First baby of 1977
FOUR DAYS AFTER THE NEW YEAR, Schoolcraft County finally had its first baby of the year. Shannon Marie was born to Mr. and Mrs. Pat Allen of Germfask, on Jan. 4 at 3:35 p.m. She weighed 6 pounds and 4 ounces. Mrs. Allen is the former Pamela Lynne Olsen. Under the Chinese Calender, the new baby is considered born under the sign of the Dragon, thus she was born in the Year of the Dragon. Until 1582, most European countries used the Gregorian calendar which celebrated New Year on March 25. (Tribune Photo)

Icy drought Lower water tables dry up some wells

by Mark Eisenlohr

If you go to draw water for a bath and the water fails to come out, don't be alarmed. Your well has only dried up. About the best thing that can be done is to relax, and take solice in the fact that you're not alone.

Water wells all over the central western Upper Peninsula have been drying up due to near draught conditions last year, according to Elsmore Eltzroth, Michigan Department of Natural Resources geologist.

"The main problem has been the general lowering of water tables due to the lack of precipitation this past summer," Eltzroth said.

It sounds complicated enough but simply put it means that the water is gone, or it's dropped down a few feet.

Relief according to Eltzroth, can range from lowering the intake pipe on the pump to having a new well drilled.

Drilling may help in some instances, says the geologist, but he cautions about widespread redrilling to reach water.

"The wells should be individually looked at by local health departments and checked by the local well drillers," he said, "before a decision is made on drilling a new well."

Eltzroth emphasized that drilling may not always be the answer.

"There is a possibility of hitting salt water which would ruin the water and in some cases the water just isn't there," Eltzroth said, in a telephone interview Tuesday.

"Local well drillers should be used," he said, "because of their familiarity with the area and their willingness to find the best possible solution to a person's specific problems."

The United States geology survey team keeps 12 observation wells in the UP. According to Eltzroth, 10 of these are below recorded water levels.

The problem wells seem to be those that are drilled where there is rock near the surface, called rock wells, and the small hand-driven wells, that usually are shallow, running from 30 to 50 feet deep.

Eltzroth indicated that the problem will continue until the spring thaw can rejuvenate water tables.

"We're not over the hump yet, he said pointing out that the worst is yet to come.

William Cole, owner of ABC Well Drilling, said too, that it will definitely get worse before it gets better.

"January and February are the driest months of the year," said Cole. "The ground is frozen and there is just no recharge going down."

Both ABC and Kopecky Well Drilling of Gulliver, have experienced above normal drilling work since the area wells have began to dry up.

John Kopecky suggests first the people check their pumps to make sure they are in working condition. He said that may save the well owner a lot of time and money.

One Cooks family will have to drill their well deeper if they want to reinstate the

TEMPERATURES DIPPED TO BELOW ZERO last week and snow fell on Manistique and most of the central Upper Peninsula as the new year was being ushered in by celebrants all over. State Police reported no accidents as a direct cause of the New Year celebration. The low temperatures did cause some area residents problems in starting cars throughout the week, however. Area wrecker owners enjoyed the temporary rush for their services. It was below zero Tuesday, Jan. 4, when this picture was taken of Main Street, Manistique, around 6:30 a.m. (Tribune Photo)

Circuit Judge swears in 4 county commissioners

The Schoolcraft Board of Commissioners held its annual organization meeting Tuesday night to swear in new board members and elect officers for the coming year.

Four new members—Daniel Klarich, Kenneth Mortenson, Edward Way and Lindsay Frenette—were sworn in with the rest of the board.

Circuit Court Judge William Hood administered the oath to the board and prosecuting attorney, John Thompson.

Ernest Hoholik was reinstated as chairman of the board with Earl LeBrasseur voted in as vice-chairman.

Hoholik called for "cooperation from every member to make it easier...for all of us" during the upcoming year.

Following the election the board approved the rules and regulations and policies of the county with some minor modifications.

Several township supervisors present at the meeting confronted the board for help in completing their tax rolls.

According to Luis Lauzoa, supervisor of Manistique Township, the supervisors of four townships currently without assessors asked the county for help last October in completing the rolls.

"We have been out on a limb since then," said Lauzoa. "At least the board could do is tell us yes or no."

The rolls were to have been completed before Dec. 31.

The four townships affected are Manistique, Seney, Germfask and Thompson.

The supervisors asked the board to recommend that the county hire the assessors and pro-rate that cost among the townships, county and schools.

Townships are currently picking up the full cost of assessing homes. According to Lauzoa, that bill cost Manistique township $4,000. He said the township's share of tax money revenues came to about $3,000.

"1.1 mill is all we have to operate with," said Lauzoa, "the costs are more than the revenues. Maybe the county should chip in too."

Board chairman Ernest Hoholik told that supervisors that "we'll have to find some solution because we are obligated and will certainly try and help."

That matter was referred to the equalization committee meeting. No date was set for that meeting.

In other action:

The board approved a motion to invite a speaker to the next board meeting to explain the tax abatement program for industry.

US-2 study expected in '78

A study for the improvement of Highway US-2 from M-177 in Mackinac County west to Rapid River will be ready for public discussion by mid-1978.

That is the status of reconstruction-relocation plans for the highway, according to the Michigan Department of State Highways.

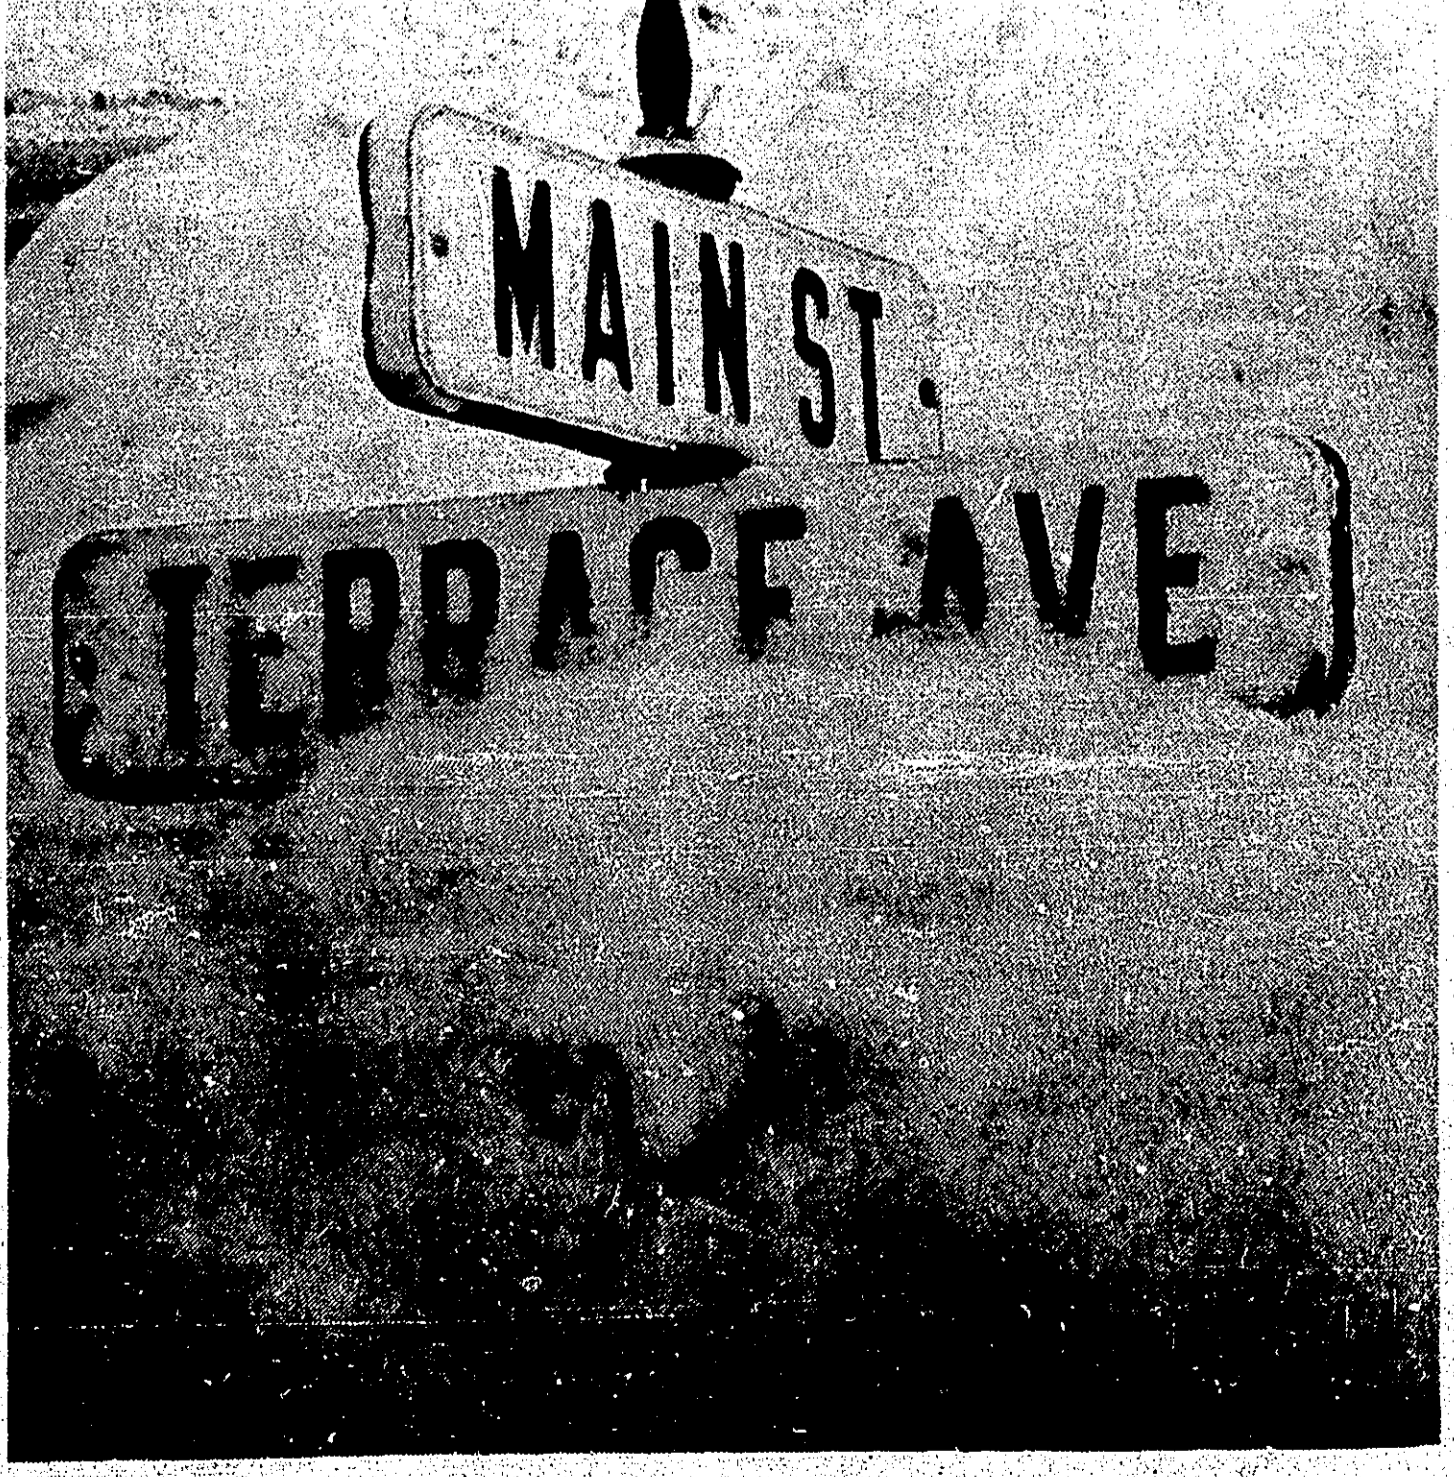

"The project to replace the US-2 bridge over the Manistique River in the city of Manistique is at a standstill," the department said in an announcement to news media. "The MDSHT is currently awaiting affirmative action by the city of Manistique on the alignment and the proposed replacement package for the marina property required for the construction of Alternate D."

Last fall, the City Council voted in favor of Alternate E, which called for a more costly bascule bridge (drawbridge) near the mouth of the river.

Currently, location team efforts are being concentrated on the portion of US-2 between St. Ignace and M-117.

For that stretch, three alternatives are being studied, including:

- expanding existing US-2 to a four-lane divided free access highway along the present alignment with a five-lane treatment through the communities of St. Ignace and Brevort.
- to provide four-lane relocation of US-2 in the sand dune and cut River areas.
- to provide four-lane bypasses of St. Ignace and Brevort.

THIS OBSCENE SCENE was recorded near the Schoolcraft Memorial Hospital. At first glance this photographer thought Manistique had received a record amount of snow in a very short time. Actually, the signs were sitting in a snowbank (about 2 feet above the ground) waiting for a post to return them to normal position. (Tribune Photo)

Weather stops cars cold, but there's ways to beat freeze

by Mark Eisenlohr

The recent cold weather has prompted an onslaught of no-start cars. And with winter just getting underway it may be a long time before your car is pre-heated in the morning via solar energy.

And it could be a costly winter depending on where you live in the area and how well your car has been cared for; it may cost you at least $7 every time you have to call a wrecker to start the family car in the morning.

There are four businesses listed in the yellow pages that advertise wrecker service.

Curran Chevrolet-Oldsmobile in Manistique does the largest business in local wrecker service.

Last week, during the two day cold spell, Curran's had two wreckers going all day and into the night, according to Leo Curran.

"Most of the calls we go on the car won't start initially and they wear the battery down," said Curran.

Curran offered some advice to the car starting blues.

"When you try to start your car, its got to start right away or you're hurting yourself. You'll get the plugs wet if you keep pumping the gas and then they will have to be pulled out and cleaned," explained Curran.

Minor's Service Station in Cooks hasn't been helped much by the onslaught of "caritis."

Mildred Minor, who with her husband own and operate the station, said that the past couple of weeks have been busy but that she hasn't been able to send the wrecker out because her husband has been in the hospital.

Boyd Widdis of McNally Motors in Manistique said the cold weather has helped his wrecker service "considerably."

"We were going pretty much all the time, mostly with cars that wouldn't start," said Widdis.

Widdis also suggested block heaters, a good battery and a tune-up to help ease those hard-to-start-in-the-early-morning car problems.

McNally does its largest business with guests at area motels who aren't prepared for this type of weather.

Auto Body, Lake Shore Dr., Manistique, does some business in wrecker service, but a large percentage is with towing.

For those who don't want to pay the price of a wrecker, area stores offer numerous aids to help start cars in the cold weather.

Stores offers heaters for the heater hose ($16) and heaters for the radiator hose ($6) there are also heaters that install in your car's dip stick.

Federal Supplemental Benefits increasing

A federally funded program of supplemental unemployment insurance benefits, which permitted recipients to collect up to 13 weeks of additional unemployment benefits, was modified beginning Dec. 13, 1976. Michigan Employment Security Commission, MESC, Director S. Martin Taylor, has announced today.

Commencing under the Federal Supplemental Benefits (FSB) program is being increased in accordance with federal law from 13 to 16 weeks. The unemployment rate average at or above the percent for 13 consecutive weeks ending Dec. 4, 1976. When the insured unemployment rate is above the percent, benefit payments are increased to 16 weeks.

claimants may collect up to a total of 26 weeks of benefits through existing unemployment programs. When the rate is between 5 and 5.5 percent, new claimants may collect only up to 13 weeks of benefits.

This includes up to 16 weeks of regular benefits followed by up to 10 weeks of Extended Benefits (EB) payments followed by a 10-week FSB. Prior to Dec. 13, claimants were eligible for only up to 13 weeks of FSB.

After Dec. 13, persons filing a new claim for FSB will receive payments equal to their regular payments.

National Association of Realtors predicts increase in construction

WASHINGTON, D.C.—The 1976 downturn in commercial and industrial construction has continued through the first three quarters of 1977 although the picture should brighten in 1977, the National Association of Realtors has predicted.

The reason for the slowness in this area compared with the surging housing market is that the commercial and industrial building suffers from restrained consumer spending, the association's Department of Economics and Research reports.

Noting department data, association Executive Vice President H. Jackson Pontius said, "The future should brighten in 1977 as businesses begin to more fully use their capacities and develop need for more space."

A second indicator that the picture may be improving is the upturn in floor space under new contract, Pontius said.

Another bright spot also exists in business figures, Pontius said.

Although manufacturing capacity showed almost no increase in 1976, a modest 7.4 per cent gain in 1976 is expected.

Pontius said that after reaching an all-time high of $23.2 billion in 1974, commercial and industrial construction put in place dropped to $20.8 billion in 1975 and slipped to a seasonally adjusted annual rate of $19 billion in September.

This figure is below the $19.9 billion annual rate in August, he added.

Book available on iron mines in Menominee County

Since March 1972, The Mid-Peninsula Library Federation has been reprinting books and publishing scripts about the Upper Peninsula. It is the fifth in a series of reprints of the volumes, all of which are available for borrowing at member libraries including the Manistique School and Public Library.

"The Iron Mines of Menominee County, Michigan."

Near Waucedah on U.S. 2, a palatial landing skirts a few modern pits of earth. These pits and a few run-down houses and "Grange Hall" are the remains of the Green Mine, the first of the immense Menominee Range, eventually yielded 253 million tons of ore.

The story of the Green Mine and piece-meal in four historical volumes in Michigan's Upper Peninsula recently printed by the Mid-Peninsula Library Federation: "The Iron Mines of Menominee County," "Centennial History of Iron Range," and "Nelson Powell and the Greatest American Authorship of Iron."

Although perplexing in its geographical inaccuracy, the most engaging and intriguing piece of the tale is told by the Eleazar S. Ingalls, pioneer Menominee settler, in his 1871 pamphlet on "The Mines of Menominee County, Michigan." Ingalls, obviously financially interested in the Green Mine, exhorts investors to subscribe to his proposed Deer Creek Marble Quarry Railroad and to limit against "small bear politicians," "talk of land grabs when applied such enterprises without distinctive humbug."

