CHAPTER XIV—Continued

Four big, square jawed hunkies slipped into the room and snatched themselves with heavy "persuaders" which the bartender gave them, wedged into the swaying fighters swishing the heavy clubs at any head that was near. Friend or foe, it made no difference.

The brawl was soon over. Few heads can stand up under the tap of a heavy hickory club, especially when wielded by a heavy arm and the rioters in Lu Fong's cafe were no exception. The fighting ceased and sailors and waiters alike sat down and proceeded to nurse sore heads and swollen eyes.

The sailor and the woman who had started all the trouble were on the side by side and wiled their devotion anew, two muzz of beer He grinned at her sheepishly as they toasted each other happily.

The Chinese manager came over to Dolores and Terry where they were standing by the bar and said "Me velly sorry about fight. You come now. Me take you see Lu Fong." He beckoned them out of the booth.

Dolores longed for the serene beauty of the hacienda and would have left Lu Fong's and the side of Frisco, never to return, if her reason for being there had been prompted by any motive other than to avenge her grandfather's death.

Silently, with uncontrollable misgivings, they followed the manager to that mysterious door that was seldom used. It swished closed behind them. Dolores trembled nervously.

Terry took her arm reassuringly with a steady hand that belied his worry. He unbriided himself for having permitted her to come. It was no place for an exquisite young white girl and Terry recalled with a quail of dread that it was reputed easier to get in to see Lu Fong, the head of the Inner Circle, than it was to get out.

CHAPTER XV

Dolores and Terry ate Kidnapped Going down a short flight of heavily carpeted stairs, on which their feet sank into the cushion pads and made no sound. Dolores and Terry crossed a dimly lighted hallway, stuffy with oriental furnishings, to a heavily barred door. Here the manager stooped and looking at them sideways with a suspicious grin raised his yellow hand and gave a peculiar series of knocks on a small smooth panel of the door.

No sooner had his tapping code stopped than a wicket slid slowly open and a Chinaman's face appeared. He and the manager exchanged glances.

"You tell us this thing—why?" questioned Lu Fong.

changed scarcely perceptible nods of understanding. The wicket closed. The manager descended the stairs without saying a word.

"Dolores and Terry were left alone. "Terry, I am afraid," whispered Dolores, she was tremble.

"Oh, these Chinamen always have a lot of mystery about everything they do, but wait until they hear what we have to say—they wouldn't hurt us for the world." Terry appeared more optimistic than he felt.

The door could not open from the outside, therefore it had no knock or lock, but presently it slid into the wall so quietly that Terry and Dolores were not conscious it had opened until their attention was drawn that way by the sound of soft pulsating music from within.

They were on the threshold of the Inner Circle.

The Chinaman whose face had appeared at the wicket bowed low and ushered them in with repeated waves of his hand.

The room was surprisingly large and gorgeously furnished in a sumptuous Oriental style. The fragrance of heavy incense filled the atmosphere and Dolores choked until she had become accustomed to the pungent odor.

A group of elaborately coiffured Chinamen were seated in a semi-circle with their backs to the entrance and it was apparent that they were engrossed in watching something in the room beyond.

No one paid any attention to the bewildered newcomers. It had been somewhat of an ordeal to reach the Inner Circle and they thought it strange to be ignored after their arrival.

Curious to know the source of the strange music and to see what the Tong men were watching so intently, Dolores and Terry, of one ac-public. The Oriental imperturbability of the others around the table was also broken. A general rustle of interest seemed to fill the room. San Toy strained forward from her seat in a vain effort to rearrange pillows and stood like one turned to stone. She waited for Dolores' next words with perfectly controlled eagerness. Her Master's secret had been discovered—and by a girl! "You tell us this thing—why?" questioned Lu Fong with quiet slowness.

"Because I feel that Senor Buckwell is responsible for my Grandfather's death!" Her head came up high and her voice rang out clear and strong.

You, there, no one worrying about what aviation is going to do until we get the motor car problem settled.

U.P. SPORTSMEN MEET AT MUNISING

IMPORTANT SESSION OF U. P. ORGANIZATION WILL BE HELD NEXT MONDAY

(Munising News) One of the largest conventions ever held in Munising will take place here on Monday, September 24, when the annual meeting of the Northern Michigan Sportsmen's Association convenes at the Alzer County Club. Plans for the meeting are rapidly rounding into shape according to officers and committees of the Munising Sportsmen's Club who are working in collaboration with officers of the Upper Peninsula organization.

