as a lawyer of the common people, which I have always been; if it be a crime to want to give the people the benefit of my legal training; if it be a crime to run for office against Judd Yelland, then I want to plead guilty and take my sentence. But before doing so, I want to analyze Judge Yelland's reasons for wanting and demanding a SIXTH TERM OF FOUR YEARS as Probate Judge of Delta County. I shall do this in a series of articles, of which this is the first. At this time I want to discuss his claim of SENIORITY RIGHTS to the office.

JUDGE YELLAND'S SLOGAN IN 1928

In his announcement, July 22nd, 1928, in The Press, he says:

"No person will vote against Judd Yelland because he has held the office for twenty years and no person will advance that as a reason for voting against him."

"The people—will decide if a long satisfactory public service will militate against an officer or an employee, or shall be construed in his favor."

CANDIDATE YELLAND'S SLOGAN IN 1908

When Mr. Yelland first ran for this office, and was elected, in 1908, he published his announcement in the local papers, and stated his reasons for being the choice of the electors over Judge T. B. White, who had held the office three terms or for twelve years. Here is what he said in the Gladstone Delta under date of July 11th, 1908, beneath his picture:

"Mr. Yelland says that one of the reasons for entering the race is that the present incumbent, Mr. T. B. White, has held the position for twelve years, and that it is a good, and an American custom, to have a change in any administrative office, and especially a county office, within a reasonable time."

Judge White contended then that as he had performed the duties of the office in an efficient and satisfactory manner for twelve years, he was better able to handle the office and entitled to re-election. In answer to that argument, which is Judge Yelland's own argument now, except that he has been in the office 8 years longer than White, Mr. Yelland is quoted as having said:

"A MAN IS NOT ENTITLED TO ANY CREDIT BECAUSE HE HAS PERFORMED A SWORN PUBLIC DUTY." See Escanaba Journal, Aug. 2th, 1908.

On the front page of the Iron Port, Aug. 29th, 1908, under a large picture of Mr. Yelland, among other things it is said:

"The fact that T. B. White, Mr. Yelland's chief opponent, is seeking the office for a fourth term, after having held the office for twelve years, is a point many voters will consider, and is one of the reasons why Mr. Yelland's chance of securing the nomination is particularly good."

In an editorial by Geo. F. McEwen, publisher, the Iron Port of Aug. 15, 1908, says:

"It seems to be the opinion of a large number of voters throughout the county that there should be a change in the office of Judge of Probate. The present incumbent, T. B. White has held the office for a period of twelve years which ought to be long enough to satisfy the claims of any reasonable man."

The American people believe in FAIR PLAY. Sauce for the goose should be sauce for the gander. Were we a less democratic people now than we were in 1908? The law is the same now as it was then—a term of four years. The right of the people to make changes in their official family has not been taken from them. The right of a citizen to run for the office is still guaranteed to him under the Constitution. The Probate Judge is an elected public official—not in any sense an employee of a private corporation. There is no such thing as political seniority rights. I found that out six years ago when I was told to step out of the prosecutor's office, and give "a young man a chance." That was what T. B. White was told when Mr. Yelland was elected to this office of probate judge 20 years ago. And I think the voters will exercise the same good judgment, and resent being told they can not do so, when they go to the polls on September 4th next.

Judge Yelland assumes a lot of authority and covers a lot of territory when he signs his announcement under the presumptuous nom de plume of THE PEOPLE. I have read of kings and dictators who have proclaimed: "I am the government," but this is the first time a probate judge has had the audacity to say: "I am THE PEOPLE." And more anon for Vox Pop.

Respectfully submitted,

"FIGURES DON'T LIE" HAS WORKING GIRL AS HEROINE

Some years ago a little golden haired girl, her dream of being a great dancer shattered, started to prepare herself to be a private secretary. Today, that same girl, a famous moving picture star, is taking the role of a private secretary in a production by Paramount, "Figures Don't Lie," which will be seen at the Rialto next Sunday and Monday.

Esther Ralston FIGURES DON'T LIE

Esther Ralston is the name of that blonde girl who takes on the screen the part she almost had to take in life.

BACK-STAGE LIFE IN IRENE RICH COMEDY

A vivid picture of life back stage is revealed in "Powder My Back," starring Irene Rich, the Warner Bros. production which comes to the Rialto Theatre next Tuesday. The story centers around the adventures of Fritz, a musical comedy queen, after her show had been closed by a candidate for mayor, whom she later wins after disillusioning his son who also loves her.

Miss Rich is supported by Audrey Ferris, Andre Bernier, the Angel News, Cissy Fitzgerald and Anders Randall.

STARS WITH LEATRICE JOY IN "ANGEL OF BROADWAY"

Seldom has a star been supported by a cast of greater brilliance than is Leatrice Joy in her latest DeMille picture production, "The Angel of Broadway," which will be shown at the Rialto Theatre on Friday next. The picture, which was directed by Lois Weber, one of the best known woman directors in the country, deals with night club and Salvation Army Mission life in New York City, and it is said to be packed with drama and thrills.

Victor Varconi, whose popularity was just enhanced through his successive hits in "The Volcan Boatman" and "The King of Kings," is featured as leading man. Miss Robinson, perennial stage favorite recently lured to the screen, is cast in an important role, while Alice Lake halts her vaudeville career to return to camera work for this production.

PATHOS, DRAMA AND COMEDY STRONG IN POLICE PICTURE

A deft and skillful combination of melodrama, pathos, comedy and realism, told in scenes both colorful and thrilling, makes "The Shield of Honor," the Universal which opens Saturday night at the Rialto Theatre, one of the most entertaining photoplays of the season.