The western terminus of the proposed Deer Creek and Marble Quarry Railroad was the mine discovered by Thomas Bartley Breen in 1866. The Green Range Ingalls and Salmon P. Saxton formed first of several companies that went trying to extract a profit from the Waucedah end of the Menominee Range.

James Waters on MTU Dean's List

INTRODUCING THE PRIVILEGED PAYMENT ACCOUNT

It's six ways better than ordinary checking

- 1 We'll pay you for having it. When you use Privileged Payment Drafts to pay your bills, or for any reason, you can dividends (interest) on the unused balances that remain in your account throughout the dividend period, just like your share account.
- 2 It's Free. There's no monthly transaction charge, no minimum balance requirement. With an ordinary checking account you usually pay a monthly service charge or else you're required to maintain some sort of minimum balance.
- 3 It's easier to reconcile. If you're hassled with filling out check stubs — storing and filing cancelled checks — we have a solution for you.
- 4 Select the overdraft option and write yourself a loan — on the spot. We feel that, if you qualify, you should have the privilege of being able to write a draft for more than your balance — for things that you need or unexpected bills. That's why we offer you our overdraft option.
- 5 It's more convenient. When you open a Privileged Payment Account, you're putting most (or all) of your personal financial matters under one roof — your credit union's. There's no more wasted time scurrying to the bank for checking and then to the credit union for the rest of your money matters.
- 6 You're investing your money with people you know. We know you. You know us. With us you're a face and a name — not a number. That's because you're a part owner, not just a customer. And part owners have privileges that ordinary customers don't.

Because you deserve something better than ordinary checking.

Emeralds' defuel Rockets, 62-59 for fifth win

RAPID RIVER—Their court was as tight as an air hockey table and the Rapid River Rockets were almost impossible to play against. But the Manitowish Emeralds prevailed Tuesday night, 62-59.

Playing in the final 30-minute gym where spectators feel caught near the boundary lines, the Emeralds seemed to have trouble determining the dimensions of the playing area and trailed by as much as 15 points in the first half.

The Class D powerhouse Rockets managed to outpace the Emeralds with a full-court press and increased the visitors' lead to 34-24 before the Emeralds came back during the first two quarters.

Coach Ken Patz's team switched to a 1-2-2 zone in the second half and Joni Piatulka and associates outmatched Rapid River to provide a first lead in the third quarter ending at the fourth and tied at 41-41.

Piatulka scored his best offensive performance of the year, dumping in 31 points, including 11 free throws.

Rapid River's Emeralds... The Rockets seemed determined to give Manitowish out of the gym, playing out in a 1-2-2 zone in the second half and Joni Piatulka and associates outmatched Rapid River to provide a first lead in the third quarter ending at the fourth and tied at 41-41.

Emeralds' Patz responded with three buckets and a free throw to close the margin to 20-13 with Piatulka seeing two buckets and feeding Mark Masters for the other one. The Rockets' Kevin Bonaventura sank a 16-footer with 34 seconds left, but Berger connected on a jumper and Piatulka missed a 16-footer with one second left to set the margin at 28-23.

Patz's Emeralds seemed to change personalities with the Rockets joining their five starting bench and Manitowish taking command of the court.

Berger opened the period with two jump shots to close it to a 20-13 gap by 4:54. Two bucket layups and a pair of free throws returned it to an eight-point difference.

Black Bears even mark with conquest of Rock

The Big Bay de Noc-Black Bears evened their season record at 4-4 Tuesday night with a 72-59 win at Rock.

"We never could get on track until the fourth quarter," said Coach Dave Pelletier, whose Black Bears exploded for 34 points in the final period to wipe out a five-point deficit.

In a very physical and foul-ridden contest, the Bears netted 30 of 40 free throws while canning only 21 field goals.

Big Bay held an 18-11 lead at the first stop, but Rock knotted it at 31-31 by halftime and pulled out to a 43-38 advantage going into the final frame.

Then some clutch shooting by Kevin Miller ignited the Bears' offense and Big Bay put the game away. Miller collected 28 for the night, followed by Greg Pelletier with 12 and Mark Tatrow with 11.

In a make-up game last Thursday at Perkins, the Yellowjackets jammed the Bears' scoring machine and came up with a 80-68 triumph.

Shooting 70 percent from the floor in their tiny gym, Perkins pounded out a 43-2 lead before the Bears closed it to 45-32 by the halftime break. Big Bay clawed its way back to within three points, 67-64 with two minutes to go in the fourth period, only to see the comeback effort slip away.

Kevin Miller had his best individual offensive showing of the season, leading all scorers with 34 points. Greg Pelletier meshed 16 in a supporting role.

Big Bay de Noc-Roder 1-2-3-4; Lang 4-0-1-8; Tatrow 10-0-1-2; K. Miller 12-10-4-34; J. Miller 1-2-2-4; Pelletier 8-0-5-16. Totals: 27-14-16-68.

Perkins-Nuerohr 4-4-4-12; VanDamme 12-0-3-24; M. Lauscher 9-3-4-21; Nelson 5-3-2-13; B. Lauscher 3-3-2-9; Stevenson 1-0-1-2. Totals: 34-19-15-60.

Emerald JV's romp past Rockets, 76-59

The junior varsity Emeralds snapped up their fourth straight victory Tuesday night, 76-59 over Rapid River.

It was the fifth win of the season against two losses for Coach Bob Ryan's squad.

The Emeralds buried the Rockets with their best first half of the season. Manistique ran up a 22-8 first quarter lead and expanded it to 46-26 by halftime. The Rockets outscored the Emeralds 33-28 in the second half, when Manistique subs saw plenty of action.

The well-balanced Emeralds scoring blizzard was led by Jim Curran with 18 points, Gary Keteik with 17, George Danko 12, and Tim Tufnell 11. Mark Majestic paced the Rockets with 23.

Cars stopped cold . . .

Jumper cables ($6) can be bought, which come in handy if you have a friend that doesn't mind lending his car to start yours.

Various companies also market starting fluid ($1) most of which have an ether base. The fluid is sprayed into the carburetor.

However, all these things are unnecessary according to Dan Barber, owner of the Gambles Store in Manistique.

"The best thing that can be done to insure that the car starts is to have a good heavy-duty battery ($40-$50) and some good light weight motor oil ($2) and a tune-up," said Barber, echoing the thoughts of area garage owners who agree that the best defense against cold weather is a tuned-up car.

For the do-it-yourself man, tune-up parts for your car will run about $12.

Light weight oil is 10W or 10W-30. The colder it gets, the thinner the oil becomes. As the engine warms, up, the oil becomes thicker.

When asked what products were available for starting a car without calling a wrecker, Bill McDermott, manager at Manistique Automotive Supply, 191 River, said "There really isn't too much available for starting the car once you get to that point (where the car won't start.) About the best thing you can do is borrow a friend's car and jump the battery."

McDermott also said that the best starting "trick" is preventive medicine.

"Well-tuned car, good battery, in short, preventive medicine before you get to the point where your car won't start," McDermott suggested.

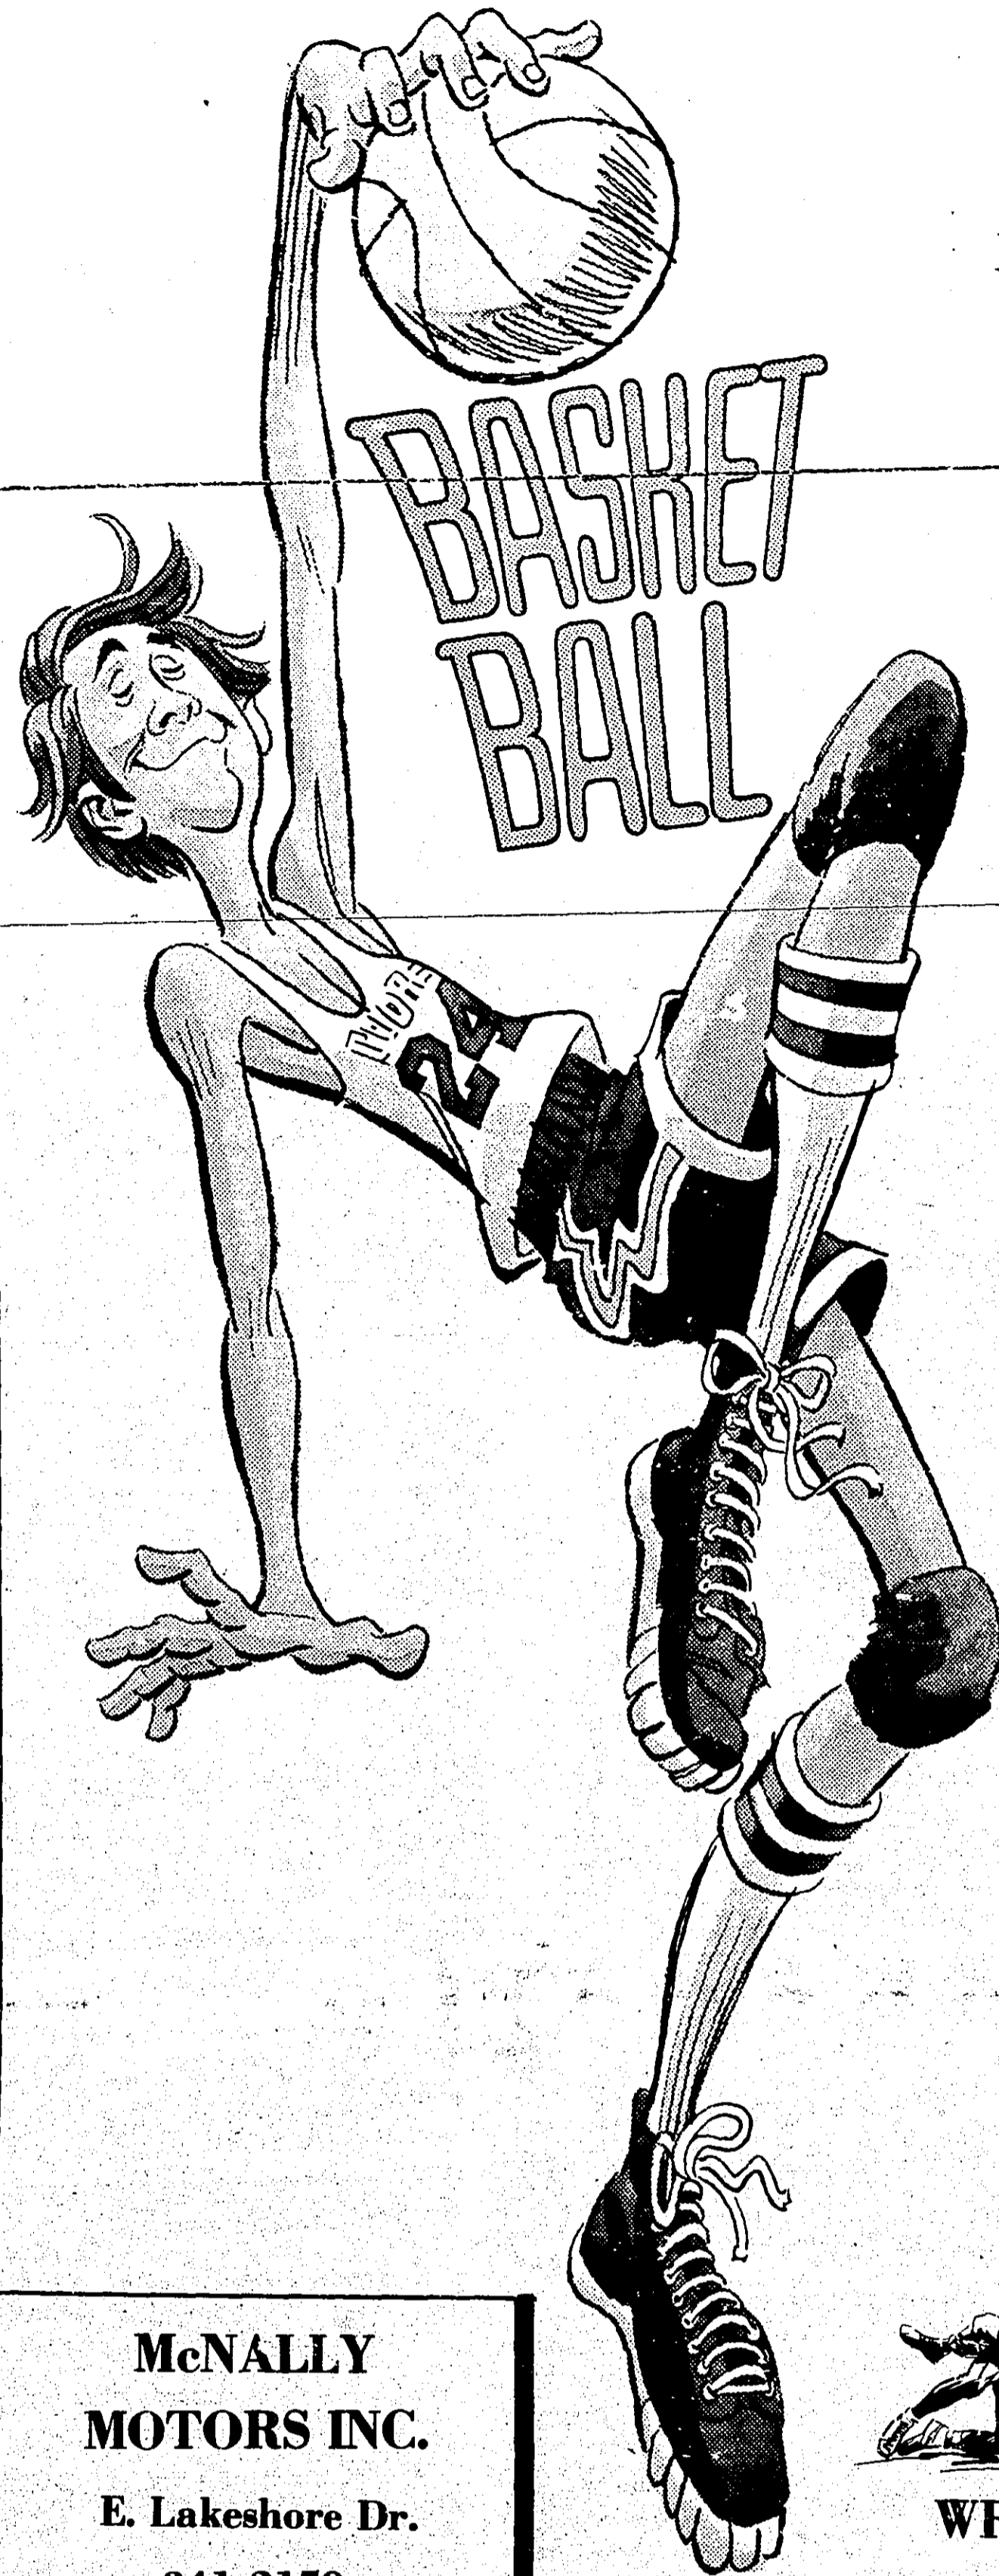

With the various heaters available McDermott feels that the ones that keep the coolant in the engine warm and circulating are the best. He added that the dip stick heaters are probably the most inefficient.

So, if your car is in need of a tune-up and you are having problems starting it the best bet is a tune-up and some good old fashioned preventive medicine.

It's not that bad if you have to plug your car in every night.

Boy de Noc expands music classes

FOR THE FIRST TIME since the origin of Boy de Noc College Area residents and college students will be able to receive instruction in violin and other stringed instruments. Current offerings will include instruction in violin, viola and cello. All other instruments and sizes to be added later. Instruction will begin when classes begin for the winter term on Jan. 14. Dr. Robert King, the new director of music at the college, will teach violin and viola at the college and preparatory level while Leonard White, violin, will teach both at the preparatory level. Dr. King came to Boy de Noc College with extensive experience as a teacher and professional musician. While still a member of high school, he was awarded first prize for a performance of the Mendelssohn Violin Concerto in the annual contest for students in the State of Ohio. He was also awarded a scholarship at Oberlin College and continued his studies for a master's degree from Eastman where he studied with André de Bériot. Head of the violin department and a pupil of the famous violinist Eugene Yaegle.

Historical manuscripts from U.P. regions needed by state society

Manuscript materials between immigrants in Michigan and their family and friends in Europe are the object of a search presently being conducted both here and abroad.

Francis Boudin, director of the project and a staff member at the Michigan Historical Collections in Ann Arbor, will be traveling to the Upper Peninsula in January to seek help for the search. Persons who have access to or knowledge of former newspaper organizations, travel diaries and other material valuable regarding the grand old land country are encouraged to make his acquaintance.

He would also be interested in locating material currently held by families, colleges, libraries, societies and persons who would like to be added.

Boudin will be traveling to the Upper Peninsula in January with Frank Williams, the director of the Historical Society of Michigan. Williams will be presenting General Business Certificates to Upper Peninsula businesses at least 10 years old to contribute with the local Business in Michigan Bureau this winter.