The convention will be featured by a big banquet at the Beach Inn and a business meeting at the Alzer County Club. Indications are that the convention will be largely attended, as the session is an important one, coming as it does just prior to the biennial session of the state legislature. It is expected that many proposed changes in existing game and fish laws will be considered and acted upon at the next legislative session.

Details of the banquet and entertainment are rapidly being worked out and it is expected that the delegates, guests and members of the Sportsmen's associations will sit down on Monday noon, September 24, to a sumptuous repast. An especially attractive program of entertainment is being arranged, including a local orchestra and a quartet from out of town.

The principal speaker for the occasion will be Senator Herbert I. Rushton of Escanaba. Invitations also have been forwarded to George Hozarth, director of the conservation department; Norman Hill of Sault Ste. Marie, a prominent member of the conservation commission; and Martin R. Bradley of Hermansville and Fred R. Kinz of Cheboygan, members of the legislature.

HERD RECORDS PROVE PUREBREDS ARE BEST

Dairy production records from 1,829 Michigan herds show that purebreds produce more milk and butterfat than grades and that the season in which a cow freshens has a marked influence on the yearly production of milk and butterfat.

Purebred cows had an average annual production of 8,550 pounds of milk and 334 pounds of fat, according to the latest records, while the grades averaged 7,713 pounds of milk and 313 pounds of fat. The value of the milk would be 20 dollars more for the purebreds over the year.

GET HIGH YIELDS WITH NEW BARLEY

Spartan barley, developed by the Michigan State College and released for the first time last spring to growers of the state, made good in its first season in competition with other varieties grown by Michigan farmers.

Thirty-three members of the Michigan Crop Improvement Association in different sections of the state received seed of the new variety from the farm crop department of the college last spring for increase purposes. They agreed to sow the seed under good cultural conditions and to have the crop inspected under the rules of the crop improvement association, in order that a supply of good seed might be available in the spring of 1929 for other growers.

The high yield for the new variety, according to the Crop Improvement Association, who obtained by F. A. Landy, of Coleman, Midland county with 62 1/2 bushels per acre. Alfred Graeber of Frankenuh, was second with a yield of 61.4 bushels per acre.

Spartan barley is a high yielding, early maturing two-row variety with very stiff straw and smooth heads which break off easily when the grain is threshed, its chief advantages are increased yield, ease in handling because of the smooth heads, and stiff straw which enables it to stand up under conditions in which barley would ordinarily lodge.

THE DELTA REPORTER, GLADSTONE MICHIGAN

A Weekly Panorama of Events in the National Capitol by Peter Keegan, Special Correspondent for Delta Reporter

NO MATTER what happens in the presidential contest, the eighteenth amendment and the enforcement act remain unamended. Congress is now 75 per cent dry. No informed person expects a wet Congress to be elected in November. Congress is certain to remain dry. And since it is Congress, not the President, who passes on legislation, there is not the slightest hope to a wet that prohibition will be knocked out as a result of the 1928 congressional election.

THE ASSOCIATION against the Prohibition Amendment, a well-organized organization with headquarters in Washington and with many of the country's leading business men as directors, has no expectation of electing a wet Congress this time. It entertains a hope that at some time in the future prohibition will be changed to such an extent that the wet may make a gain in Congress and eventually gain control. This week this anti-prohibition association is sending out circulars inviting contributions to its propaganda fund.

THIS CIRCULAR states: "We will not get there. We will get there with help, we will get nearer there than ever before."

THIS IS a frank admission that Congress, following the 1920 election, will still be dry. The anti-prohibition association hopes to gain a few wets, but it realizes that to gain the necessary two-thirds majority is a man's size job and not one to be realized even within a few years.

THE ANTI-prohibition association is not wasting its time on the presidential contest. It is applying its efforts to the congressional contests. It knows that before the eighteenth amendment can be repealed it must have a Congress two-thirds wet in each of its branches and that each branch of the legislature must be two-thirds wet in three-fourths of the states. Congress is now 75 per cent dry, but it needs to be only 34 per cent—one-half per cent more than one-third—dry to prevent the wets getting a 66 2-3 vote.