The entire picture is a glorification of the nation's arm of the law, the policeman. He is shown at work and at home, and the picture brings home vividly the dangers and hardships to which the policemen of the metropolitan city force are subjected.

Some of the most thrilling fight and fire scenes ever filmed provide the elemental climaxes of the picture, with additional drama added by two airplanes in a thrilling battle increasing the intensity of the story.

Both Neil Hamilton and Dorothy Sullivan, who carry the love interest, give excellent performances, with Ralph Lewis, the veteran character actor, in one of the greatest character parts.

"As the friend and protector of the noble House of Vasquez," said Don Luis to one of the crew, "I demand that you retreat at once." Drawing himself up with assumed dignity, he scowled menacingly.

The hard boiled Irishman who had been sent along with the surveying crew to drive stakes shifted his quad from one cheek to the other, sized up Don Luis from head to foot and finally spoke through a broad grin. "Aw, heat it—ye young garric bound."

Don Luis's fiery Latin temperament flared and he emitted a volley of Spanish curses.

Forgetting that he had been instructed only to drive stakes, the big Irishman stepped forward to meet the attack with a brawny arm and a hard looking fist.

Don Luis retreated with a few hurried steps, but his high heels caught in the surveyors' chain between the stakes and he fell backward. It was the most ungraceful exit he had ever made.

They had, but were too intent upon the issue at hand to laugh or pause and offer sympathy. The one thing they realized was that Don Luis had not been successful in his effort with the men.

"May I ask if you have legal authority to run lines through this property?" asked Terry of the surveyors.

"Sure—we got our orders today to come right out."

All of the men realized that they were dealing with a different character from Don Luis, and the young spokesman did not hesitate to answer truthfully. Besides, he had caught a glimpse of Dolores standing by Terry's side and was willing to prolong the interview if it meant a longer chance to see her. He did not know girls could be so generous.

"Have you a written permit?" questioned Terry.

"Yes, but it's only temporary." He felt in several pockets before he found it, the certificate. "I'm told it will be made permanent this afternoon."

Terry accepted the paper and looked it over, a worried frown appearing as he read.

Dolores looked over his shoulder and after a moment asked softly, "What does it mean?"

"It is next to the last step necessary to allow the work of destruction to go ahead."

Terry spoke in a low voice, but the men could hear. In fact, none of them could look away from Dolores. Her beauty was like a miracle and against the background of the old rancho she seemed a part of another world. The men also saw that her chin quivered and her eyes filled with tears when the young man explained the permit.

ANNOUNCE NEW STATE TEST FARM AT M. S. C.

A new and important unit in Michigan State College's system of experiment and demonstration farms over the state was announced at East Lansing this week in the form of the Kellogg Agricultural Demonstration Farm, near Coll Lake in Kalamazoo county.

In addition to more than 500 acres of land included in the new state property, W. K. Kellogg, of Battle Creek, the donor, has established a fund of more than $200,000 the interest of which is to be used to maintain agricultural demonstration work on the farm for 99 years. It is said to be the first time that private funds, in addition to land donations, have been given to support farm demonstration work in Michigan.

An interesting wild life sanctuary, now known as Wintergreen Lake, is part of the new farm. This will be kept and developed as a park, open to the public at all times.

M. S. C. is cooperating with Mr. Kellogg on a partnership basis in experiment and demonstration work of the farm, while he has willed the entire project to the state, through the college. Mr. George Cretman, formerly held superintendent for the college farm crops department, has been superintendent of the Kellogg station since last October.

Extensive projects in farm crops, forestry, poultry, and livestock are already under way at the new station, while college departments will cooperate in the expansion and development of many lines of needed work.

"One object of the Kellogg farm is to be always a center of the finest breeding of all live things which contribute to the farm income, both crops and livestock," says Dean J. F. Cox, head of the M. S. C. agricultural division.

"BREAK YOUR MATCH" SIGN IS NOW EXPLAINED

The command "Break Your Match" that has for several seasons been posted on sign boards in, or near the great country of Michigan sometimes sets the less experienced tourist to wondering. Not understanding why the breaking of a match lessens the fire hazard he may neglect to do so.

The explanation is that the time required to break a match between the fingers almost assures that the fire will be extinguished. It is also invariably true that the tourist, if he breaks the match, will come close to burning his fingers in the operation and consequently, in self defense, will see that the flame is eliminated.

Awarded Damages SAULT STE. MARIE—A jury in federal court awarded a judgment of $1,586 damages to Antone Bianchetti, Dickinson county farmer, who brought suit against the Fidelity & Deposit company of Maryland. The suit arose out of the arrest of Bianchetti in 1926 by deputies of Sheriff Lloyd Cleveland. Albert Freeman deputy sheriff under Cleveland at the time of Bianchetti's arrest, was one of the witnesses called for the plaintiff. Bianchetti and his wife, Leah, also testified. Bianchetti told of his arrest, imprisonment and subsequent release when the case was brought to the attention of Russell Post, then chief of the prohibition forces in the upper peninsula. He had accused the deputies and Cleveland of a frame-up, which Freeman formerly admitted. Bianchetti testified that he was not given opportunity to obtain bonds. As a result of his imprisonment, Bianchetti charged that his potato acreage from which he expected 800 bushels was almost totally ruined. Lloyd Cleveland sheriff of Dickinson county following the disappearance of his father, Frank Cleveland and William Dykes under sheriff, were the witnesses for the defense.