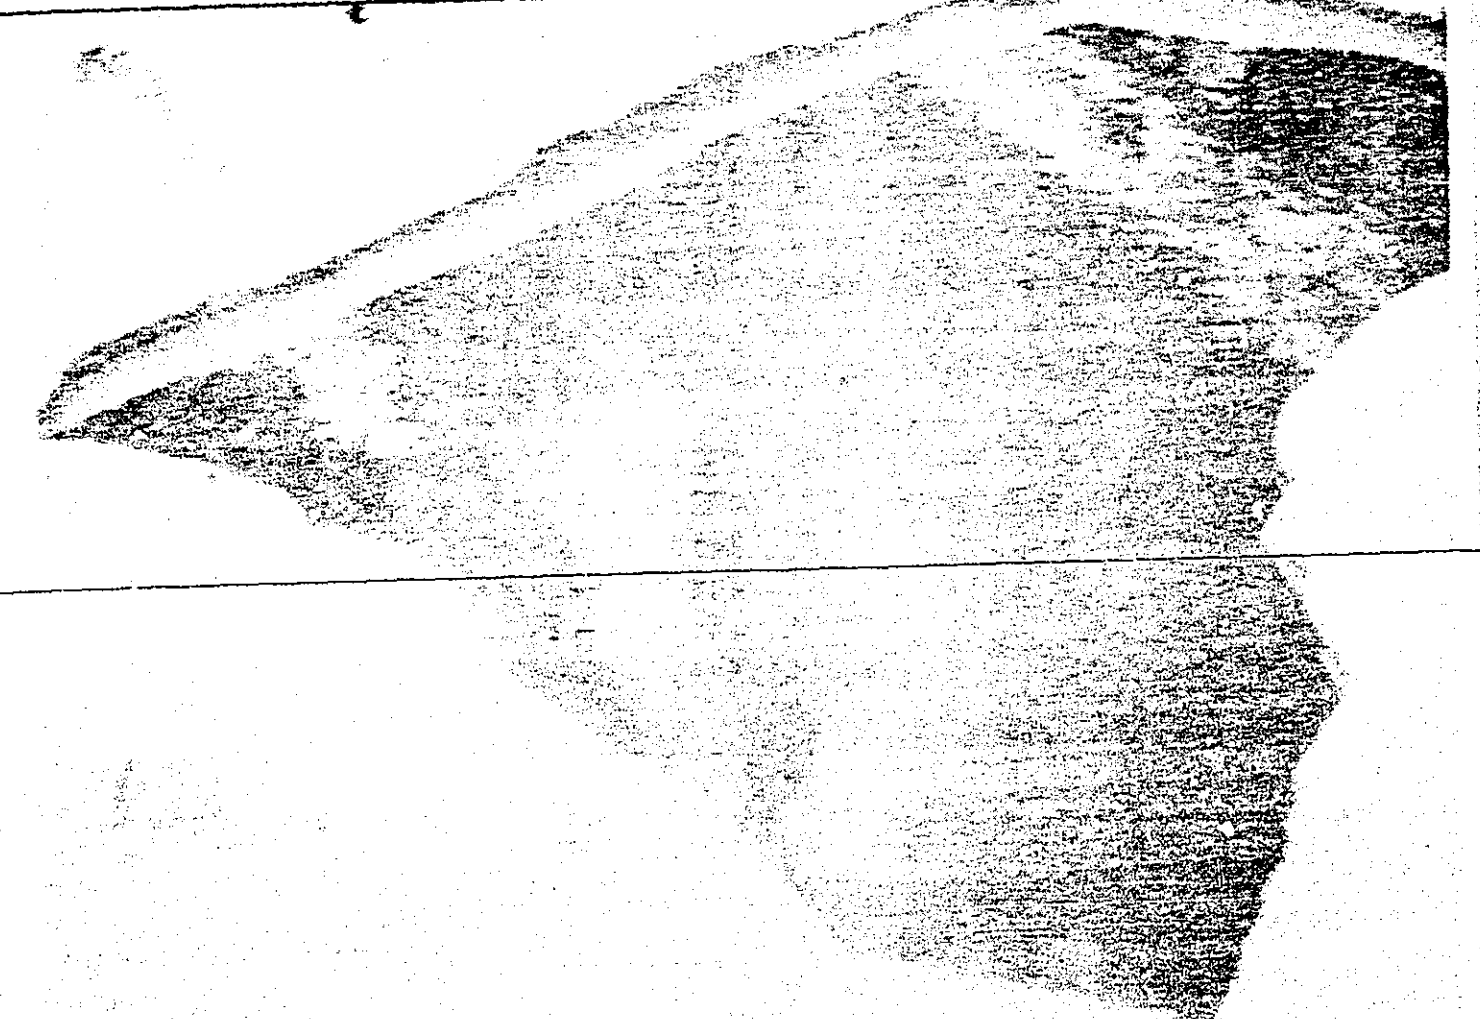

He will be making the presentations at luncheon and dining societies, society meetings and other organizations.

provision of the Immigrant Sources Project.

The project funded by the National Endowment for the Humanities is a three year study from which a directory will be prepared to help researchers locate source material on ethnic groups and movements in Michigan. Before it is completed, researchers will have visited Poland and Ireland in addition to the Netherlands and Finland where considerable work has already been done.

According to Boudin, Michigan occupies one of the most ethnically diverse geographical areas of any state in the Union.

"We want to find out which ethnic groups settled here, why they came to Michigan, their impressions of their new home and what kinds of work they did," Boudin said. "Another consideration is if any formal organizations or clubs were started by them to preserve their national

Spawr retires

Michigan State Police D-Sgt. Charles E. Spawr, 53, of the Jackson post, is retiring Friday, Jan. 7, after more than 25 years of service. Col. George L. Halverson, department director, has reported.

Spawr enlisted in the State Police in February, 1951, serving first at the post at Manistique before transfer in 1954 to Paw Paw.

He and his wife, Margaret, have a son and a daughter.

Bays opens Marquette law office

MANISTIQUE - Donald W. Bays, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Bays of Newberry and grandson of Mrs. P.T. Lundstrom of Manistique, has established law offices in Marquette.

Bays graduated as valedictorian of his class at Newberry High School in 1961. He graduated with honors with a Bachelor's degree in philosophy from North Georgia State University, and recently completed law school at Wayne State University.

Bays' law offices are at 215 West

Washington St. in Marquette. A jazz pianist, Bays also leads a musical trio at the Corona Room in the Heritage Hotel in Marquette.

Bays married the former Carol Ann Lane of Berlin, Wis., in 1958. Carol Ann is an instructor and doctoral candidate in English at Northern Michigan University. The Bays now reside with their children, Jennifer, Dan and Dana Porter, at 724 N. First St. in Marquette.

'Walk, don't run'

IAN IS A HAPPY, ACTIVE FOUR YEAR OLD who is operating at an eighteen month old level mentally. But he's the kind of child that the foster parent have to caution to "Walk, don't run." He was born with practically no immunities to infection. As a result, he has had to be hospitalized twice this year for pneumonia. His doctor feels he may grow out of this condition. Meanwhile, he started a special school program this fall which he enjoys very much. He has already made good progress. With permanent adoptive parents, Ian's future may be even brighter. Contact the Dept. of Social Services at 241-2114 to find out more about adoption procedures. Ask for Dave Zimmerman.

Favier takes course

Don Favier, of Manistique, an agent for Farm Bureau Insurance Group, recently completed a two-day school designed to further develop his knowledge of the special products and insurance products offered by the company.

Conducted in Lansing by Farm Bureau Marketing Corporation's Marketing Development personnel, the intermediate school included sessions on the company's Life Insurance and Property-Casualty programs.

Among the areas covered were the company's Partnerships and Country Estate programs, the Church Guardian and Mercantile Guardian programs, and Individual Retirement and Keogh plans.

The school, which concluded in December, involved 12 agents.

Backed by a force of 240 agents and nearly 50 field claims adjusters, Farm Bureau Insurance Group serves more than a quarter of a million policy holders in Michigan.

Rapid temperature drops cause injury to plants

Low Temperature Injury to Plants

The problem of maintaining woody plants through the winter has been one of the primary climatic limits to plant distribution and cultivation.

Low temperature injury may happen even to plants that are normally hardy to a particular climatic zone. A rapid drop in temperatures is more severe than the actual low temperature obtained in most instances.

A rapid drop can occur on clear, sunny but cold days. The sun may warm the foliage to above freezing. When the sun then dips below the horizon or behind some structure, the foliage will rapidly cool. When this happens, ice forms in the plant cells, which causes death of the tissue.

Rapid temperature fluctuations may also cause frost cracks or bark-splitting in the trunks of many trees. Such injury can be avoided by providing shade or by placing sensitive plants on the north or east exposures of a structure, where the sunlight will harm them less.

New Approach to Insect Control

As pesticides come under increasing attack there is increased activity in research to control insects without the use of dangerous insecticides. One major area of research is with sex pheromones. These are naturally occurring chemicals which insects release to attract mates. The goal of the research is to develop an inexpensive trap containing synthetic sex attractant that can be purchased by producers,

County Extension

by Elvin Hepker

consumers and pest control operators to trap male moths. If enough males can be captured before they mate, reproduction will be curtailed and the infestation will be reduced.

Scientists are working presently with some species of borers which are very hard to control with present insecticides. Maybe they can also use this system in the future on Army Worms.

Pesticide Applicator License

In a recent farm newsletter, I discussed the procedure for farmers to become licensed to use restricted pesticides. I also mentioned the booklet, with the application to take the test, attached. I would like to encourage farmers to make their request for this booklet before Jan. 11. Adequate time is necessary for the Department of Agriculture to process your applications and I want to send for the book by the 12th of January. The booklets cost 75 cents and we will only order a limited supply, so get your order in soon.

What's Cooking: Quiche Lorraine

by Carl Olson Michigan Department of Agriculture

If a rose by any other name would smell as sweet, does a baked scrambled egg pie taste like Quiche Lorraine? Probably not. But don't let the fancy name make you nervous. Go ahead and try it anyway and don't even say Quiche Lorraine until you're done.

If you haven't made one before, practice on a Sunday morning and serve it to the family for brunch. Then you'll be ready for the "big time" and prepare it for guests, making sure you impress them properly by using the words Quiche Lorraine often.

In this recipe I've added onion which, according to Irma Rombauer, makes it a Quiche Alsacienne, but, let's face it, that's even more impressive:

9-inch partially baked pie shell; 6 slices bacon, sauteed 'til medium crisp and crumbled; 1/4 lb. Swiss cheese, thinly sliced or grated; 1/4 cup finely chopped onion; 3 or 4 large eggs; 1 1/2 cups light cream or half and half; 1/2 teaspoon salt; dash of pepper; dash of nutmeg.

Line the pie shell with bacon and top the bacon with cheese and onion. Beat eggs with cream and seasonings until well mixed. Pour this over the ingredients in the pie shell. Bake at 375 degrees until a knife inserted in the center comes out clean. This should take 40 to 45 minutes. The Quiche will be puffed and golden. Cut into wedges and serve.

Any of Michigan's 5.6 million hens that laid the eggs you used would have to look upon this dish with admiration. If that number boggles the mind, just consider that each chicken laid an average of 232 eggs a year and Michigan marketed 1.3 billion last year.

Let's see, that would make 325 million Quiches or 400 for every resident of Michigan. Along this line, paraphrasing Mark Twain, there is something fascinating about mathematics. One gets, he said, such wholesale returns of conjecture out of such a trifling investment of fact.

Through the decades with a Germfask store

Throughout the years countless buildings have burned down. Some are new structures, some are unimportant, some are just too old to do any good.

But the greatest tragedy is when one of those old buildings, still usable, burns.

A landmark building burned in Germfask a few weeks ago and this was one of those buildings.

Our correspondent in Germfask, Jennie Crown, sent me some information relating to that building. She writes:

"The recently burned building originally housed the Grant Brothers, who operated a photo gallery, and north of that was a house owned by Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Shay. It seems that the Shay house caught afire and burned the photo gallery, and the building next to that, in the spring of 1908.

"A new building was built on the spot of the photo gallery. A Dr. Lipsom, an Armenian, because of his dark complexion, also known as the Black Doctor, used it as his office and his home. After he left, two Ostrander brothers, a druggist and a doctor, took up quarters there.

"I think they finally moved northward. Some say relatives are living in Grand Marais.

"A Dr. Norman Campbell came and had a nice drug store with a soda fountain, etc. improving things as time went on. He married a local girl, Mabel Menere, whose parents kept a boarding house. They had one son, James Jr., who returned this summer from his home in Royal Oak for a bicentennial homecoming. Campbell was the last doctor to come to Germfask. He left about 1921.

"The only ones since then have been when the CCC had their own doctor who was on call for emergency.

"The old building has been used for many things since the back part also has living quarters.

"The front has been used for a barber shop, a post office, a pool and lunch room, Bill's Sport Shop, then Joe's Sport Shop, a tool shop, and the last, a residence and antique shop.

"Germfask did have a few more doctor's near its beginning: Drs. Dent, Ling, Haquell, that I have heard of."

Many thanks, Mrs. Crown, for giving us a little insight into the Germfask early history.

TURNED TURTLE
Last week I mentioned that Mrs. Loraine

Don't look in mirror

During the next few weeks the magazines and newspapers will be full of diet and exercise plans urging us to take off those holiday pounds and shape up for spring.

Some of the layouts will show a lithe beauty doing the exercises. They never picture someone who looks like a sausage tied in the middle; it's always someone thin who looks the way we imagine we will look if we work faithfully at those exercises: Psychology.

No matter. What jars me into action every time is the thought of storing away the straight heavy winter coat that hides everything and trying to squeeze the lumpy old bod into last year's swim suit.

Once, after being properly jarred, I joined a Yoga class. The teacher was sold on the benefits of yoga exercise, and no wonder. Her posture was beautiful, her body limber, and her figure shamed most of the 20-year-olds in the class. She was 46 and the mother of four grown children. She was very nice too when we all donned our leotards and tights and went slinking into class for the first time. She didn't point and laugh.

After a few weeks of classes and practice, and after the initial shock to my system had worn off, I was really beginning to feel great. But I wanted to look that way too, so I was working very hard.

We had progressed to the Lion posture, which is rather bizarre but does wonders for all the facial muscles. (When you do yoga, you exercise everything). To do the Norman was interested in some information about the cartferry that overturned.

Mrs. Art DeMars phoned me to say that her husband, while reading the "Pictorial History of the Great Lakes," came across some information on the Ann Arbor No. 4.

It was 1909, not 1910 as I had thought, that the boat turned over. It was caused by an inexperienced brakeman who loaded too many cars on one side.

A look into the back issues of the Pioneer-Tribune confirmed the information and yielded some new on the "turned turtle."

"The ferry, which is constructed of steel, is 270 feet overall and has a 52 foot beam, and is in command of Cpt. Fred Robinson.

"The accident happened while the ferry was being loaded, the two center tracks filled with cars, and cars being placed on the port tracks.

"It is estimated that fully 10 minutes elapsed between the time the ferry began listing before it turned over completely."

The paper did not list any injuries and reported that the accident occurred at 9:30, May 29, 1909.

Earlier, I sent some skeleton information to Mrs. Norman for her use in her Michigan History class. She recently sent me a thank-you letter and a few remembrances of her life in Manistique. She writes:

"There is a picture of the company store (what is now the People's Store. That picture appeared in the "New Pioneer" edition last September,) in the paper you sent me. At that time the telephone office was located upstairs there.

"The Winkleman family have gone a long way since then too. My mother bought goods from Mr. Winkleman before he had a store. I went to school with Hyman Winkleman. I understand he was an attorney in Chicago for many years and Leon Winkleman was active in the Detroit stores.

"I also knew Scott and Alex Creighton very well. (also George and Alfred Burn, Volney Teepie, McKelvey and so many others.)

"I'll accept your information as regards to the date of that accident.

At that time I was 11 years old and I've travelled many places since then so some of the dates and information are not remembered accurately.

"If I should travel north again I'll stop and visit you as I pass through. I have grandchildren living near Marquette."

Thank-you, Mrs. Norman. I'm sure that many old friends of yours will enjoy reading about you. Please do stop in if you get up this way, I'll be looking forward to it.

Lion, one kneels and sits on the upturned feet, with the back very straight and palms on the knees. Air in the lungs is expelled and the face stretched - eyes and mouth opened as wide as possible and the tongue stuck out and down as far as possible. Then for a few seconds the arms are stiffened and the whole body tensed. Then hopefully, normal breathing is resumed for a minute or two before trying it again.

One day I thought I'd practice a bit and get a nice hot bath before the kids came home from school. I ran the bath water and stepped into the hall in the altogether to do the Lion in front of the full length mirror.

I was concentrating very hard on getting it right when I suddenly got a good look at myself in the mirror. It completely undid me. I collapsed laughing. I could only wonder what someone would think if they found me there, frozen like that.

Well, the shape up for spring ads have got me practicing again but these days I find other ways to exercise the facial muscles. I still can't do the Lion pose without laughing.

From olden days

Tales of lumbering era are staggering

by Harvey Saunders

In the Manistique River just back of Morrison's store in Germfask, there are seven old posts, or pilings. Some years ago I lived in a cabin on the bank of the river there. I was watching boys fishing. They had hooked a good sized Northern, and the fish got around a piling. They asked me how come those posts were in the river. I told them that they were put in by the Manistique Lumber Company and that was the place where they unloaded trains of logs in the summer time to be floated down the river to Manistique to be sawed into lumber. The next question was how come all this. I said that it is a long story.

My story is "How Grand Marais Became a Sawmill Town."

Russell A. Alger, who was one time Secretary of War, and a Mr. Smith had a large holding of pine land along the Driggs River and the Two Fox Rivers. How they came by this land, I do not know, but with others, organized the Manistique Lumber Company in 1880 and contracted with the Chicago Lumber Company to saw their logs for them.

The Chicago Lumber Company built a mill, known as the Upper Mill, near where the gates, or dam, is now at the upper end of Weston Avenue, in Manistique. There were two other mills in Manistique at that time, Weston Lumber Company on the west side of the river and the Chicago Lumber Company on the east side. The Manistique Lumber Company's main reason for having their lumber cut in Manistique, was that rates of shipping on the lakes at that time, to Chicago or New York was $2.00 a thousand less on Lake Michigan than it was on Lake Superior. That meant a lot in those days when No. 3 pine in the rough board sold for $6,000 a thousand.

Floating or driving logs down the rivers was cheap, but the Two Fox rivers ran through low marsh land and the East Branch, East of M-77 got very bad. If logs stopped, or jammed as a river driver would say it, the water would go out of the channel and it was hard to get logs moving again. My uncle, F.N. Cookson's first job as foreman for the Chicago Lumber Company was in 1892, on the East Branch spreads. A.C. Carpenter was walking boss in charge of operations for the Chicago Lumber Company north of the D.S.S. and A. with office at Seney. The Chicago Company, with others that had been driving logs on the East Branch, had quite a large amount of logs left in the river that they could not get out. They were in there for several years.

