Failure of His Farm Project Made A. R. Watson Turn To Teaching

A. R. Watson, superintendent of the Gladstone Public Schools since September, 1927, made the big step of farmer to school superintendent, and he didn't definitely decide on the latter vocation until after he had completed his education, and had again given farming a try.

After spending his youth on a farm in central Indiana, completing his education at Walbath College, Crawfordsville, Indiana, and teaching science and coaching athletics, he felt that he wanted to try his hand at farming before giving it up entirely as his work in life. The love of the soil brought him back to Indiana again. Six weeks after he had purchased a farm, including live stock the farm depression came, and in that short time, Mr. Watson says his property depreciated over one half in value.

"At the end of three years I was willing to admit that farming was a failure, and that there was no future in it, and so I quit," he said. Mr. Watson was born about thirty miles from Rockville Indiana July 15, 1893. His parents were of English and Scotch descent, and had many of the characteristics and ability of the early settlers of America. His great grandfather was among the settlers of Jamestown, Virginia, the family coming from Bedfordshire, England. Some of his descendants were members of the Daniel Boone followers, they later moving up into the central states. His father was a farmer and dealer in livestock.

Knew Meaning of Work
"At an early age, I knew what a day's work meant," Mr. Watson said, and told of at the age of twelve, taking a plow and doing a man's work in cultivating and plowing in the fields. At that time the (Continued on page five)

ALL SET FOR HIGH CARNIVAL

MINSTREL SHOW, JITNEY DANCING, BABY SHOW, FISH POND AMONG ATTRACTIONS

Plans are complete for the High School Carnival which will be held Saturday night. The carnival will open at seven o'clock, continuing until eleven. There will be attractions galore to keep one busy and entertained as he strolls from place during the entire evening. Among the attractions planned is a minstrel show, picture gallery, baby show, old-fashioned country store, no way, 2 fortune telling booths, baby show, fish pond, and other novelities. A tea room, which will serve lunches to the hungry folks, will be open for service.

A big free attraction is a burlesque baby show, under the direction of Mrs. Hagle Quatstrom which will take place in the Gymnasium at 7:30. There is but only one performance.

Jitney dancing in the Gym will be held during the evening, with Jim Grant's seven piece orchestra furnishing the music. The various attractions will be located mainly in the Senior high school building in the basement.

Among the main features of the carnival will be the minstrel show. Enough of the evening is being sponsored by Mrs. Rolland Hale. It will be presented in the High School Assembly room, and will have several performances, the first at 8:15.

The play is in two acts, the first act taking place in a deserted street scene in Constantinople, and the evening. Here the colored quartet top to bottom their hardships resulting from an enforced cancellation of their engagement to sing at the colored church. Being financially oppressed, and night coming on, the situation is not at all encouraging. At this point, Ekzemo, a perfect lady with a room to rent, appears upon the scene and offers what seems to be a welcome solution to the problem, but which, in the second act proves to add to the troubles of the quartet.

MISS HARRIS ATTENDING ECONOMICS MEETING

AMONG THOSE WHO SERVED

WHO SWIPED C. A. CLARK'S BICYCLE ANYWAY?
C. A. Clark doesn't look natural afoot after all these years, winning the pedals of his bicycle, but that's what he's had to do these last few days.

Good reason why—someone had the audacity to deliberately walk off, or ride off, with his bicycle. Mr. Clark had it near his front porch, but it mysteriously disappeared. That's the second bike he's lost in his bicycle career, and he's hoping that the guy who swiped this one will return it mighty soon.

This fellow went to war too, and we wonder how many can reconcile the cold, reserved yet altogether kind expression. Yes, he's still around Gladstone. We'll tell you who it is, next week; that is if you do not guess the name meanwhile.

"Practice Makes Perfect"

CONCERT ORCHESTRA IS LYCEUM NUMBER

NORTON, JONES AT AIRWAYS MEETING

DELEGATES FROM EIGHT U. P. COUNTIES FORM AVIATION COMMISSION

H. J. Norton and J. T. Jones were delegates from Delta County at the meeting of representatives of eight upper peninsula counties held Tuesday at Marquette for the purpose of furthering aviation developments in this territory. The meeting was held in the office of the Upper Peninsula Development Bureau. Through the discussion it was learned that there has been actual progress in the establishment and plans for the perfecting of air ports and suitable landing fields.