WETS AND dry have been giving a lot of attention to the presidential contest and saving little about the congressional contest. But not so with the Association against the Prohibition Amendment. It is giving all of its attention to the congressional election.

HERBERT HOOVER does not intend to take any chances on spilling the beans. He does not plan to engage in excessive talk; he will limit his campaign addresses to four. He is receiving twenty invitations daily to speak in different parts of the country, but he is rejecting them as fast as they pour in. He will repress himself on all subjects within only a few addresses and let it so that. He might make a break that he spoke every day; he will take no such risk.

PARTY REGULARITY means too much to many dry Democrats and wet Republicans to permit them to get sufficiently excited over a wet and dry issue to kick over the traces. Nathan C. Frank, wet Republican, of St. Louis, has announced he will stick by his party and support Hoover. Recently, in a close contest, he was defeated for the Republican senatorial nomination in Missouri. He ran as a wet. But though he is as strongly opposed to prohibition as Al Smith, he will remain a Republican voter. On the other hand there are many prominent dry Democrats who are sticking with Al Smith, believing that Congress will remain dry.

THERE will be no campaign fund scandals this year. Each party is publishing the names of all contributors and each party has announced that it will spend nothing beyond the fund raised and will permit no deficit to be raised after the election is over.

WHO'S AFRAID? Most certainly business, big and little, is unconcerned about the presidential election results. This is the first time in years that business has not been nervous in a presidential year. But radicalism, which threatened in other years, has died out. The country as a whole is too prosperous to permit a radical to get attention. So business as usual is the 1928 election slogan. In fact there are indications of a considerably improved business situation with fall near at hand. Merchants, in anticipation of good trade, are increasing their advertising space in newspapers.

PENNSYLVANIA HAS the heaviest registration in its history and the interesting thing about it is that of the total registered vote, 42 per cent are women. It is doubtful if any other state has as big a percentage of its feminine voters registered.

RADIO SALES are running big in every section of the land, reports indicate. The fact that the voices of the "big men" of the country are to be heard in this campaign is said to be responsible for the increased interest in radio. Farmers are especially heavy buyers of radio. He cares more about the music than speeches unless the speaker ranks high in his opinion.

Deer Takes to Scow MEMONINEE—A big buck deer took shelter on a pile driver scow about 200 feet from shore at installation after it had been chased by dogs. Hundreds of persons passing along the bayshore drove the deer out on the scow where it endeavored to conceal itself behind the pile driving equipment. One of the dogs that had chased the buck endeavored to climb onto the scow after swimming out in nearby water, but a hook to the jaw for his efforts. The deer came bounding down to the shore with the dogs in pursuit and pounced straight out into the bay. After swimming about 500 feet he turned about and came back to the scow which fishermen use in placing pound net stakes. It had little difficulty in getting aboard the scow which was almost level with the water.

Principal Resigns IRONWOOD—James E. Blue, principal of the Luther L. Wright high school for the past two years, has resigned his position here to become principal of the senior high school at Rockford, Ill. Mr. Blue came here in November, 1926, as successor to Leon C. High. He came from Warsaw, Ind. where he had been principal of the senior high school for several years. In his new position, Mr. Blue will have charge of a senior high school with an enrollment of approximately 2,200 students and a staff of 96 teachers. His successor has not yet been named.

Uncove's Old Tradev SAULT STE MARIE—Long-forgotten tragedy of the fur-trading days was believed to have been uncovered. A prospector reported that he had found two skeletons and a number of rusted old-fashioned muskets in a cave north of Bruce Mines. The skeletons were lying by the side of a small well-hidden lake, and until he found them, A. B. Frazer, the prospector, believed he was the discoverer of the lake. Frazer said he was positive no one had visited the lake since the men met their death. The muskets were of a type which has not been used in the north for fifty years. No other articles could be found to indicate when the men died or what caused their death.