Ed and Frank Cookson had been jobbing for the North Shore Lumber Company, of South Manistique, for two years on the West Branch of the Big Fox River. One of their camps was at Taylor Dam and one about 3 miles farther up the river. Frank had charge of driving the logs down the Fox River. In the two years he had made a name for himself as a river-man. Mr. Carpenter was in trouble, so in the Summer of 1892 he got Frank Cookson to go with him to see what could be done to get the logs down the East branch. Uncle Frank accepted the job, moved into a camp about 2 miles East of M-77 on the south side of the river, with a crew of men with saws, axes and shovels; and built dikes with boughs from the trees and sand about 6 to 7 feet wide and 3 to 4 feet high along the river bank to keep the water in the river channel. The following spring of 1893, he had charge of driving the logs out and down past Germfask. September of that year he went to work as camp foreman and ran the camp, and was river driver foreman until they sold to the Consolidated Company in 1912.

The Manistique Company had stopped trying to drive logs down the East Branch in 1888 or 1889. They built the railroad to Germfask in 1889 and a dam on the East Branch of the Fox River, about 1/2 mile above where M-77 crosses it now, and took the logs from the river, loaded them on railroad cars, brought them to Germfask and put them in the river, where this story started, - the old piling back of Morrison's Store. They also had a pull-up on the Big Fox River at Seney where the railroad crossed it. The location is north of the junction of M-77 and M-28 on the west side of the river. The Big Fox became hard to float, or drive logs down, because of its low banks a short distance below Seney.

When the Manistique Lumber Company surveyed for their railroad from Seney to the Manistique River, it was a straight line from Seney to the river and would have come to the river about one mile above Germfask. However, a Mr. Tom Gray, Mr. Robinson and A. McDougall, who had homesteads near Germfask, went to the Company's Manager and argued with him that the best place for the Company's dump would be where the bridge crossed the Manistique River on the road from Seney to Manistique. They got him to come here for their "Dump," as it was first called, and Germfask was born in 1889.

Riding in your car over the nice highway from Germfask to Seney now, no one would think that it was a bumpy old logging road at one time. As you come to the curve at the entrance of the refuge, or opposite the Show Pool, is where the railroad grade was built to, when the men from Germfask got the company to change. That is why the curve is in the road. At that time, there were no pools, all the same level land on which to build the road. Here at Germfask you can yet see the old railroad grades. Their "Y" for turning their engines was where the Cry Cleaners and County Garage and other houses are now, and up the river, above the village, there is a railroad grade for 1/2 mile or more. The same down the river from the summer "dump," where they banked or unloaded logs in the winter after the river had frozen over. I have been told, that they would have 10,000,000 to 15,000,000 board feet banked here in the winter, so they had a fairly large number of men to unload and roll the logs away from the railroad track. Angus McDougall started the first store in 1890 and the Post Office was established in 1891.

At this time there were five companies floating logs on the Manistique River.

They were, the Chicago Company, the Weston Company, The North Shore Company, with mill at South Manistique, the Thompson Lumber Company that went under many different names while operating, and the Manistique Lumber Company. In those days, on most of the rivers in Michigan, where more than one company was operating, there was a river improvement company. The Manistique had a stock company known as the Manistique River Improvement Company. The stock was owned by the Chicago Lumber Company. They built the stone piers and the booms, and all companies driving logs on the River had to pay so much a thousand feet to the Boom Company for sorting. Everyone had to pay toll, as it was called. This so-called Boom, or Improvement Company was controlled by a Ste. Marie Ship Canal Board set up by the State of Michigan. The Improvement, or Boom Company had to report to the Secretary of State in March, as near as possible the amount of logs coming down the river from the companies operating on the river, and what the amount of their booms and improvements was, and recommend a price that they could charge for sorting and running the logs through the improved part of the river. The price was set by the Ste. Marie Ship Canal Board, and all companies paid the same. The Boom Company had to pay a franchise tax, to the Secretary of State, for the use of the river and one percent (1 percent) on all tolls collected. The Chicago Lumber Company was the owner, but had to pay the one percent the same as all the rest. (The Improvement Company on the Manistique River was the last in Michigan. It dissolved in 1934.)

As time passed in the mid 90's, I have not been able to find the exact date, the Manistique Lumber Company was not satisfied with the amount of lumber scale they were getting at the mill. It was a lot less than they expected to get from their scale of the logs that they had sent down the river, so they sent a man to Manistique to find out what was wrong. The logs going down were all marked on the ends with a hammer weighing about four pounds, with at least three marks, or brands, on each end of each log. Each company had its mark and a copy of it registered with the County Clerk. The Manistique Company's mark was a circle with a "S" in the center.

The North Shore Company and the Thompson Company were taking logs out of the river at that time. Their pull-up, where they loaded their logs on railroad cars, was at the first high bank on the west side of the river above Manistique, where the M. and L. S.R.R. had a spur known as the "Dump." The logs were taken by rail from there to mills at south Manistique and Thompson. The river was divided by stone piers in the center, with log booms between them for about 1 and 1/2 miles to where the Sturgeon Creek enters the river. The companies had a house for the men working there to stay. The road going in to the place left M-94 near the old Fox Farm and it was called Stoney Cut, and they got the stone to make the piers at that place. Logs going to South Town and Thompson were sorted here and went down the west side. Those going to Manistique, on the east side of the river. The man who was sent by the Manistique Lumber Company to check out why their scale on logs was not cutting out the right amount of lumber, found logs with their mark on them in ponds of the North Shore Company at South Manistique and at Thompson and on lumber piled in their yards.

As the Chicago Lumber Company did the sorting, or the Manistique River Improvement Company that was owned by them, they were responsible for the safe delivery of their logs. This gave the Manistique Lumber Company the right to break the contract they had with them to saw their logs in the mill they had built for that purpose, which they did, and as a large amount of their timber was close to Lake Superior and would be logged by railroad, and as there was a good harbor on the lake, they built a railroad to it and named it Grand Marais, Michigan, and a new town was born.

The lumber companies operating on the Driggs and the two Fox Rivers finished their cut of the large virgin pine in the nineties. The North Shore, at South Manistique, finished first. The Chicago Company's last big pine drive on the Driggs river was in the spring of 1899.

The only thing left to remember the big pine logging days is a few cleared places along the roads where the fishermen and hunters travel. You may come to one of these clearings, some grassy mounds marking where they had their root house, as it was called, and the banks of earth they used to pile around the camp to keep it warm. These places, in the logging days of the big pine, you could almost call a village, as it was the home or place where sometimes for from 3 to 6 years, 75 to 125 men made it their home.

Some of the lakes and creeks are named for the men who were foremen or bosses of those camps. Ross Lake and Creek were named for John Ross, who was foreman for the North Shore Company. His camp was about 1 1/2 miles west of the bridge that crosses the Driggs River, a short distance below Driggs Lake. McKay Lake, on the West Branch of the Suoker River, is named for one of the Manistique Lumber Company's camp foremen.

The Manistique Lumber Company cut the last of their pine in the summer of 1908 and moved to Cut River, Minnesota, taking most of the men who worked for them with them, closed down their fine large sawmill, never to be used any more.

The Manistique Lumber Company cut the last of their pine in the summer of 1908 and moved to Cut River, Minnesota, taking most of the men who worked for them with them, closed down their fine large sawmill, never to be used any more. All that was left was Cook, Curtis and Miller's small hardwood mill that sawed only about twelve cars of logs in one day. The railroad from Seney to Grand Marais stopped operating the last day of October 1910, putting Cook, Curtis and Miller out of business and leaving Grand Marais almost a ghost town. They did not have a decent highway road to the town.

There are very few men left around Grand Marais, Seney and Germfask who took a part in cutting the big pine. Frank Oaken is one. He lives here in Germfask, and worked for Jack Gleason in the winter of 1907 and 1908. The camp was located on M-77 where it crosses the west branch of the Sucker River. What was a bumpy old railroad road, when the big pine was being cut is now a nice blacktop highway.

Through the decades with a Germfask store

Throughout the years countless buildings have burned down. Some are new structures, some are unimportant, some are just too old to do any good.

But the greatest tragedy is when one of those old buildings, still usable, burns.

A landmark building burned in Germfask a few weeks ago and this was one of those buildings.

Our correspondent in Germfask, Jennie Crown, sent me some information relating to that building. She writes:

"The recently burned building originally housed the Grant Brothers, who operated a photo gallery, and north of that was a house owned by Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Shay. It seems that the Shay house caught fire and burned the photo gallery, and the building next to that, in the spring of 1908.

"A new building was built on the spot of the photo gallery. A Dr. Lipsom, an Armenian, because of his dark complexion, also known as the Black Doctor, used it as his office and his home. After he left, two Ostrander brothers, a druggist and a doctor, took up quarters there.

"I think they finally moved northward. Some say relatives are living in Grand Marais.

"A Dr. Norman Campbell came and had a nice drug store with a soda fountain, etc. improving things as time went on. He married a local girl, Mabel Menere, whose parents kept a boarding house. They had one son, James Jr., who returned this summer from his home in Royal Oak for a bicentennial homecoming. Campbell was the last doctor to come to Germfask. He left about 1921.

"The only ones since then have been when the CCC had their own doctor who was on call for emergency.

"The old building has been used for many things since the back part also has living quarters.

"The front has been used for a barber shop, a post office, a pool and lunch room, Bill's Sport Shop, then Joe's Sport Shop, a tool shop, and the last, a residence and antique shop.

"Germfask did have a few more doctor's near its beginning: Drs. Dent, Ling, Haquell, that I have heard of."

Many thanks, Mrs. Crown, for giving us a little insight into the Germfask early history.

From olden days

Tales of lumbering era are staggering

by Harvey Saunders

In the Manistique River just back of Morrison's store in Germfask, there are seven old posts, or pilings. Some years ago I lived in a cabin on the bank of the river there. I was watching boys fishing. They had hooked a good sized Northern, and the fish got around a piling. They asked me how come those posts were in the river. I told them that they were put in by the Manistique Lumber Company and that was the place where they unloaded trains of logs in the summer time to be floated down the river to Manistique to be sawed into lumber. The next question was how come all this. I said that it is a long story.

My story is "How Grand Marais Became a Sawmill Town."

Russell A. Alger, who was one time Secretary of War, and a Mr. Smith had a large holding of pine land along the Driggs River and the Two Fox Rivers. How they came by this land, I do not know, but the with others, organized the Manistique Lumber Company in 1880 and contracted with the Chicago Lumber Company to saw their logs for them.

The Chicago Lumber Company built a mill, known as the Upper Mill, near where the gates, or dam, is now at the upper end of Weston Avenue, in Manistique. There were two other mills in Manistique at that time, Weston Lumber Company on the west side of the river and the Chicago Lumber Company on the east side. The Manistique Lumber Company's main reason for having their lumber cut in Manistique, was that rates of shipping on the lakes at that time, to Chicago or New York was $2.00 a thousand less on Lake Michigan than it was on Lake Superior. That meant a lot in those days when No. 3 pine in the rough board sold for $6,000 a thousand.

Floating or driving logs down the rivers was cheap, but the Two Fox rivers ran through low marsh land and the East Branch, East of M-77 got very bad. If logs stopped, or jammed as a river driver would say it, the water would go out of the channel and it was hard to get logs moving again. My uncle, F.N. Cookson's first job as foreman for the Chicago Lumber Company was in 1892, on the East Branch spreads. A.C. Carpenter was walking boss in charge of operations for the Chicago Lumber Company north of the D.S.S. and A. with office at Seney. The Chicago Company, with others that had been driving logs on the East Branch, had quite a large amount of logs left in the river that they could not get out. They were in there for several years.

Ed and Frank Cookson had been jobbing for the North Shore Lumber Company, of South Manistique, for two years on the West Branch of the Big Fox River. One of their camps was at Taylor Dam and one about 3 miles farther up the river. Frank had charge of driving the logs down the Fox River. In the two years he had made a name for himself as a river-man. Mr. Carpenter was in trouble, so in the Summer of 1892 he got Frank Cookson to go with him to see what could be done to get the logs down the East Branch. Uncle Frank accepted the job, moved into a camp about 2 miles East of M-77 on the south side of the river, with a crew of men with saws, axes and shovels; and built dikes with boughs from the trees and sand about 6 to 7 feet wide and 3 to 4 feet high along the river bank to keep the water in the river channel. The following spring of 1893, he had charge of driving the logs out and down past Germfask. September of that year he went to work as camp foreman and ran the camp, and was river driver foreman until they sold to the Consolidated Company in 1912.

The Manistique Company had stopped trying to drive logs down the East Branch in 1888 or 1889. They built the railroad to Germfask in 1889 and a dam on the East Branch of the Fox River, about 1/2 mile above where M-77 crosses it now, and took the logs from the river, loaded them on railroad cars, brought them to Germfask and put them in the river, where this story started. - the old piling back of Morrison's Store. They also had a pull-up on the Big Fox River at Seney where the railroad crossed it. The location is north of the junction of M-77 and M-28 on the west side of the river. The Big Fox became hard to float, or drive logs down, because of its low banks a short distance below Seney.

When the Manistique Lumber Company surveyed for their railroad from Seney to the Manistique River, it was a straight line from Seney to the river and would have come to the river about one mile above Germfask. However, a Mr. Tom Gray, Mr. Robinson and A. McDougall, who had homesteads near Germfask, went to the Company's Manager and argued with him that the best place for the Company's dump would be where the bridge crossed the Manistique River on the road from Seney to Manistique. They got him to come here for their "Dump", as it was first called, and Germfask was born in 1889.

Riding in your car over the nice highway from Germfask to Seney now, no one would think that it was a bumpy old logging road at one time. As you come to the curve at the entrance of the refuge, or opposite the Show Pool, is where the railroad grade was built to, when the men from Germfask got the company to change. That is why the curve is in the road. At that time, there were no pools, all the same level land on which to build the road. Here at Germfask you can yet see the old railroad grades. Their "Y" for turning their engines was where the Cry Cleaners and County Garage and other houses are now, and up the river, above the village, there is a railroad grade for 1/2 mile or more. The same down the river from the summer "dump", where they banked or unloaded logs in the winter after the river had frozen over. I have been told that they would have 10,000,000 to 15,000,000 board feet banked here in the winter, so they had a fairly large number of men to unload and roll the logs away from the railroad track. Angus McDougall started the first store in 1890 and the Post Office was established in 1891.

At this time there were five companies floating logs on the Manistique River.

They were, the Chicago Company, the Weston Company, The North Shore Company, with mill at South Manistique, the Thompson Lumber Company that went under many different names while operating, and the Manistique Lumber Company. In those days, on most of the rivers in Michigan, where more than one company was operating, there was a river improvement company. The Manistique had a stock company known as the Manistique River Improvement Company. The stock was owned by the Chicago Lumber Company. They built the stone piers and the booms, and all companies driving logs on the River had to pay so much a thousand feet to the Boom Company for sorting. Everyone had to pay toll, as it was called. This so-called Boom, or Improvement Company was controlled by a Ste. Marie Ship Canal Board set up by the State of Michigan. The Improvement, or Boom Company had to report to the Secretary of State in March, as near as possible the amount of logs coming down the river from the companies operating on the river, and what the amount of their booms and improvements was, and recommend a price that they could charge for sorting and running the logs through the improved part of the river. The price was set by the Ste. Marie Ship Canal Board, and all companies paid the same. The Boom Company had to pay a franchise tax, to the Secretary of State, for the use of the river and one percent (1 percent) on all tolls collected. The Chicago Lumber Company was the owner, but had to pay the one percent the same as all the rest. (The Improvement Company on the Manistique River was the last in Michigan. It dissolved in 1934.)

As time passed in the mid 90's, I have not been able to find the exact date, the Manistique Lumber Company was not satisfied with the amount of lumber scale they were getting at the mill. It was a lot less than they expected to get from their scale of the logs that they had sent down the river, so they sent a man to Manistique to find out what was wrong. The logs going down were all marked on the ends with a hammer weighing about four pounds, with at least three marks, or brands, on each end of each log. Each company had its mark and a copy of it registered with the County Clerk. The Manistique Company's mark was a circle with a "S" in the center. The North Shore Company and the Thompson Company were taking logs out of the river at that time. Their pull-up, where they loaded their logs on railroad cars, was at the first high bank on the west side of the river above Manistique, where the M. and L. S.R.R. had a spur known as the "Dur.p." The logs were taken by rail from there to mills at south Manistique and Thompson. The logs were taken by the companies and a house for the men working there to stay. The road going in to the place left M-94 near the old Fox Farm and it was called Stoney Cut, and they got the stone to make the piers at that place. Logs going to South Town and Thompson were sorted here and went down the west side of the river. The man who was sent by the Manistique Lumber Company to check out why their scale on logs was not cutting out the right amount of lumber, found logs with their mark on them in ponds of the North Shore Company at South Manistique and at Thompson and on lumber piled in their yards.

As the Chicago Lumber Company did the sorting, or the Manistique River Improvement Company that was owned by them, they were responsible for the safe delivery of their logs. This gave the Manistique Lumber Company the right to break the contract they had with them to saw their logs in the mill they had built for that purpose, which they did, and as a large amount of their timber was close to Lake Superior and would be logged by railroad, and as there was a good harbor on the lake, they built a railroad to it and named it Grand Marais, Michigan, and a new town was born.

The lumber companies operating on the Driggs and the two Fox Rivers finished their cut of the large virgin pine in the nineties. The North Shore, at South Manistique, finished first. The Chicago Company's last big pine drive on the Driggs river was in the spring of 1899.