A permanent upper peninsula organization was established, the U. P. Airways commission, which will work through local and county boards in speeding up the development of aviation. Officers of the commission elected were: President, Frank L. Betts, Menominee county; Vice President, Wilder M. Rich, Ironwood City; Secretary, Harold Lindsay, Escanaba.

The county boards will have as many members as desired and will cooperate with the Board of Supervisors and County Road Commission. Each county will be entitled to one delegate and one vote at meetings of the major organization. Among the speakers was K. L. Sawyer, mayor of Ishpeming who pointed out the need of state legislation to give county boards of supervisors authority to spend public funds for the building and maintaining of county airports.

George E. Bishop, Secretary Manager of the U. P. Development Bureau made a suggestion that a flight to all cities in the upper peninsula where there are suitable landing fields, and that one of two noted pilots, to aid in the acquainting the general public with aviation generally.

C. Harold Westcott, president of the U. P. Airways Inc., the only commercial aviation concern in the upper peninsula, pointed out that already there are ten airports or landing fields here, and told of the plans of his organization to establish an inter-city airplane service for passenger and express service.

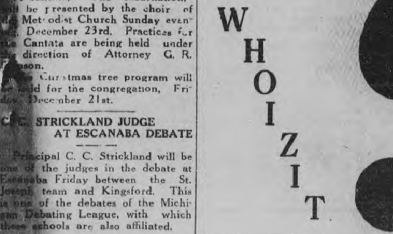

Reports were also heard from the various county delegates present who told of the prospects being forward in their localities.

Chats with The Editor

SOME conditions are hardships simply because they are accepted as such. Take, for instance, winter. Some folks look forward to it with a pleasant anticipation. They are the wise ones. More look with a feeling almost of dread. They are the losers. This writer has on other occasions attempted to present the editorial writer for our friend for the time. I'll let another way, hopeful that additional citizens will get the inspiration. It will be profitable reading. Go over it now and the next time you hear a snarl about winter, bring up the thought that is suggested "Winter's Friendship Has To Be Won."

"Yes, Winter is like certain people we all have met. Fear him, yield to him and he's a tyrant. Brave him, fight him and he's your friend for life. He's like that youngster in one of Owen Johnson's books. Tough McCarthy. Tough never made a friend until he had a fight with him.

"Old Man Winter really is Young Man Winter. But he's old enough to love both youth and the young spirit. Those able to do him battle, if young, need never grow old. If old, they may remain young. It only we think, in most of us are able. There are so many Tough McCarthy who is Young Man Winter.

Offer shrek and jaw to his worst in break winks. Dare him with skates or on the corner lot in a snow-balling contest with the kids. Dely him in toboggan or bobled. If hockey is too vigorous, watch the athletes play that bloodstaining game. Properly prepared in dress and otherwise for rough work, hand Winter a blow for blow. It becomes thus the privilege of the tortoise northern clime to know a grand friend whom those unfortunate who live half lives in the far too southern clime never know."

THIS talk about being tough and rough brings up another story, this one related by a noted sport writer. It is about Annie Rockne, the famous coach who has made football history at Notre Dame. Rockne is known as a "man's man," one who is none too particular about the finer points in dress or speech, and who detests the effeminacy of things, especially when assumed by those of the masculine gender.

"The coach was looking over the lineup of prospective football material. He came to a youngster who looked none too heavy.

"What position do you play?" queried Rockne. "I play tackle," was the reply.

"Kinda light, yes, and kinda tough," was the rejoinder. Rockne looked pleased. "All right, you're going to play tackle," he declared with a degree of finality that seemed surprising.

THE newspaper circles in the upper peninsula will miss Arthur D. Wood from the fold. Mr. Wood, former judge of probate of Alger county, and with Henry E. Temple, publisher of the Munising News, was among the "old reliables" until nearly two years ago when he moved to Lansing to become Commissioner of Pardons and Poles under the Green administration. In that capacity he has served as efficient and effectively as he did in his former connection in this section of the state.

THE Munising News has been purchased by Herbert E. Case, a former upper peninsula man, who in recent years has been affiliated with a daily newspaper in Detroit. So that in losing Judge Wood, the fraternity has the opportunity to welcome a former resident, and the welcome is extended most heartily and cordially.