Seeking Narcotics MEMONINEE—Federal narcotic agents of the internal revenue department were in Menominee on the trail of an enormously valuable consignment of opium believed to have been smuggled into the United States from the Orient. The opium is supposed to have left Seattle, Wash., in one of more of metal sealed freight car loads of tea imported from Japan and one of the cars was consigned to the Carpenter-Cook company of Menominee. The check of the car here failed to reveal narcotics of any nature. The cars reached here in a Canadian Pacific road steel boxcar with seals apparently unbroken. It contained about 500 chests of tea valued in excess of 10,000 and shipped to the local wholesale house direct from the Japanese tea fields. The consignment was checked aboard ship in bond at Yokohama. At Seattle it was checked into the freight car. Unloaded at the Carpenter-Cook warehouse, the 500 chests were checked by Joseph I. Bell, Chicago, narcotic operator.

Drives Drunk; Crash! Houghton—Driving a car stolen from in front of the Siller Hotel, Hancock, J. W. Foster, cigar lighter salesman, crashed into three cars in front of the Knaut hotel, Houghton. The stolen car was owned by Joseph Payne, of Hancock. Foster apparently in a highly intoxicated condition, was arrested by Sheriff John T. Rowe and Deputy James Faulkner, and a half-pint of moonshine whisky was found in his possession. He was taken to the county jail for questioning, and charges against him probably will be preferred. He refused to give his address other than to state his home is in North Dakota.

MICHIGAN DAIRYMEN SET PACE FOR WHOLE COUNTRY Michigan dairymen are setting a pace for quality herd production, according to a recent classification made by the U. S. Bureau of Dairying. For herds producing more than 500 pounds of butterfat, Michigan leads all states, having seven herds in this classification. In the second class, for herds producing between 400 and 500 pounds of butterfat, Michigan again leads. The survey shows that 61 1-2 per cent of the herds tested in 82 Michigan Dairy Herd Improvement Associations during 1926-27 averaged more than 300 pounds of butterfat

MONOXIDE GAS STILL IS VERY DANGEROUS

"With the millions upon millions of cars in daily service, much has been said about the danger of monoxide gas," states L. C. Preston, local Chandler distributor. Despite the continued caution not to run an automobile engine in a garage, particularly with the doors closed, there continues to be deaths from this cause. But now comes a statement from a more authoritative source, which affirms with considerable stress every previous warning which has been broadcast.

The Public Health Service at Washington just recently finished a survey to ascertain whether automobile exhaust gas constituted a health menace in large cities. In stating its findings, the health service had this to say about garages: "The great danger to life is unquestionable in the small private garage, containing one or two cars. Under any circumstances the discharge of an automobile exhaust into a roofed enclosure should be regarded as a hazardous act."

There is nothing ambiguous about this statement. It means but one thing; that death lurks within a garage for any motorist who permits his engine to run longer than is necessary for driving the car into the garage and leaving it. One must not forget that carbon monoxide is an odorless gas. It cannot be detected as one would identify any of the other gases which have distinguishable odors. An exhaust gas has an obnoxious smell, but that does not indicate the carbon monoxide content. Because of this it presents itself stealthily and wrecks harm. So the only way to combat it is to exercise caution at all times. Run the motor only in the open and when you do start the car in the garage, to back it out, be sure the doors are wide open above.

In 1860 the Hoovers migrated to Iowa, where they and their neighbors founded the town of West Branch. 4. Before clearing the land for their farms, these Quaker pioneers built a Meeting House.

Mr. and Mrs. Gunnar Von Tell and daughter, Miss Lillian, of White Hall, Mich., left Wednesday for their home after spending a few days visiting with old friends here. They were guests at the Peter Peterson and C. E. Hawkins homes.

Our Reporter Observes--

THAT folk step on the gas to get through the arterial at Ninth and Delta before the green light changes when they sight it about two blocks off.

THAT trucks with cattle tied within, enroute to the Fair, were familiar sights over the week end.

THAT our Tourist Park still has a few nightly occupants, but when the weather is chilly you don't feel a bit sorry that you're going home to your own warm bed.

THAT the duck hunters have been out in pursuit of their prey, and were almost tempted to try and coast them down on our main street after last weeks heavy rains.

THAT the opening of the bowling season offers another amusement in Gladstone, and affords an opportunity for Red Van Covel and Billy Renard to again occupy the limelight.

THAT housewives have a bone to pick with the weatherman when it rains on Monday, but when it rains on Tuesday, and some more on Wednesday, they think a lot of things.