The only thing left to remember the big pine logging days is a few cleared places along the roads where the fishermen and hunters travel. You may come to one of these clearings, some grassy mounds marking where they had their root house, as it was called, and the banks of earth they used to pile around the camp to keep it warm. These places, in the logging days of the big pine, you could almost call a village, as it was the home or place where sometimes for from 3 to 6 years, 75 to 125 men made it their home.

Some of the lakes and creeks are named for the men who were foremen or bosses of those camps. Ross Lake and Creek were named for John Ross, who was foreman for the North Shore Company. His camp was about 1 1/2 miles west of the bridge that crosses the Driggs River, a short distance below Driggs Lake. McKay Lake, on the West Branch of the Suoker River, is named for one of the Manistique Lumber Company's camp foremen.

The Manistique Lumber Company cut the last of their pine in the summer of 1908 and moved to Cut River, Minnesota, taking most of the men who worked for them with them, closed down their fine large sawmill, never to be used any more.

The Manistique Lumber Company cut the last of their pine in the summer of 1908 and moved to Cut River, Minnesota, taking most of the men who worked for them with them, closed down their fine large sawmill, never to be used any more. All that was left was Cook, Curtis and Miller's small hardwood mill that sawed only about twelve cars of logs in one day. The railroad from Seney to Grand Marais stopped operating the last day of October 1910, putting Cook, Curtis and Miller out of business and leaving Grand Marais almost a ghost town. They did not have a decent highway road to the town.

There are very few men left around Grand Marais, Seney and Germfask who took a part in cutting the big pine. Frank Oaken is one. He lives here in Germfask, and worked for Jack Gleason in the winter of 1907 and 1908. The camp was located on M-77 where it crosses the west branch of the Suoker River. What was a bumpy old railroad road, when the big pine was being cut is now a nice blacktop highway.

Don't look in mirror

During the next few weeks the magazines and newspapers will be full of diet and exercise plans urging us to take off those holiday pounds and shape up for spring.

Some of the layouts will show a lithe beauty doing the exercises. They never picture someone who looks like a sausage tied in the middle; it's always someone thin who looks the way we imagine we will look if we work faithfully at those exercises: Psychology.

No matter. What jars me into action every time is the thought of storing away the straight heavy winter coat that hides everything and trying to squeeze the lumpy ol' bod into last year's swim suit.

Once, after being properly jarred, I joined a Yoga class. The teacher was sold on the benefits of yoga exercise, and no wonder. Her posture was beautiful, her body limber, and her figure shamed most of the 20-year-olds in the class. She was 46 and the mother of four grown children. She was very nice too when we all donned our leotards and tights and went sinking into class for the first time. She didn't point and laugh.

After a few weeks of classes and practice, and after the initial shock of my system had worn off, I was really beginning to feel great. But I wanted to look that way too, so I was working very hard.

We had progressed to the Lion posture, which is rather bizarre but does wonders for all the facial muscles. (When you do yoga, you exercise everything). To do the Lion, one kneels and sits on the upturned feet, with the back very straight and palms on the knees. Air in the lungs is expelled and the face stretched - eyes and mouth opened as wide as possible and the tongue stuck out and down as far as possible. Then for a few seconds the arms are stiffened and the whole body tensed. Then hopefully, normal breathing is resumed for a minute or two before trying it again.

One day I thought I'd practice a bit and get a nice hot bath before the kids came home from school. I ran the bath water and stepped into the hall in the altogether to do the Lion in front of the full length mirror.

I was concentrating very hard on getting it right when I suddenly got a good look at myself in the mirror. It completely undid me. I collapsed laughing. I could only wonder what someone would think if they found me there, frozen like that.

Well, the shape up for spring ads have got me practicing again but these days I find other ways to exercise the facial muscles. I still can't do the Lion pose without laughing.

The Voice of Schoolcraft County Since 1876

Local resource: manpower

Schoolcraft County's greatest resource is people. In fact, Manistique ranks high in the state in terms of available manpower.

That is a positive way of looking at the lists compiled by the Michigan Employment Security Commission in a recent report.

According to the commission, Manistique is one of 26 areas in the state that has persistent unemployment. That means the city has had unemployment for an average six percent of the labor force and has been 50 to 100 percent above the national average for the preceding one to three years.

The city has a lot of neighbors in this category, with 22 of the 26 areas being located north of Bay City, and six others in the U.P.: Alger, Hancock, Iron River, Newberry, St. Ignace and Sault Ste. Marie.

Peninsula-wide, the unemployment rate dropped from 9.8 to 9.5 percent in September, as the 1976-77 school year got underway.

However, an increase of 300 jobs in the construction industry was more than offset by seasonal employment reductions of 100 in retail trade, 500 in services and 100 jobs in the transportation, communications, and utilities sector.

From a negative perspective, the steady jobless rate here is a nagging problem with no ready solution. The number of available workers is not likely to change on its own, too, considering the attractiveness of the area for the outdoors-minded.

The more flexible factor, then, is the opportunity for more employment. In the U.P., the trend has been toward a growth in government payrolls, and a decline of jobs in the private sector.

Those are trends that a great many prominent residents would like to see switched around. For them, as for the rest of us, it will be a major challenge in the new year to attract the businesses and firms to make the changes possible.

Unappetizing bowl of blahs for breakfast

The other day, I received in the mail a couple of articles extolling the virtues of eating a good breakfast. My natural instinct was to toss them in the waste basket since I have never been convinced that eating breakfast was a great idea. The thought of jumping out of a nice warm bed into a cold bowl of cereal just isn't my way of starting the day.

Breakfast is alright if I can have a couple of hours to get ready for it. Along about 10 o'clock, breakfast isn't a bad idea, but at 7:30 all I want is a cup of coffee and to be left alone.

In fairness, though, there are a great many people who can't get started in the morning until they have eaten. So the following thoughts on breakfast were salvaged from my wastebasket for those who are interested in an alternative for starting the day.

Who decided breakfast had to be the same dreary menu every morning? Let's start the day on the upbeat by getting out of the breakfast rut and putting a little glamour into the most neglected meal of the day.

Your rut may be no breakfast at all, or just coffee and a sweet roll. If so, consider the following facts established by extensive tests and experiments: Children perform better in school, workmen have fewer accidents, and housewives avoid midmorning fatigue when they have eaten a well-balanced breakfast.

As a minimum, the first meal of the day should include fruit and/or fruit juice, milk and whole-grain cereal and/or toast. This is the minimum. Admittedly it can get monotonous if not varied often. But there is no more reason to eat the same thing for breakfast every day than there is for any other meal.

Some of you are arguing, "But I'm not hungry in the morning." Usually this is the result of eating too late and too heavily the evening before. A light supper and nothing before bedtime is ideal for good health. If you feel you must have something, make it a piece of fruit which will digest quickly and leave your stomach empty, ready to rest through the night. You will sleep better too. If you are not in the habit of eating breakfast, and you are in the habit of eating a heavy evening meal, you may need to change your program gradually and work up to a more healthful eating pattern.

There are also a number of people who skip breakfast because they are trying to lose weight. They figure by skipping the first meal they've got a headstart on the calorie battle for the day. However, by evening they are ravenously hungry, so take their largest meal late in the day. Here again, nutritional experiments indicate that it is the food eaten at night, when energy needs are least, that results in fat storage. A good breakfast, high in protein, eliminates the craving for snacks, especially sweets, which are the principal cause of overweight," the article concludes.

If you're convinced that you need a big breakfast, fine. I'll stick with my cup of coffee.

Green garbage boxes overflow

TOWNSHIPS ALL OVER THE COUNTY have been experiencing garbage problems like that shown above.

At least two townships are taking action to prevent occurrences like this happening again.

Thompson Township will hold a special vote Feb. 15 to decide whether they should go back to the practice of individuals disposing of their own garbage at the dump.

Hiawatha Township has issued a warning to residents of that township and plan on ridding themselves of the "green boxes."

In a memo to the residents, the township board indicated that the Department of Public Works, responsible for the pick-up of garbage at the dumps, have refused to pick-up the garbage because they cannot get near the boxes without first cleaning up the mess by hand.

Prior to the installation of the green boxes in that township, residents had to dispose of their own garbage at the dump.

However, the board said, people fail to realize that when the boxes are full they are expected to take the garbage to another location or to the dump.

The boxes in Hiawatha Township had to be relocated several times because of complaints from nearby property owners, according to the memo.

The memo also stated that the board and their families have been cleaning up the mess themselves but will not clean up the mess near the Sportsmans Club, where this picture was taken.

They were expected to make a decision as to the fate of the boxes last night.

Taxes, utilities, for sale sign up

To the Editor:

I received my taxes a few weeks ago and I'm sick of this. I put my house up for sale this summer when I got my second utility bill.

Now the total (for utilities) by the year is $776.57, and taxes are $233.72. That total is $1,010.29. You divide that by 12 months and I pay $84.19 a month to live in my own home. Don't bother to ask me if it's worth it because there's a for sale sign in my yard.

The best part is I'm trying to sell it for less than what the city values it, and I can't sell it.

I don't know where they got their tax base. But they should have also figured the income of the people here.

If the commission can't do the job people trust them to do, they better step down and let someone who can.

Look at it this way. Your building permits cost too much. Even if someone buys the permits, the homes are taxed too much. People will move out of town to live and the people that live here will not fix up their homes.

Now you have to pay these taxes and in March you can go to the Board of Review and complain. And if you don't bitch in March the taxes you just got is what you are going to pay. So I suggest to you get out there and bitch about your taxes.

And then you may have to wait two or three years for them to reduce your taxes.

A note of appreciation to Charlie Youngblood, from the families that received block 12 grants to improve their homes.

The hours that Charlie put into this program and his cooperation and willingness to do this right has to be praised.

Thanks, Charlie for a job well done.

Improve city plowing instead of furnishings

To the Editor:

If new paint, office furniture and carpeting are going to improve and awaken the new city manager and council members...well let's go...I'm all for the renovations of City Hall. Sooner the better!

However, as a resident and tax payer of Manistique I am of the opinion that five grand would be better spent on:

1. Improving present road conditions by more regular and thorough plowing and removal of slush and new fallen snow.
2. Plowing sidewalks throughout the city.
3. Purchasing salt and using it.
4. Furnishing snow plowing drivers with city maps, as more than once, Schoolcraft Avenue has been forgotten.
5. Using the city crews on nights or weekends and holidays (whenever it snows enough to call them out.) This waiting till Monday a.m. is stupidity on someone's part.

Travelers through our town must get a laugh, thinking of us as a bunch of simpletons.

Somebody better wake up and take care of things in proper order of importance. If, after all this had been righted, there's funding left, then, slap a little paint on the walls and thread on the floors - of good city hall.

P.S. If I signed my name, our street probably would never get plowed.

Getting to the root of cold miseries

Greater remedies hath no other ailment. Countless millions of persons will suffer from the dreaded coryza (acute nasopharyngitis) this winter season. Most will sample one or more of the hundreds of different remedies and medicines.

Others will do nothing. It doesn't matter much. The reassuring prospect is that every method can work. In the prescribed amount of time, that is.

Americans today are spending probably upwards of $500 million a year to spray, gargle, swallow and inhale various medicinal remedies that, even if they fail to cure your misery, at least give it company.

As another avenue to take, more people are finding back-to-the-earth compounds and practices. The greatest of all are the old Indian treatments, which included yampa seeds, balsam tea, elderberry syrup or heavy dose of juice of pounded primrose roots, which was sniffed to clear the head or dried catnip leaves were smoked.

The most popular treatment, however, was with onions. "For influenza, the body was covered in ground onions and wrapped in blankets" (preferably not the ones your wife just laundered) and onion gruel was administered too, according to "A Treasury of Indian Herbs," by Virginia Scully. Early American settlers picked up the practice, adding a shawl around the shoulders and mutton tallow on the chest as touches of style. Produces elbow room and helps keep a cold from spreading.

Like the smoking idea? Indians puffed juniper leaves or inhaled their fumes as well as the pulverized root of sweet cicely, bark of the chokecherry or anelica roots.

If you're fresh out of these delicacies, then good old-fashioned tobacco will suffice. Besides smoking it, Indians favored for chest colds a few tobacco leaves ground up, mixed with a little fat, put on the chest and covered with a piece of wool.

In our advanced civilization, positive thinking helps, also. Whether it's drugs or skunkcabbage, you've got to believe your method is going to work. Chant to yourself ancient Chippewa warrior may be summoned in your mind to make you tea from the inner white bark of the anelopo brush. Maybe not more effective, but cheaper than a prescription.

Race is on for the dumbest driver

If It Fitz

by Jim Fitzgerald

Forget the Indianapolis 500 and the Grand Prix. In all innocence, I seem to have started a new kind of car race. The winner will be crowned the world's champion dumb driver.

Any dumb driver can enter. The finalists will probably appear on TV, to recreate their dumbness. The only requirement is that all entrants must promise not to behave like typical TV game show contestants if they win.

There must be no jumping, shrieking, or public coupling with the game host. To keep such offensive displays of greed to a minimum, prizes will be modest, and they will reflect the theme of the contest.

The top prize will probably be a week in Hollywood where the winner will be allowed to watch the filming of perpetual motion - the car chase.

He or she will learn the inside secrets of TV driving. For instance, when the two cops always sit close together in the front seat, it does not mean they are gay. It means they both want to get their faces on camera.

To explain how this new car race got into gear (clever, eh?), a brief reprise is necessary.

Several weeks ago I claimed that I had held the world's champion dumb driver title for 35 years, only to be succeeded last summer by my son.

When I was 14, I smashed the front fenders on my father's car while driving it out-of-a-bump-shop-where-those-same fenders had just been made to look like new. I thought that was high-style dumb, a record that would stand the test of time.

But it couldn't stand the test of my own son.

When he was 18, he smashed my two cars without starting the motor in either car.

He accomplished this by coasting a Pacer down our driveway, backward, while holding the door open to see where he was going. The door banged into an Oldsmobile parked innocently beside the driveway. The result was a one-door Pacer and a well-dented Oldsmobile.

Marvelous, I thought. My son is the new dumb champ. I crowned him publicly, bragging about how blood will tell and how proud my father would have been of his grandson.

But several readers disagreed. A few even implied, politely but unmistakably, that I might be guilty of nepotism.

For instance, there was a Wisconsin man named Herman Weinberger who bought a brand new Ford, got behind the wheel for the first time, and immediately crashed the car into the wall of the dealership where he bought it.

There isn't room here to detail the dumbness of all the entries in my contest. But you'll get the general idea from Lee Lathrup of Lansing. It happened to him on his father's 1940 Ford, on a foggy night.

"I had just taken my date home and was about to back out of her driveway," Lathrup reported. "I asked my buddy to watch where I was going."

"He opened his door, which caught on the fender, ripping the upholstery and springing the door. I pulled back in the driveway and got out to assess the damage after setting the emergency brake which never worked."

"The car rolled down the driveway, catching the open driver's door on a hedge, giving me a matched set of sprung doors."

"The only way we could get home was to borrow some clothes line and tie the doors together across the front seat."

Yeah, that's pretty dumb, I'll admit. But it must be remembered that Lathrup had the help of a buddy in the passenger seat. If this contest is going to allow dual participation, I want to submit another entry.

My buddy was Dick Devereaux, who still lives in Port Huron where it happened, in a 1947 Plymouth, and he's better not deny his complicity at this late date.

Never mind why, but one dark night we were backing up on a skinny dirt road that ran alongside the railroad tracks. Dick guided me by watching the tracks, making certain I steered the same way the tracks went.

Except the road bent where the tracks didn't, and the Plymouth's rear end got hung up high on a railroad switch.

The car was half over the tracks and a helpful railroad employee said we'd better do something quick because a train was due through in 15 minutes.

Oh lord. We squeezed a jack between the switch pedestal and the rear bumper, and then pumped the Plymouth up high enough to push it loose. Just in time.

The next morning my father gave me hell for springing his trunk lid, bending his bumper, and losing his jack. I told him he should thank me for saving his car from being hit by a train.

Onward and upward, dumb drivers, and keep those entries coming in.

Help for seniors on property tax

To the Editor:

Due to the fact that we are fortunate to have a City Council made up of some very intelligent members of our fair city I really believe that if they were to put their heads together and concentrate real hard they could come up with a solution that would relieve us senior citizens from this damnable high property tax.

Every one knows that we're not receiving enough Social Security to live half-way decent let alone paying these damn high taxes. Wouldn't this be a good time to make that inevitable New Year's Resolution and exempt us older citizens from this ongodly burden? We've been paying taxes in our town for a good many years and I, we think that the younger generation should start paying their share.

I know several of these young bucks that not only live in our town but they're also living off our town and I think it's no more than right that they be pulled off the welfare role and made to help support not only their family but the city as well.

The welfare is not only paying their rent, it's feeding them and their off-springs while the fathers are tearing up and down the streets in a brand new snowmobile, and better cars than we the tax payers can afford. Are we taxpayers prejudiced? You're damn right we are. So Mr. Council members we think that this is a good time to come up with a very important New Year's resolution and start the ball rolling. If you do something about this stinking situation I'm sure the good Lord won't look you over to close when you pass through those nearby gates. Thank you from all senior citizens in our town.

County ranks second in DNR land payments

Michigan counties will receive over $1.9 million from the Department of Natural Resources as payment in lieu of taxes on the 3.5 million acres of state-owned land.

With the appropriated 34 cents per acre payment, Schoolcraft County is scheduled to receive $133,197.43 for its 245,561.91 acres of land.

It is the second highest payment to a county in Michigan. The highest receiving county is Lapeer with 250,651.80 acres of land for which that county received $190,731.97.

The money goes directly to county treasurers who in turn prorate the funds on to local school districts and townships.

William Cowman, Schoolcraft County treasurer, indicated Monday that the money has been received and has been sent out to the various units in the county.

The breakdown, which normally takes three weeks to compute, was completed in three days this year.

The county general fund received $41,932.33 while the various townships were slated to receive $41,932.33.

Area school districts, including Manistique, Big Bay and Tabquamecon, were scheduled to receive $44,633.29 with the intermediate school district receiving an additional $4,699.09.