There is every indication that the News under the new publisher will continue as one of the peninsula's reliable weeklies. In the deal, Mr. Case also took over "Wright's Weekly," another Munising weekly issued for many years by Robert Wright, merging it with the News. Mr. Temple remains as superintendent of the mechanical department of the plant.

JUST the thought of possible unsettled times is all that is necessary to cause the trouble that is feared. It is to be removed the fear that there is now talk that the Hoover administration, when it comes into power, will organize the creation of a three billion dollar "prosperity fund," available for public work and other projects held in reserve, for release when unemployment threatens to upset the balance. There has been considerable comment since the idea was first broached through Gov. Ralph O. Brewster of Maine, and there are those who say "it can't be done."

very serious proportions. In passing, permit me to say that I hope to be able to see some time the production offered made in these columns that Senator Couzens would eventually take his place as a real leader in the Senate. Prospects are that he will function well in the Hoover regime which will be progressive, unlike those of the last two administrations. Couzens is a man with foresight, concentrated energy, forceful in methods and unafraid to put plans into effect. He has the wealth that is necessary to the master of his own destiny without the need to cater to the petty political by-plays that so many politicians resort to.

THOSE who want to be ahead of the times will want to understand more about this "prosperity fund," so that we quote some of the explanations from Senator Couzens, given in response to questions as to how it was proposed to go about it.

"The way in which the plan actually would work is illustrated by the bill introduced by Senator Wesley E. Jones and now pending before the Senate, entitled, 'A bill to create a prosperity reserve and to stabilize industry and employment by the expansion of public works during periods of unemployment and industrial depression.'

"I have not studied this bill closely, it may be inadequate; but its general purpose, I think, is what I am certain in my mind, that is, to permit the President to accelerate work on authorized public projects in times of depression.

"No money actually would be appropriated and held idle for this purpose. The procedure, as I see it, would be simply this: in a time of unemployment the President would authorize work to be done on existing Government projects beyond the appropriations actually provided when Congress reconvened.

"Second in importance of the misconceptions of the Hoover plan is the assumption that only the men actually given jobs on public work would benefit from it, whereas the direct public employment, as I see it, is only a minor factor.

"Taking up slack, an equal benefit from increasing construction of public buildings and roads, for example, would be the added demand that would be created for steel, cement and other building materials, thus taking up the slack in the industries producing these things. And of course the more money put to work the better market would be provided for all classes of goods.

"The idea, in other words, is not to do such things as to stimulate employment generally, and thus improve the market for textiles.

"No centralized administration of an unemployment reserve, scattered in a multitude of state and local governments, is possible; nor do I conceive such centralization necessary for successful operation of the plan.

"All that the President and Congress can do is set an example by passing a measure along the line of the pending Jones Bill, providing a reserve in Federal employment, and to do what they can to induce state and local governments to do likewise.

"Unemployment, of course, is to a great extent a local problem. When there is unemployment among automobile workers in Detroit very little help would be given by the Government spending work on a reclamation dam in Arizona.

THAT meeting being held in Lansing attended by conservationists for the purpose of going over the codification of Michigan's game and fish laws should set an encouraging example. There are also other two many kinds of sportsmen to ever hope that there will be agreement on laws enacted for the protection of the wild life and the conservation of natural resources, but certainly there is every reason to believe that those who attend such meetings will come away with a feeling that there are angles other than those in which they might be interested to be considered. They must draw the conclusion that the only way to hope for a peace that will be carried forward intelligently and long enough to produce results, it is to have a good man at the head of the conservation department and leave him alone.

George R. Hogarth seems to be just such a man. He appears to have a sensible idea about conservation, with a business sense. Suggestions from interested citizens have been gratefully acknowledged and an honest endeavor has and is still being made to coordinate all forces promising improvement. What more could the people expect?

Once, not so long ago, I was considerably wrought up about the need to outlaw the spear. I am yet, but since noting that the Department was being run efficiently, with the aim of getting the best results, have been satisfied to wait and see what the Department determined should be its policy relative to the spear. In going over the proposed changes in the laws that will be carried forward, it is to be hoped that the Department, now it is to be hoped that members of the Legislature will be as progressively inclined, and adopt the suggestions as made.