THAT Chief of Police Lindahl is flying around with a brand new uniform, velvet color and "everything."

The Misses Vivian Bizeau and Pearl Rothschild have returned from Flint where they visited with relatives and friends.

RECALLS DAYS WHEN GAS WAS SERVED WITH FUNNEL AND BUCKET

was little competition in the gas business, there being only two companies here offering it for sale.

The Hansen-Jensen Oil Company has grown with the progress of the car business, from their team drawn gas tank to four trucks, and still maintaining one team; they have two service stations at Escanaba, and the one in this city.

Mr. Lausen makes trips daily to his gas distributors in the neighboring villages.

Mr. Lausen likes the business after his sixteen years experience, likes the opportunity it affords for meeting up with the many people, even though most of them are in one grand rush to get their gas and get off again.

It's the advantage that each company does that sells the idea to the public that their brand is better than the other fellows.

"Can You Mix Gas?"

(Can you mix different gasoline) is a question that many women drivers ask us," he said. "Their tank contains some gas from one station, and they think ours, under a different name, won't mix, and their car will probably be doing all kinds of stunts as a result. It mixes alright." Mr. Lausen ended with a chuckle.

Motorists expect a great deal of service. In fact, more service is demanded in the gas business than in most any other line of business. As comes up, they want their gas right away.

They may be merely looking for a bound for no place in particular but most of them are in a rush as though trying to catch a train. Occasionally you find the easy-going individual who pulls up and is willing to sit patiently for half an hour, but he's not the average by far.

Women, Not So Bad

In the gas business you are in a position to judge the driving ability of both men and women, and from Mr. Lausen's observations the women behind the wheels aren't quite as bad as their reputation would have you believe. He admitted that occasionally a woman driver will run up on the curb when she drives in for gas, but he notes that a good many men drivers who aren't experts either.

There's lots of jokes about about the ignorant woman driver, for instance the one who called for red oil for her tall light, but Mr. Lausen says that "few there are who make 'boners' like that."

There is a big tourist trade during the summer months and there are still a large number of tourists passing through Gladstone. The Hansen-Jensen Station has a rest room for tourists and caters to that trade.

"There is a big difference in the many kinds of gas on the market," Mr. Lausen stated. "The quality determines the quick start. It is ordered by the carload by the individual companies according to certain specifications of quality, and the names are given it by the Company."

HAS TWO-YEAR JOB WITH BYRD'S EXPEDITION

Fifty-five picked men with Commander Richard E. Byrd of the United States Navy have left for the Antarctic. They face six months to two years in this desolate country with their meager elements, and during that time every domestic article from sewing on buttons to washing clothes, must be done by the men themselves.

Out of 3,000 applicants, fifty-five volunteers were selected for the trip after passing rigid tests and physical examinations. Equipment of all kinds was selected with the same care, and the Mavaz washer, with its sturdy construction, cast aluminum tub and many other outstanding features was chosen as the washday servant.

Not only the success of the adventure, but the health and life of the men depend on proper equipment and careful methods of living. Clean lines keep away disease, and so they are prepared to wash their clothes in Mavaz.

On the icy slopes of the Antarctic Continent, when the men dress in heavy skins and furs, the Mavaz will not only be practical, but on the supply ship and during the long journey through the tropics, and on farther south where the red sun and the thermometer drops nearly out of sight, there will be many days when the Mavaz will find plenty to do keeping clothes fresh and clean for fifty-five men.

Low Cody and Allen Prindle, who have already made fame for themselves as a co-starring team in such comedies as "Adam and Evil" and "Tea for Three," garner for themselves fresh laurels in "Wickedness Preferred," their new co-starring production playing at the Rio Theatre Friday, September 21.

A few years back nobody would have thought of these two as comedians. Low was busy wrecking film houses and Allen was a sophisticated player in dramas of the Elmer Gantry type.

Today they are creating quite as many laughs as any other team in the comedy field and in "Wickedness Preferred" even outdo their own reputations for broad comedy.

Low is seen in the role of an author who writes his own adventures from data gathered from encyclopedias. Allen plays the role of the wife who takes dictation, looks up the facts for Low's lies and recognizes in him a soul hungry for romance but unable to live up to his self-created reputation as explorer and adventurer.