Hiawatha records the most state owned land with 81,861.91 acres worth $44,215.75 in the payment monies.

Doyle Township recorded 23,132.15 acres which netted $12,451.36 from the state coffers.

Germfask recorded 11,450.44 acres of state owned land. The state paid $6,188.64 in the tax substitute money.

Manistique has 38,752.30 acres that contributed $20,526.24 to the total revenue.

Mueller, with 2,717.93 acres, saw that land net $1,457.68 while Thompson, with 3,867.81 acres of land, netted $2,088.61 to help county township and school budgets.

Payments, which also amounted to about $1.9 million last year and about $1.75 million in 1974, cover "tax reverted recreation and forest lands under control and supervision of the DNR and any and all other lands held by the DNR, except certain lands purchased for natural resources purposes," according to legislative action, which decides the appropriations for the state.

Within the next few weeks, the state will supplement these payments by funding counties with approximately $2.6 million, covering DNR lands throughout Michigan that were purchased after 1933. These later tax-aid grants are scaled to prevailing local millage rates.

U.P. Winter Olympics set

Some 3,500 youngsters from the U.P., Canada and Wisconsin, are expected to participate in the Upper Peninsula Community Schools' 1977 Winter Olympics, scheduled to be held Feb. 25, 26 and 27, at Gwinn.

The annual event will be hosted by the Gwinn Community Schools.

Boys and girls from the fifth grade through the 12th grade will be participating in individual and team sports from chess to basketball.

This year, because the olympics are scheduled for three days, youngsters will be housed with families from Gwinn, Negaunee, Ishpeming and Marquette area.

Try-outs for the individual sports have been announced with team sports tryouts to be announced later.

The schedule for individual tryouts is as follows:

Saturday, Jan. 8: chess, speed skating, snowshoeing, cross country skiing. All events begin at 9:30 a.m.

Jan. 12: swimming (5th grade and up), 8 p.m.

Jan. 15: bowling (5th grade and up), 9 a.m.; table tennis, 9:30 a.m.

Pay raise opposed

A pay raise recommended by Governor Milliken's office for the director of the Department of Natural Resources has drawn the ire of at least one U.P. legislator.

"The recommended pay increase would raise the director's salary from $30,660 to $41,250," Rep. Russell Hellman (D-Dollar Bay) said in a news release.

"Not included are more than $10,000 fringe benefits annually, plus the use of a vehicle and airplane," said Representative Hellman. "The monetary increase alone is $10,590 or a 34.5 percent increase."

Representative Hellman went on to say "the director of Natural Resources is more or less a figure head. He is appointed by the Natural Resources Commission. Thus, the commission is the policy making body and the director is a subordinate to this commission."

Seney aids schools

SENEY—Schoolcraft County was recently presented a check for $14,957.90 from the Seney National Wildlife Refuge. This money is earmarked specifically for public schools and roads within the county.

This annual payment is provided for by the Refuge Revenue Sharing Act of 1964, and is based upon 3/4 of 1 percent of the adjusted original land costs. Original land costs are adjusted every five years in order to better represent current land values. This adjustment was completed in 1976 and the adjustment is reflected in the increased amount returned to the county.

This is the 11th year that such payments have been made to Schoolcraft County under provisions of the revenue sharing act, Public Law 88-523. Since 1965, $96,611.37 has been returned to the county under the act.

Zellar gets 10-year pin

SENEY, — Lawrence Zellar, Mechanic at the Seney National Wildlife Refuge, received a 10-year length-of-service pin on Dec. 23.

In a letter from Regional Director Jack Hemphill, Twin Cities, Minn., Zellar was praised for the excellent work he has done at Seney. The pin was presented by Refuge Manager Jack Frye in a ceremony held in the refuge office.

Zellar, a life-long resident of Germfask worked several summers at Seney Refuge prior to his present position. He is married to the former Rose Trombley, has five children and resides in Germfask.

Burbot (Burp-it): Catch it, smoke it, enjoy it

Aren't too many people fished up over the special burbot season now underway... after all, what the heck is a burbot? Pronounced carelessly, it sounds like an acute digestive disorder... on a hook and line, it will have you conjuring up visions of a record walleye... but once on land, its beady eyes, eel-like chassis and all-around ugliness will defy you to remove the hook. It is not a prize to brag about...

But if you're a Copper Country Finn with hoop-nets in the back of your pick-up and a permit to set them in the Otter and Surgeon Rivers in your back pocket, this special ten week season is like a belated Christmas bonus.

Burbot, more commonly called "lawyers" in the Copper Country, are occasionally taken by hook and line in larger inland waters or acquired from a commercial fisherman, but it's only during their mid-winter spawning runs under the ice that they are sufficiently concentrated for large scale personal harvest.

A member of the cod family, the burbot is not a large fish, averaging little over a pound, but it is a prodigious egg-layer... among eight females checked during a study, one 20" spawner was estimated to be carrying 1,150,000 eggs and the average was well over 800,000.

The burbot is a deep-water fish, subsisting primarily on small fish and crustaceans so there is no reason why it shouldn't be edible. In fact, it is one of the most nutritious of all fresh-water fish and its liver is packed solid with vitamins A and D.

Having already enjoyed smoked burbot, fried burbot livers and fresh chub spawn on crackers, approaching Alma Haataja's burbot stew was not as traumatic as it might have been to a rank beginner. Admittedly, the myriad eggs and an occasional eyeball floating on the surface and chunks of everything else (only the skin is disregarded) bubbling away at various depths in the milk broth, involved absolutely no aesthetics.

But if you leash your imagination while inspecting the pot and think of something else while its contents are ladled into your bowl, even to a non-Finn, burbot stew is really great.

Well, not great enough to make up some hoop-nets of my own...but pretty great.

In fact, not that bad....

Holiday on fun mountain

Story and Photos
by Mark Eisenlohr

With the recent cold weather and snow, area youngsters, and some not so young, have been taking advantage of the city's recreation facilities.

The skating rink has been entertaining capacity crowds according to recreation director Rick Larson.

Larson indicated that a rink on the west side of town may be added soon to relieve some of the burden on the present rink. Larson also said that more high school students used the rink during the recent holiday vacation than in previous years.

The skating rink is open from 3-5 p.m. Monday through Friday; 1-5 p.m. Saturday and Sunday; and 6-8:30 p.m. every night.

The ski hill has also been doing a booming business, at least they're getting to the bottom (of the hill).

This reporter walked to the top of the hill, like everybody else that day, because the tow rope was out of commission. Larson said that the tow operates sporadically, with frequent rope breaking.

City Manager Robert Risk indicated Tuesday that a new rope would be purchased if the recreation department had funds available.

The walk up the hill didn't seem to daunt the area youngsters there last Sunday, however, as most of them spent a full day schussing down the hill or taking one of three graduated ski jumps built for the aerial minded skier.

The ski hill is open every Saturday and Sunday afternoon from 1-5 p.m. and Monday, Tuesday, Thursday, Saturday and Sunday nights from 6-8:30 p.m.

THE VARIOUS PICTURES ON THIS page all relate to the skating rink or the skiing facility. The airborne skier (above in box) just took the biggest jump that the ski hill has to offer—yet. Some skiers are already planning bigger jumps for higher altitude. Recreation director Rick Larson said that there is a supervisor at the hill when it's open. Not all the fun is in participating, though. This young girl was sitting on the fence at the ski area, perfectly content watching the action.

County ranks second in DNR land payments

Michigan counties will receive over $1.9 million from the Department of Natural Resources as payment in lieu of taxes on the 3.5 million acres of state-owned land.

With the appropriated 54 cents per acre payment, Schoolcraft County is scheduled to receive $133,197.43 for its 246,661.91 acres of land.

It is the second highest payment to a county in Michigan. The highest receiving county is Luce with 260,651.80 acres of land for which that county received $140,751.97.

The money goes directly to county treasurers who in turn prorate the funds on to local school districts and townships.

William Cowman, Schoolcraft County treasurer, indicated Monday that the money has been received and has been sent out to the various units in the county.

The breakdown, which normally takes three weeks to compute, was completed in three days this year.

The county general fund received $41,932.53 while the various townships were slated to receive $41,932.52.

Area school districts, including Manistique, Big Bay and Tahquamenon, were scheduled to receive $44,633.29 with the intermediate school district receiving an additional $4,699.09.

Hiawatha records the most state owned land with 81,881.01 acres worth $44,215.75 in the payment monies.

Doyle Township recorded 23,132.15 acres which netted $12,491.36 from the state coffers.

Germfask recorded 11,460.44 acres of state owned land. The state paid $6,188.64 in the tax substitute money.

Manistique has 38,752.30 acres that contributed $20,926.24 to the total revenue.

Mueller, with 2,717.93 acres, saw that land net $1,467.68 while Thompson, with 3,867.81 acres of land, netted $2,088.61 to held county, township and school budgets.

Payments, which also amounted to about $1.9 million last year and about $1.75 million in 1974, cover "tax reverted recreation and forest lands under control and supervision of the DNR and any and all other lands held by the DNR, except certain lands purchased for natural resources purposes," according to legislative action, which decides the appropriations for the state.

Within the next few weeks, the state will supplement these payments by funding counties with approximately $2.6 million, covering DNR lands throughout Michigan that were purchased after 1933. These later tax-aid grants are scaled to prevailing local millage rates.

Pay raise opposed

A pay raise recommended by Governor Milliken's office for the director of the Department of Natural Resources has drawn the ire of at least one U.P. legislator.

"The recommended pay increase would raise the director's salary from $30,660 to $41,250," Rep. Russell Hellman (D-Dollar Bay) said in a news release.

"Not included are more than $10,000 fringe benefits annually, plus the use of a vehicle and airplane," said Representative Hellman. "The monetary increase alone is $10,590 or a 34.5 percent increase."

Representative Hellman went on to say "the director of Natural Resources is more or less a figure head. He is appointed by the Natural Resources Commission. Thus, the commission is the policy making body and the director is a subordinate to this commission."

Seney aids schools

SENEY—Schoolcraft County was recently presented a check for $14,957.90 from the Seney National Wildlife Refuge. This money is earmarked specifically for public schools and roads within the county.

This annual payment is provided for by the Refuge Revenue Sharing Act of 1964, and is based upon 3/4 of 1 percent of the adjusted original land costs. Original land costs are adjusted every five years in order to better represent current land values. This adjustment was completed in 1976 and the adjustment is reflected in the increased amount returned to the county.

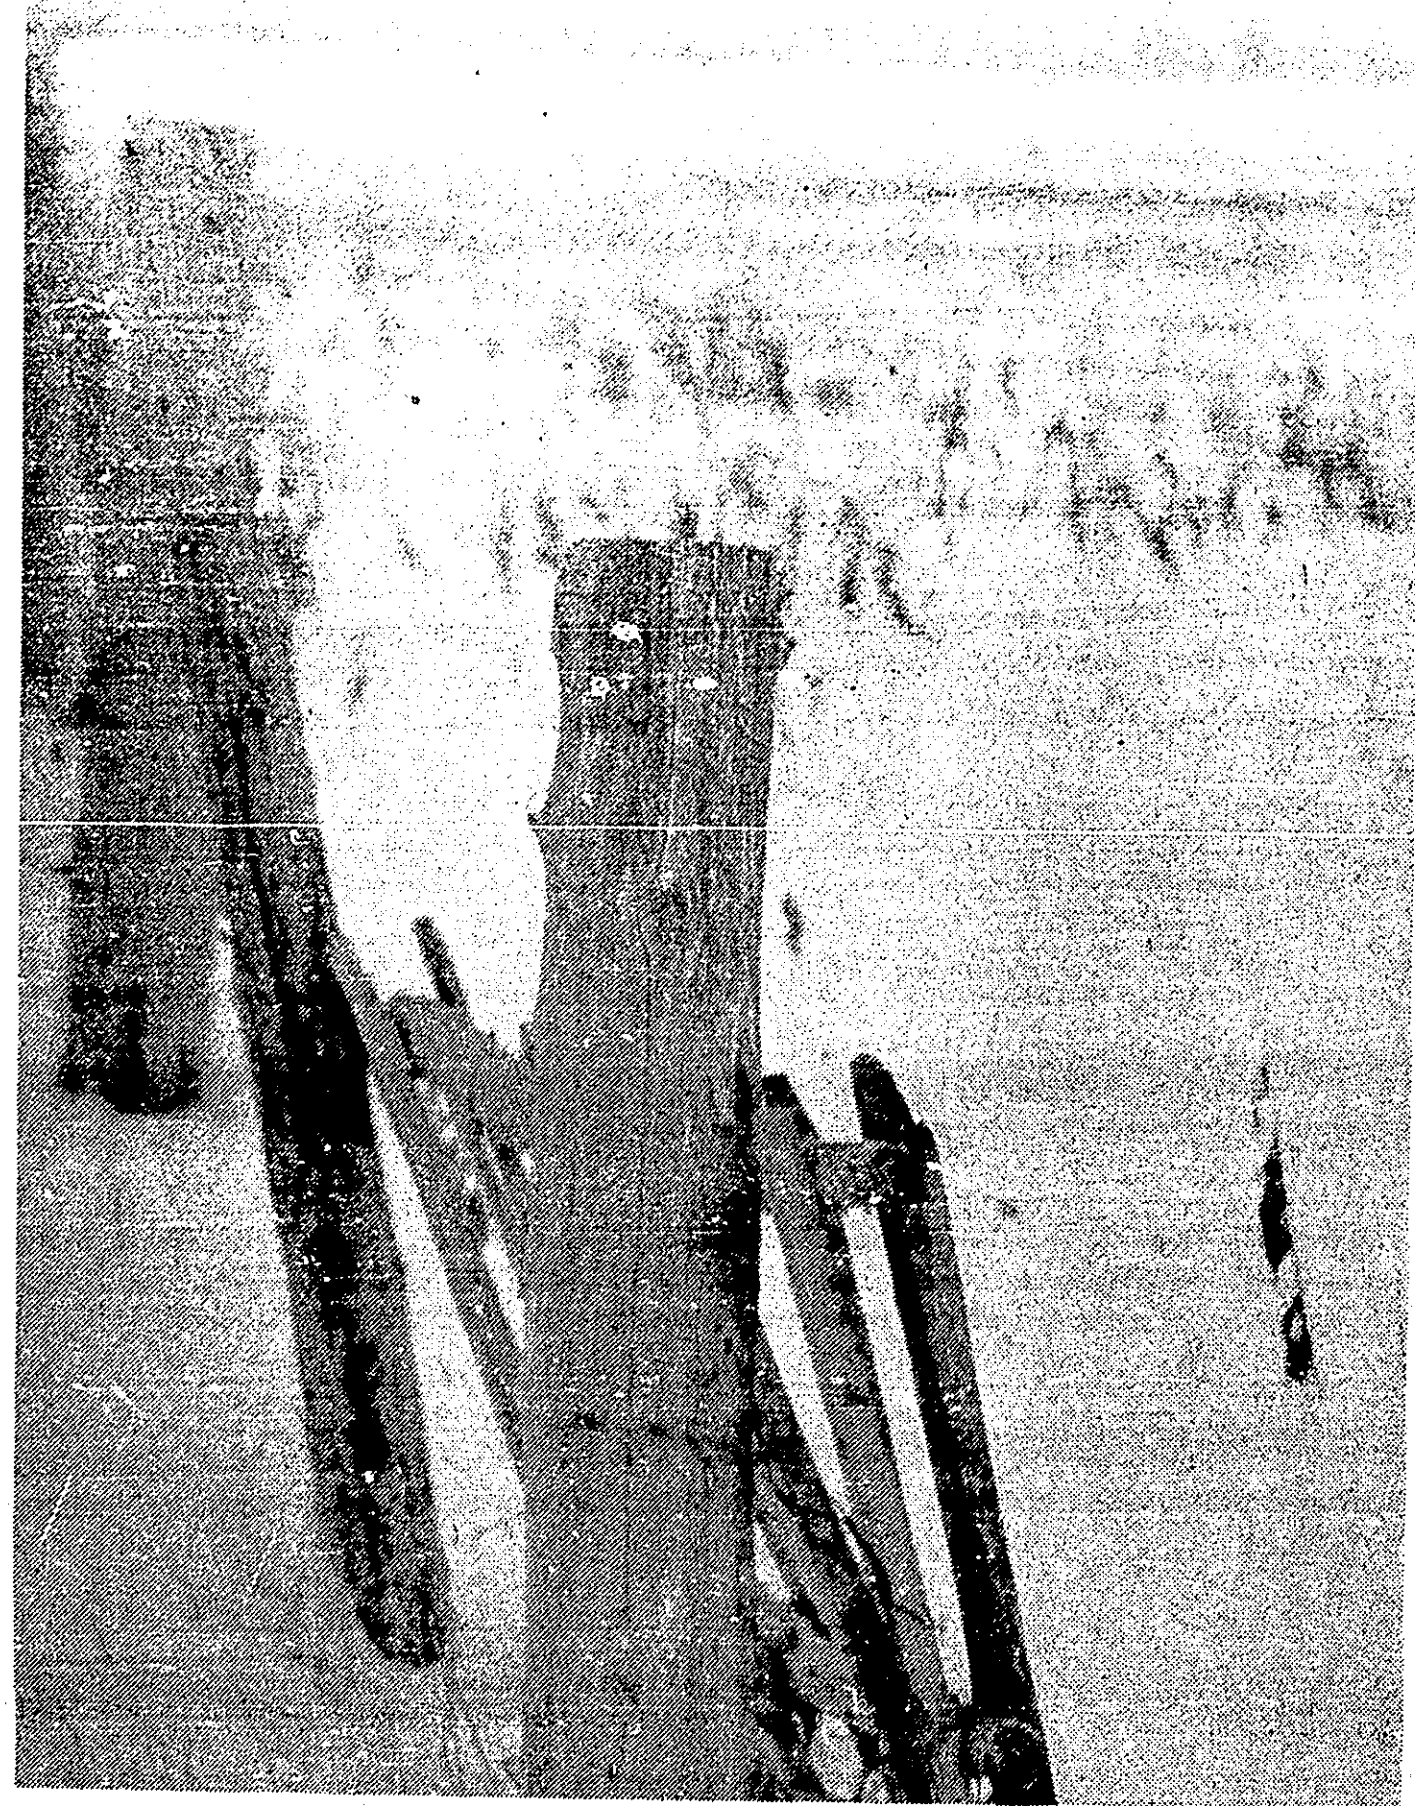

This is the 11th year that such payments have been made to Schoolcraft County under provisions of the revenue sharing act, Public Law 88-523. Since 1965, $96,611.37 has been returned to the county under the act.