"En Passant"

Observations and Comment by Alice Fox

A GUY CAN'T help laughing when he sees somebody else fall down on the slippery pavement...

"IS THERE BAPER OUT DERY?" a voice grunted and choked over the telephone last Friday morning...

"Baper, you know vat I mean, b-a-p-p-e-r," it dawned upon us that he was inquiring about yesterday's issue.

We were sorry that he had been misled of course, and he got the usual explanation that his paper was either blown away or picked up by some passerby...

"Baper, b' like in baper, b-a-p-p-e-r. Dat's all I want," he told us. "Baper to write, Office secrets!"

FOLKS ALWAYS WAIT for letters. No matter who has them, have some one please, be it friend, relative from whom they're anxious to get word through the mails...

They're the folks who don't have sidewalks in front of their homes to permit delivery. They stand on first one foot, then the other, if there is a waiting line ahead of them...

Some go away satisfied, and others with the hope that the mail they're waiting for will be here tomorrow. Some are so enthusiastic about their message that they stand by the desk or window to read it before thrusting it into their pockets and leaving the office.

TWO WOULD-BE westerners were enjoying a western picture at the Rialto Theater the other night. "These little pine trees aren't natural," one said to the other referring to the sage brush.

"Whoof! Wham! watch those horses go," he exclaimed when a herd of wild horses stounded.

CALVIN COOLIDGE paid the state of Virginia the sum of $13.50 last week for a non-resident hunting license so that he could hunt at Swansboro Country Club in the Blue Ridge Mountains the two days following Thanksgiving.

E. W. Starling of the Coolidge staff went to Richmond to confer with Game Commissioner Major A. Willis Robertson, and to secure the hunting permit.

JUST BEFORE President-elect Hoover said "Wild Bill" Donovan, Assistant Attorney General of the Coolidge Administration, and the "next Attorney General" in the press, he said he went to California to confer with Will Hoover pertaining some movie cases, but everyone knew that Hoover had sent for him, his long time friend and confidant, to discuss things with him before departing for South America on his "Good Will" trip.

"Wild Bill" only grinned when newspaper men pleaded with him to admit that he would be the next Attorney General. Said Donovan: "Thanks, folks, for the compliment I want to make it plain that Mr. Hoover has not asked me. That's a fact."

Postman Frank A. Miller gives hearty endorsement to tuberculosis Christmas seals and the health work they stand for, but warns nations of the made to take care where they place the stickers.

"Put them on the backs, not the fronts of letters," he says. "The work they stand for, but warns nations of the made to take care where they place the stickers."

Although sale of the Christmas seals was not begun by the Michigan Tuberculosis Association until Friday of last week, Mr. Miller reports that many letters handed at the Gladstone postoffice already bear the stamps.

The brilliant colors of the 1928 seals are in harmony with the approaching Yule season. Blue, green, and red predominate in the design, which features the "Ship of Health" and the double-barred cross, symbol of the crusade against tuberculosis.

That the beneficial effects of applications of lime to sour soils continue much longer than was expected or formerly believed, has been demonstrated by experiments conducted by the soils department at the Michigan State College.

On a field at the Cass County farm, typical of the sandy loam of southwestern Michigan, an acre of land was given an application of about three tons of limestone at a cost of $13.23. The value of the crops grown on this acre each year, since 1917 when the lime was applied, has amounted to an average of $9.06 more than the value of the same crops grown on an adjacent acre which was not treated with limestone. This soil still contains sufficient lime, according to the soils specialists.

A total additional profit of $99.66 has been procured from this acre of land over an eleven year period for an original investment of $13.23. The soils department specialists believe the results of this experiment to be a convincing proof of the fact that the sandy loam of southern Michigan responds to lime.

They state further that liming sour soil is probably the most economical of the soil treatments practiced at the present time.

CHAPTER XXI Continued

Picking his way carefully across the threshold he stumbled over a body that lay just inside the doorway. He paused and looked down. "Dolores!—Thank God I have found you!" His cry of joy quickly changed to grief as he looked at the silent figure of his loved one. "Dolores! Speak to me, dear. It is Terry. He bent over and kissed her tenderly. She stirred uneasily. The movement, slight as it was, galvanized Terry into instant action and lifting her gently in his arms, he carried that ray of sunshine that still flickered through the upper world to the fallen debris. Terry called loudly for help. His shout was answered almost immediately by the soldiers who were advancing toward him. With his precious burden held lightly in his arms he staggered forward to meet them. He had found Dolores and she was alive! Nothing else mattered, not even the hazards of reaching the upper world.

CHAPTER XXII

Today

The ashes of disaster have blown away. The Barbary Coast, Old Chinatown and that mile of the Cocktail Route, are no more. A new and glorious city arose, as if by magic, from the still smoking ruins of a city whose name was forgotten in the bustling, thriving San Francisco of today.

Seven months after the city had ceased to smoulder, almost to the very day, the worthy citizens of San Francisco literally sifted their loins to purge the city of corruption. They had long been familiar with the graft that was rampant in municipal politics and their indignation had been the subject of much denunciation.

On the fifteenth day of November, 1906 the District Attorney's office held the Mayor of San Francisco and one of his political bosses under indictment for extortion. The same day President Roosevelt and the Federal Government announced to the press that they would immediately prosecute certain San Francisco officials for appropriating relief funds. San Francisco's house cleaning had begun in earnest.

The little town of Searchlight, Nevada had contributed the sum of $1,085.00 for the relief of the destitute sufferers in the stricken city. This amount in cash had been turned over to Wells Fargo express for delivery. The package was addressed to the Mayor of San Francisco in person with the request that it be delivered to the relief committee.

The express company secured the Mayor's signed receipt for the money. But for some strange reason the Relief Committee never received a penny of it. "Choulia's Graft" the papers dubbed it.

About this time the worthy Mayor felt that the climate of Europe would be much better for his constitution and booked a cozy suite under the Canary line "Caracas," stopping at the Waldorf in New York on the way, where he lived luxuriously.

It was but a short time after this that His Honor the Mayor was indicted. The Grand Jury returned five counts against him, among which was one from the Poodle Dog that charged His Honor with demanding money from the proprietor, one Tony Banco. Bail was fixed at $50,000.00 or $10,000.00 for each count.

Buckwell was dead and beyond the reach of the man made laws. A Higher Court had passed judgment on his case and the verdict had been written. But his followers had been well taught and the real truth of their machinations was held up to the light of public view for all to see. Buckwell had been the sinister power behind San Francisco's graft. Even the Mayor had been his willing tool. Buckwell had found him when he was the leader of an orchestra in a San Francisco theatre and he had been literally swept into office at the head of the Labor ticket by the sheer weight of Buckwell's influence.

While Buckwell had ruled San Francisco by proxy, he had ruled it to his profit and to the profit of those who played the game with him. The indictment of his followers spells the beginning of the end of corruption. It was a disappointing twist of fate to the reformer that he could not have lived to witness the demolition of the elaborate system of graft that he had labored so hard to build up.

At the old Vasquez rancho overlooking the new San Francisco that was rising from below it, Dolores was making a slow but steady battle back to health. The exhausting strain of her series of terrible experiences had shattered her nerves. Terry's daily presence did much to reawaken her in an interest in what was going on. Also the old man's faithful attendance upon her left nothing to be desired. He was her devoted slave.

"Have you even been sorry that the Vasquez name is no more?"

Buckwell's name was never mentioned. The occasional visits of Brandon were the only reminder of the dreadful past but Brandon too had seen the light. His skilled legal brain had become aligned with those who were struggling to remove all traces of the former condition. Brandon's services in connection with the Vasquez Rancho had been invaluable and it was largely through his efforts that Dolores still retained possession of her ancestral acres.

The period of Dolores's recuperation was one of struggling impatience for Terry. He loved her passionately, yet with a tender devotion that brought the tears to her eyes. Their marriage was only a question of time, yet his ardent love was hard to keep in check during this enforced interval. At night when he wheeled her chair in from the rose garden, to the big living room, his evening ritual was, "Dolores, dear, when can we be married?"

And as she gave him the tenderest of all good night kisses, her response came soft and low. "It won't be very long now, Terry." Years have passed. No trace of the Old San Francisco remains. From out the pile of brick and mortar have arisen a canyon of great office buildings. The finest of police departments patrol the well paved streets and the political ad-

Under the new master's energetic direction the broad Vasquez heritage has become a booming hive of industry. Fields are plowed and vineyards are in wonderful state of fruition.