Zellar gets 10-year pin

SENEY. — Lawrence Zellar, Mechanic at the Seney National Wildlife Refuge, received a 10-year length-of-service pin on Dec. 23.

In a letter from Regional Director Jack Hemphill, Twin Cities, Minn., Zellar was praised for the excellent work he has done at Seney. The pin was presented by Refuge Manager Jack Frye in a ceremony held in the refuge office.

Zellar, a life-long resident of Germfask worked several summers at Seney Refuge prior to his present position. He is married to the former Rose Trombley, has five children and resides in Germfask.

Burbot (Burp-it): Catch it, smoke it, enjoy it

Aren't too many people fished up over the special burbot season now underway... after all, what the heck is a burbot? Pronounced carelessly, it sounds like an acute digestive disorder... on a hook and line, it will have you conjuring up visions of a record walleye... but once on land, its beady eyes, eel-like chassis and all-around ugliness will defy you to remove the hook. It is not a prize to brag about...

But if you're a Copper Country Finn with hoop-nets in the back of your pick-up and a permit to set them in the Otter and Sturgeon Rivers in your back pocket, this special ten week season is like a belated Christmas bonus.

Burbot, more commonly called "lawyers" in the Copper Country, are occasionally taken by hook and line in larger inland waters or acquired from a commercial fisherman, but it's only during their mid-winter spawning runs under the ice that they are sufficiently concentrated for large scale personal harvest.

A member of the cod family, the burbot is not a large fish, averaging little over a pound, but it is a prodigious egg-layer... among eight females checked during a study, one 20" spawner was estimated to be carrying 1,150,000 eggs and the average was well over 800,000.

The burbot is a deep-water fish, subsisting primarily on small fish and crustaceans so there is no reason why it shouldn't be edible. In fact, it is one of the most nutritious of all fresh-water fish and its liver is packed solid with vitamins A and D.

Having already enjoyed smoked burbot, fried burbot livers and fresh chub spawn on crackers, approaching Alma Haataja's burbot stew was not as traumatic as it might have been to a rank beginner. Admittedly, the myriad eggs and an occasional eyeball floating on the surface and chunks of everything else (only the skin is disregarded) bubbling away at various depths in the milk broth, involved absolutely no aesthetics.

But if you leash your imagination while inspecting the pot and think of something else while its contents are ladeled into your bowl, even to a non-Finn, burbot stew is really great.

Well, not great enough to make up some hoop-nets of my own...but pretty great. In fact, not that bad...

Holiday on fun mountain

Story and Photos
by Mark Eiseniohr

With the recent cold weather and snow, area youngsters, and some not so young, have been taking advantage of the city's recreation facilities.

The skating rink has been entertaining capacity crowds according to recreation director Rick Larson.

Larson indicated that a rink on the west side of town may be added soon to relieve some of the burden on the present rink. Larson also said that more high school students used the rink during the recent holiday vacation than in previous years.

The skating rink is open from 3-5 p.m. Monday through Friday; 1-5 p.m. Saturday and Sunday; and 6-8:30 p.m. every night.

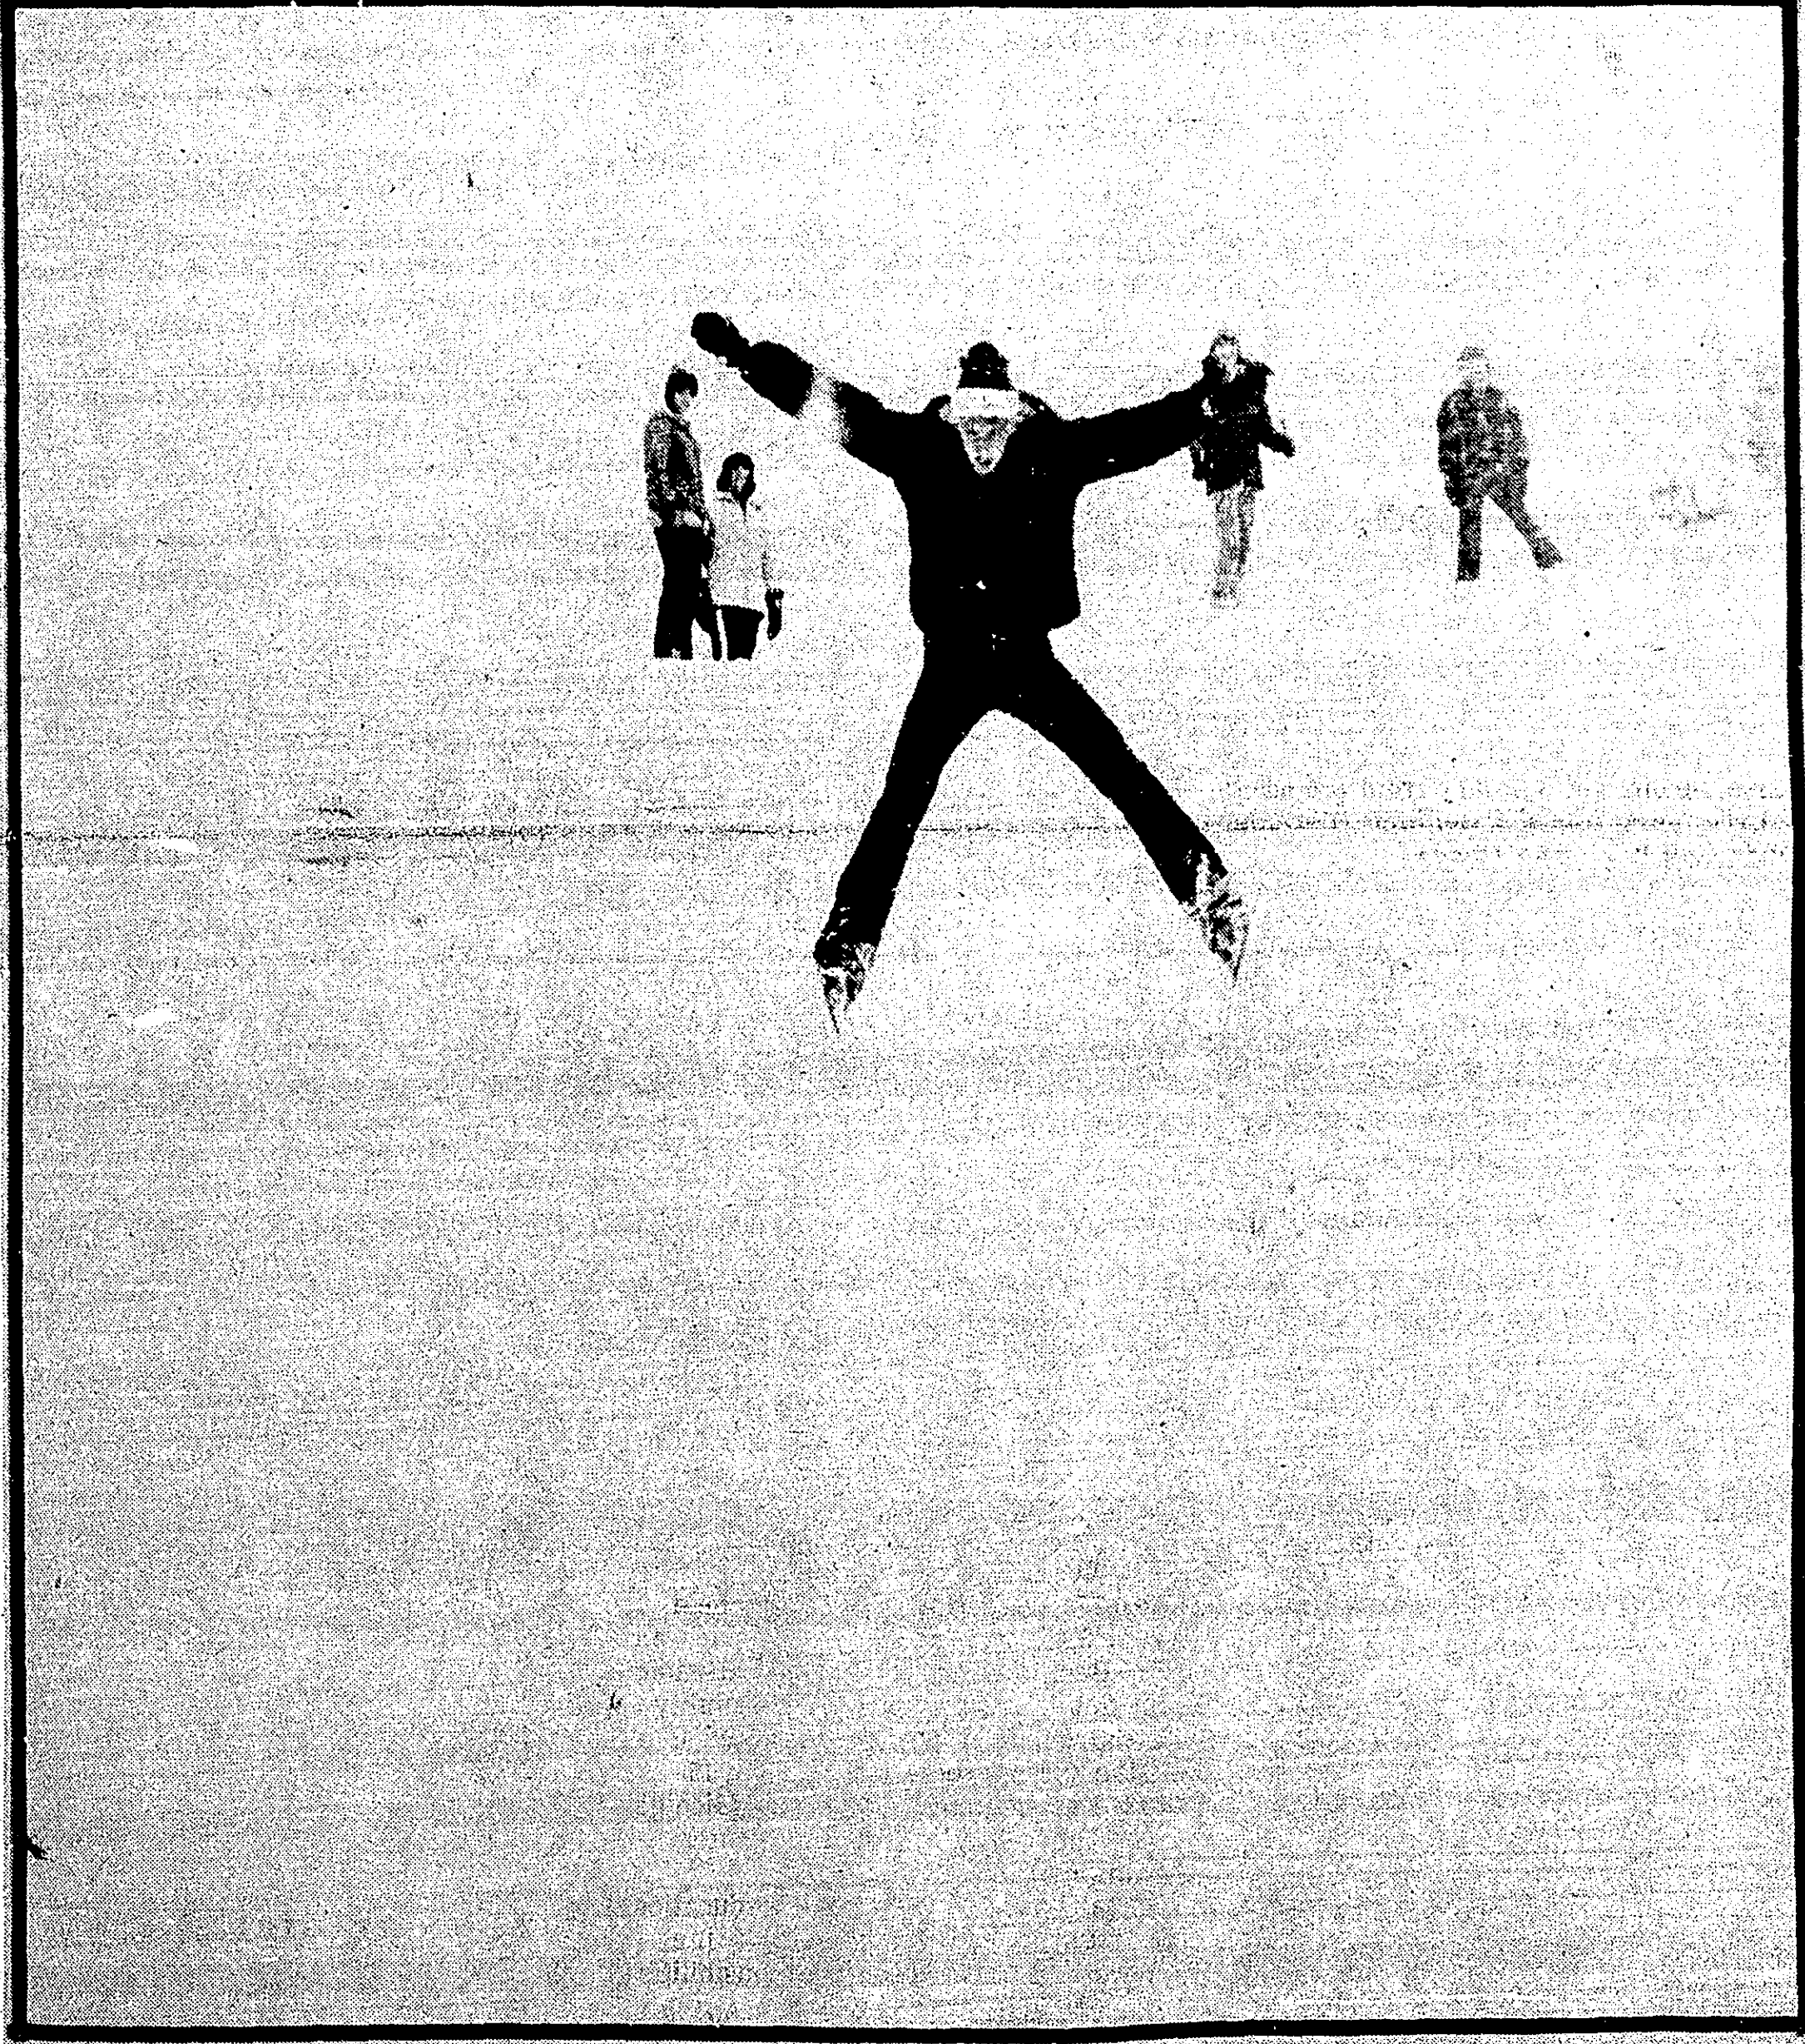

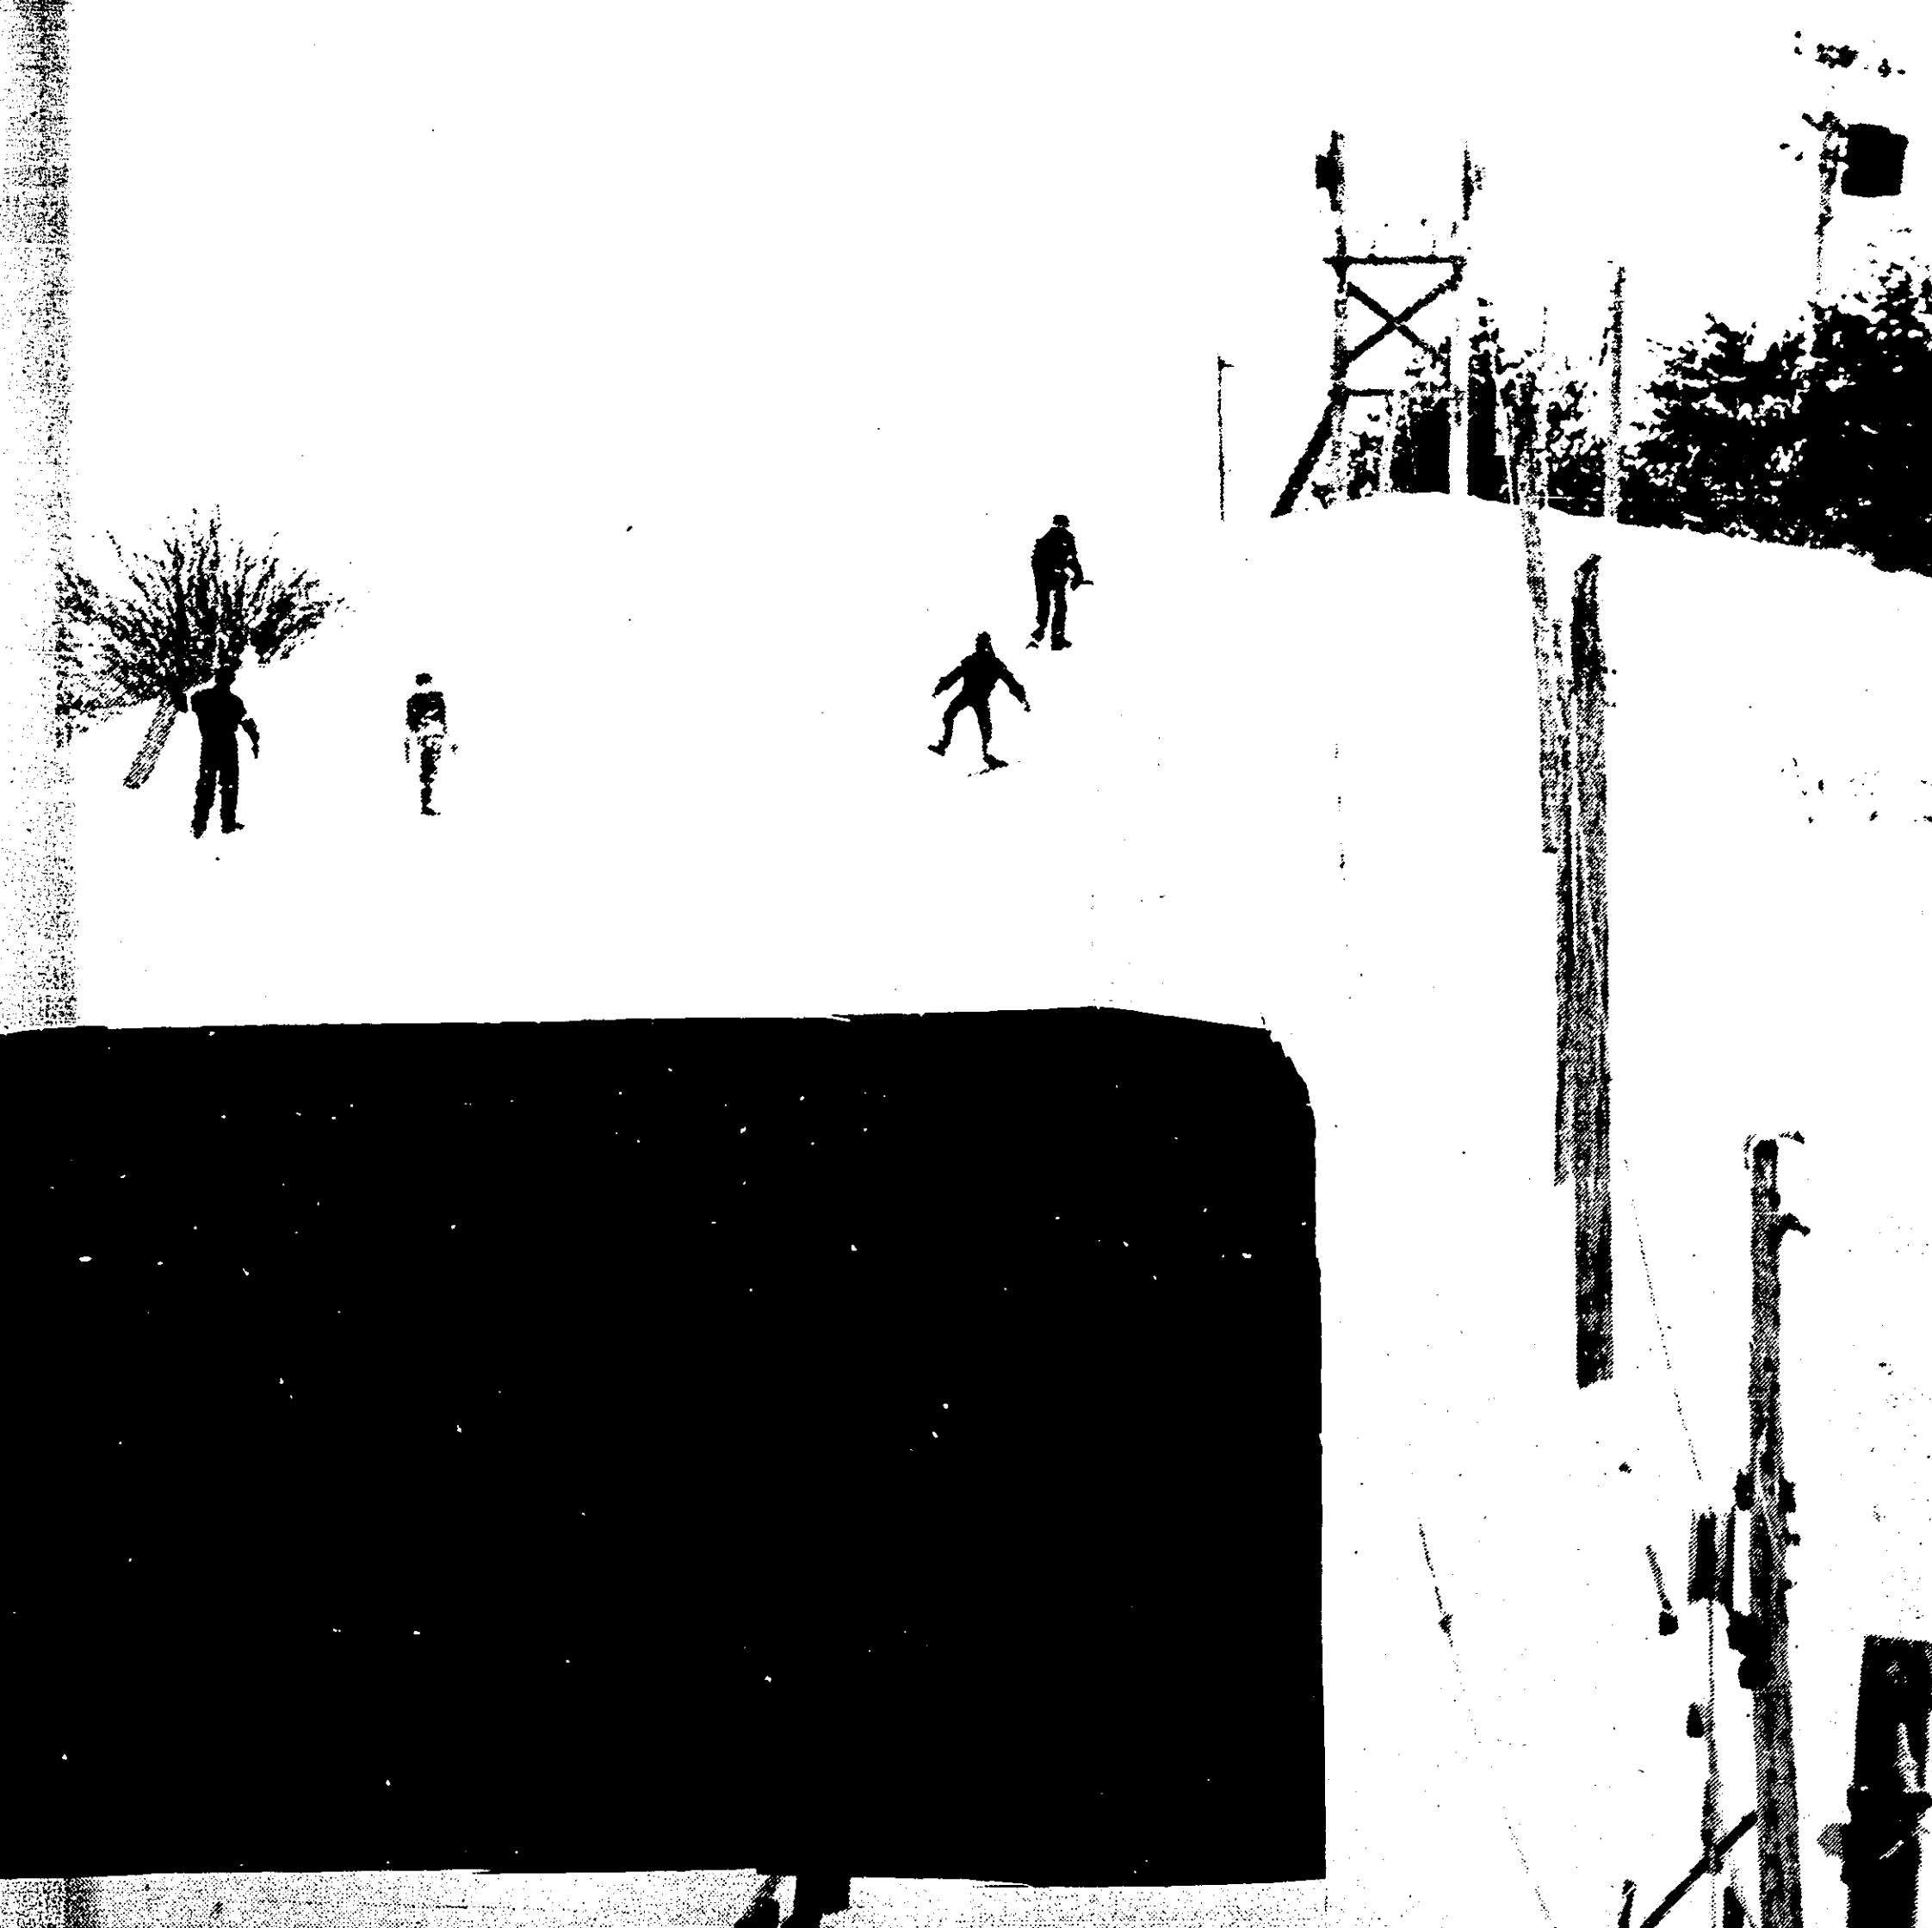

The ski hill has also been doing a booming business, at least they're getting to the bottom (of the hill).

This reporter walked to the top of the hill, like everybody else that day, because the tow rope was out of commission. Larson said that the tow operates sporadically, with frequent rope breaking.

City Manager Robert Risk indicated Tuesday that a new rope would be purchased if the recreation department had funds available.

The walk up the hill didn't seem to daunt the area youngsters there last Sunday, however, as most of them spent a full day schussing down the hill or taking one of three graduated ski jumps built for the aerial minded skier.

The ski hill is open every Saturday and Sunday afternoon from 1-5 p.m. and Monday, Tuesday, Thursday, Saturday and Sunday nights from 6-8:30 p.m.

THE VARIOUS PICTURES ON THIS page all relate to the skating rink or the skiing facility. The airborn skier (above in box) just took the biggest jump that the ski hill has to offer—yet. Some skiers are already planning bigger jumps for higher altitude. Recreation director Rick Larson said that there is a supervisor at the hill when it's open. Not all the fun is in participating, though. This young girl was sitting on the fence at the ski area, perfectly content watching the action.

Six County Consortium for Employment and Training takes on new look and expanded services

by Diane Aaron

ESCANABA-The Six County Consortium for Employment and Training has taken on a new look and expanded services available when the program moved recently to new offices in Escanaba's Mini Mall.

The consortium was formed in September of 1974 under the Comprehensive Employment and Training Act (CETA) and since that time, nearly $9.5 million in CETA funds have passed through the local office under the leadership of director Thomas Hazelwood.

This consortium, which takes in Delta, Alger, Marquette, Schoolcraft, Menominee, and Dickinson counties, is the fourth largest in the state. There are a total of 11, three in the Upper Peninsula, based on the existing boundaries of the regional planning units.

"Up until now," Hazelwood said in an interview Tuesday, "we have been primarily a manpower planning and administrative arm for CETA. Now, we will be able to develop the programs that we have planned, such as On the Job Training."

"We are now also a delivery system for the plans we have made to provide employment counseling and training services to economically disadvantaged persons," he continued.

"Generally what we do is try to provide a person with a skill in order for him to compete actively in the labor market. We also aim our services at the long-term unemployed, although technically, any person unemployed for seven full calendar days is eligible for CETA aid."

"Locating our planning, administrative and delivery systems under one roof will give quality to our services and enable us to have more impact with our CETA funds," Hazelwood said. "The consolidation has also allowed us to expand and add two more counselors."

Hazelwood made it plain that the consortium is not an employment service. "You can't walk in and get a job," he said, "that's the function of the Michigan Employment and Security Commission. We're not here to compete with MESC, but to complement their services. We do work closely with their personnel, in that they refer people to us that we may be able to assist."

Formerly called the Central U.P. Manpower Consortium and located at 1077 Ludington, the new location may cause more "walk-in's looking for a job, but Hazelwood doesn't anticipate this as a problem.

The consortium is governed by a board made up of two county commissioners from each of the six counties and has an office in Marquette at 104 Coles Dr. as well as the one in Escanaba.

In addition to these two offices, the other four counties will be serviced by an itinerant staff one day per week. Alger and Schoolcraft will be handled by a two person team headed by Tony Ebbi. Offices will be set up in the Manistique courthouse and the Munising community center.

Location of the offices in Menominee and Dickinson have not been decided but will be staffed by Susan McCabe and one other person. Hazelwood will announce next week the exact times and days the offices will be open.

Since first beginning operation, the consortium has served approximately 3,000 persons, 2,000 of which now have jobs of some nature.

(One success story involves a woman who was a waitress. After receiving training in business at the NMU Skill Center, she now owns and operates the restaurant she once worked in.

Unfortunately, of this 3,000, only a bare 10 per cent have been female.

According to Hazelwood, there are two reasons for this disparity: "More men have sought our services; women didn't know we existed and were not referred to us," and 2) Training offered has been in areas previously considered non-traditional for women, such as welding or auto mechanics."

"This will be changed in the very near future," Hazelwood said, "one of our primary target populations this year will be women."

"Right now we're very excited about a possible link up with the Women's Center in Marquette. A representative of the Women's Center came down recently to discuss the possibility of a non-financial agreement in which they would provide counseling and we'd try to provide the training program for the women."

A prime mover behind this plan has been Delta County Commissioner Elnora Vander, who also serves on the consortium board.

Hazelwood added that in the past there has been no money available for child care. "However, with the consolidation of delivery programs," he said, "we have changed our allocations and can be more flexible in using our funding."

Four of the consortium's salaried employees are female.

The consortium operates in three main areas: work experience program, OJT and classroom training.

The work experience program, sub-contracted to UPCAP, is primarily designed to high school students who are economically disadvantaged. This gives them viable work experience and an income to keep them in school. The 250 or 300 who have been serviced under this project represent a large portion of those who are aided by the consortium in landing a job.

Under the OJT program, which currently involves 40 private employers; an employer is reimbursed one-half the salary he pays to a trainee. The average hourly wage paid is $4.50.

"OJT can serve more people with less expense," Hazelwood said. "There will be one person in each office whose primary concern will be to develop OJT contracts and we expect to develop an additional 150 contracts in the coming year. We do try to insure that the employer will hire the enrollee when the training period is over."

The classroom project provides the student, regardless of age, a wage of $2.30 an hour while in school. Books and tuition are also paid, as well as mileage, up to $6 per day. An allowance for dependents may also be provided. Any equipment needed is not paid for. If a trainee chooses to live on campus, he is paid $30 per week for room and board.

To supplement the programs already in force, Hazelwood has plans to develop a basic education linkage with the community schools, utilize the Manistique skill center satellite, and work in cooperation with the LSD to put disadvantaged students in a co-op program.

Hazelwood, 32, is a native of Nebraska and a graduate of Northern Michigan University. He was formerly a planner with CUPPAD.

Get going on unpaid bills

Are you feeling the squeeze of unpaid bills?

If so, do not panic. Remember almost everybody is in debt sometime and it is nothing to be ashamed of. But it is your responsibility to regain financial stability.

If you are having trouble paying your bills, take the time to figure out the situation on paper. List all your monthly expenses and unpaid bills in one column and then compare it with exactly how much money will be coming in that month to pay the bills.

If you need help, contact a budget counseling service listed in the yellow pages of the telephone directory under "debt management." Be sure to compare the prices of both profit and nonprofit debt management companies.

If you find you cannot pay a bill on time, contact the creditor immediately. Many creditors will cooperate with you if you go to them before they must go to you. When you approach a creditor be polite and explain your problem briefly. If possible, suggest an alternative payment plan but be open to the creditor's advice.

Once you make an agreement with a creditor - keep it. Creditors are not likely to cooperate a second time if you break your first promise. Also, put the agreement in writing to avoid a possible misunderstanding later.

Of all bills, a person's mortgage payment is probably the most important one to pay on time. However, if you do get

Delta-Schoolcraft county teachers 'Teach-Out'

ESCANABA-Teachers in Delta and Schoolcraft counties will have an opportunity to participate in a unique training experience called a "Teach-Out."

The "Teach-Out" will be held at the Mead Rod and Gun Club on Friday and Saturday, Feb. 11 and 12.

The program is being sponsored by the Michigan Forest Association, U.S. Forest Service, Michigan State University Cooperative Extension Service and Mead Publishing Paper Division.

Teachers will be able to learn and participate in the process approach to teaching.

John Payer, U.S. Forest Service Education Officer, from Milwaukee, will be the program facilitator. Payer is nationally recognized as an innovator for the process approach. He has conducted many training sessions for teachers, public employees and business persons. Loren Werpel, Hiawatha National Forest Education Officer, will assist in the program process.

The objective of the "Teach-Out" is to introduce educators to the process approach through environmental education.

The Mead Corporation is donating the use of their facilities and providing the meals for area teachers.

"Teach-Out" will begin at 6 p.m. Friday, Feb. 11 at the Mead Rod and Gun Club with a group dinner followed by a two-hour introduction to the process approach with value exercises interspersed.

A 7:30 a.m. breakfast on Saturday, Feb. 12 will begin the "Teach-Out" portion of the program. Teachers will work outdoors on a forest investigation and a snow investigation. There will be a picnic in the snow and a completion of investigations by 3 p.m. The period from 3 to 5 p.m. will include questioning strategy, back home application, and an evaluation. Each teacher will take home a packet of resource materials.

Participation is limited to 60 teachers and detailed information is available at local school offices, Delta and Schoolcraft County Cooperative Extension Service offices, and the Intermediate School District office. Deadline for registration is Jan. 20.

Custodians complete two-day workshop

MARQUETTE-Forty-six public school custodians from throughout the Upper Peninsula have completed a two-day workshop conducted by Northern Michigan University's Division of Continuing Education and Extension.

The program, which covered topics ranging from roofing problems to energy conservation, was sponsored by NMU in cooperation with the participating school districts. The program was based on results of a questionnaire which had been completed by the participating maintenance personnel, according to George Tomasi, NMU conference director.

Attending from the area were Orville Olsen of Big Bay De Noc Schools and Harold Mickelson and Phil Villemure of Manistique Area Schools.