As Dolores and Terry stand, on the hillside overlooking the city Terry steals a shy look at her and asks mischievously, "Have you ever been sorry that the Vasquez name is no more—since you exchanged it for O'Shaughnessy?"

Dolores smiles up at him gently as she shakes her head, saying, "No, Terry! But see, the Vasquez blood flows on—perhaps some day to accomplish even greater deeds than in the past."

He follows the direction of her upraised arm and their admiring gaze rests upon the old peon. He is harnessed to a small wagon with a tiny piece of rope. A heavenly smile of satisfaction is on his face. Seated in the wagon is a husky four year old youngster. On his head is perched a paper soldier's cap and in both chubby hands, almost more than he can manage, is raised aloft the great sword of the Vasquez.

BUY CHRISTMAS SEALS

CHRISTMAS EVE and everything in the small town of Hobbsville was bubbling over with the true holiday spirit. Brilliantly lighted Christmas trees, holly wreaths and balls shone through the windows of most every home in town; while each church joyed in its usual Yuletide celebration.

A snow storm the day before had clothed the town in white, as if in preparation for the great holiday. The children just knew that it was sent on purpose, so that Santa Claus could come in his loaded sleigh and fill their stockings.

But amidst all this joy and beauty there was one sad family, who lived at the far end of Main street. They had just received word that their eldest son, Ray, had been lost on the field of battle. Father, mother and the four remaining children were seated within the living room in silence while the happy celebrations were in full swing on all sides of them. Each one was filled with thoughts of other years and how happy they had been. Each saw visions of the heavily loaded Christmas tree gleaming in all its beauty, while their son and brother presided over it in his Santa's outfit. Thus they sat speechless, with lumps in their throats, until bedtime. One by one they retired broken-hearted to finish their visions in the fat-of-dreamland.

Who's quietness covered its cloak over the little town and the children's stockings were all waiting for Santa Claus, the midnight flyer pulled in, dropping off a lone passenger—a soldier boy. He had come to surprise his family on the glorious Christmas holiday. Not having heard of the false report of his death, he had come to be their Santa Claus, as of old.

As he was hurrying home he met an old schoolmate, who told him the sad story of how his family had mourned, thinking him dead; and that they had not joined in the usual holiday festivities.

Suddenly a beautiful surprise filled his consciousness, and with the aid of his friend he scoured the town from end to end, frantically unweaving all the stockings. Loaded with gifts, and with his friend carrying the Christmas tree, they proceeded homeward, while the full winter moon looked down upon them, knowingly.

Bidding his companion a Merry Christmas, and thanking him heartily, he crawled in through the basement window and carefully ascended to the living room. Here he trimmed the tree, hanging all the smaller gifts upon its branches and placing the larger ones upon the floor beneath.

When it was completed he lay down upon the old couch of his childhood and dreamed happy thoughts. He, too, felt a lump in his throat, but his was a lump of gladness, as theirs had been one of sadness.

Here he remained in silence, his heart filled with joy, until Christmas morn. As he beheld the sun glimmering upon the snow-covered scene, making its diamonds every where, he realized that it was to be one of the most gorgeous Christmas days he had ever witnessed. He hurriedly dressed himself in a bright new Santa outfit, his heart wildly thumping as he did so; and he had just seated himself beneath the glowing tree, when he heard his dear old mother's soft, familiar footsteps upon the stairs.

He listened breathlessly while she descended and passed through the hallway into the kitchen. Then soon the old familiar odors of coffee and griddle cakes came floating in. He could hardly contain himself, as he wanted to rush out and smother her with caresses. With sheer willpower he remained silent until the family was called to breakfast.

Then little Ruth stole into the living room to see if by chance Santa had left her anything. She gave a scream of delight as she beheld the marvelous load of gifts, and Santa himself actually sitting beneath it.

The next moment the whole family stood wide-eyed, gazing upon the scene before them, too surprised to utter a single word.

Thoughts of a practical joke by their friends came to them, and they hardly knew what to do or say. Tears came to mother's eyes with the memories of her lost son. Just as mother was going to speak, Roy, their own son, pulled the mask from his face and smiled a "Merry Christmas."

Christmas Presents and Home-Made Things

ONE of the annually recurring problems of the Christmas season is: "What unusual and attractive gifts are simple and inexpensive enough for the children to make?" Here are a few suggestions:

Among the easiest is a lovely perfume made by sticking an apple with cloves until it is completely covered, and appears to be a brown ball. It will last for years, lending a delicate fragrance to lingerie or handkerchiefs.

The hostess who entertains often will welcome a scrap book of party ideas, games, refreshments, etc., which may be clipped from the newspapers and magazines. These may be grouped as to seasons—Christmas, Halloween or Thanksgiving. How-to-do-something items and recipes also make good collections. The latter may be either arranged as menus or classed as soups, roasts, etc. These books should preferably be of the loose-leaf type, and in any case, the pages should be numbered and the items indexed.

A dainty pinholder may be made from six empty match boxes, pasted together to form a chest of drawers. Cover the front and back of each inner box, glue the outer boxes together, and paste a colored cover around the top, bottom and sides. If cloth is used, unless it is exceptionally heavy, it will be necessary to paste a cover of white paper on first, so that the painting on the match boxes will not show through. To each drawer attach a hook, snap, button, pin, etc., to serve as a handle and to indicate its contents.

Not alone women, but men, too, appreciate handkerchiefs. Some are made of crepe de chine or georgette and edged with lace. Colored threads may be drawn in there, although this work is easier in pongee or linen. To make them exceptionally distinctive and seasonal, in place of an initial or monogram, trace and embroider the signature of the person for whom they are intended.—Helen Galsford

Perhaps He Was

Dora was interviewing the man of her heart in the privacy of the drawing room.

"On the previous evening her fiancé had asked permission to marry her. The father agreed immediately, but his wife was not so cordial and did not approve.

"I'm afraid mother is going to be a bit awkward, Dick, dear," began Dora. "She thinks that because you are an actor you're effeminate."

"What?" he enquired, "compared with her, I suppose I am."

The Case of the Day-Coach Passenger versus the Elimination of the Pullman Surcharge

ABOLITION of the Pullman Surcharge is once more being urged for passage by the Congress of the United States.

ADOPTION of the Robinson (Senate) Bill involves direct losses to the railroads in revenues aggregating $40,000,000 per annum and this loss of necessity will have to be made up in some manner. There are three expedients only:

- (1) Increased passenger rates for all passengers whether in the day coach or in the Pullman or Parlor Cars.
- (2) Restricting passenger service on certain lines.
- (3) Charging this expense to the shippers of freight.

ANY one of these three expedients is undesirable, unfair from the community standpoint, and not in the best interests of society as a whole.

AFTER all the Pullman service—for passengers traveling in sleeping or parlor cars,—is a high class hotel service on wheels, that a great part of the traveling public does not demand nor expect.

THE surcharge—the 50 per cent. additional—tacked on to the regular Pullman charge—is the special revenue derived by the railroads for the performing of special service to the passengers who want to travel in extra comfort and luxury. Such passengers require:

- A heavier capital investment in cars per capita.
- Two and one half times the space that is allotted to the passenger in the day coach.
- An average of twelve thousand two hundred and sixty pounds of car as against 8,800 pounds per passenger riding in day coaches.
- Parking of Pullman cars before train departure from and after arrival at the terminals involving considerable extra work and heavier terminal costs and requiring the holding, for that purpose only, of the railroads' highest-priced lands in the larger cities.

Pullman cars being often moved one way empty—as for instance, in the California and Florida service, which means a double road haul for one fare and in many cases to take care of these movements, cars have to be hauled extra distances.

Railroads hesing to guarantee earnings on every line of Pullman cars operated and contracting for their use over a period of years.

ALL of these obligations are extra expenses upon the railroads which are not involved in the handling of day coach passengers.

IT IS a principle of good business and good government to make the user of a service pay for that special service. That is followed in the higher charge for air mail as against the ordinary service.

THE Interstate Commerce Commission has twice refused to abolish the surcharge as being contrary to the basic principle of the greatest good to the greatest number, the guiding standard of all of that body's decisions.

The Interstate Commerce Commission is a properly constituted court that represents the interests of all the people. Why should its decisions be upset for the benefit of the few to the prejudice of the interests of the many.

Any person interested in the conservation of the fish and game life of the state is extended an invitation to attend this session and join the discussion.
