Assessment drop affects city revenues

by Arnold Mackowiak

A loss to Manistique of more than half of its industrial personal property tax base has left the city with only a small increase in tax revenues as city council members plan a budget for 1977-78.

"Last year, the city was able to raise nearly $120,000 over the previous year by instituting a 20-mill levy," City Manager Robert Risik told the council at its regular meeting Monday night.

"This year, despite increased valuation, the same 20 mills generated only an additional $14,000," he continued. "Among other reasons, the tax incentive received by a plant rehabilitation district in the city was primarily responsible for a decrease to the city in personal property taxes. Coupled with a 1.55 factor, this explains the extremely small increase in revenue the city anticipates for this coming fiscal year."

In a telephone interview Tuesday, Risik said that assessed valuation on industrial personal property dropped from $887,650 in 1976 to $420,500 this year. At the same time, industrial real property valuation rose slightly from $1,530,200 to $1,544,150.

In November, the council approved an application of tax relief on a $5 million plant rehabilitation project by the Manistique Pulp and Paper Co. The State Tax Commission granted the relief in February, in the form of an industrial facilities exemption certificate. The certificate enabled the company to make plant improvements to increase its output without sustaining higher assessments on the specified areas of investment for a 12-year period.

However, City Attorney Mike Brooks told the Pioneer-Tribune that the certificate itself should have not caused a decrease in the overall industrial assessment.

"I don't understand it," Brooks said. "The plant rehabilitation district isn't doing it." He explained that assessments on all personal property in the district are supposed to be frozen for 12 years.

"The plant rehabilitation district would only cause it (personal property assessments) to stay the same, not drop," Brooks said.

Risik said he knew of no other industrial assessment changes in the city that would cause the valuation to drop so drastically. Risik told the council that he hoped a general fund deficit of $86,000 the city inherited from the previous fiscal year could be eliminated by the end of this fiscal year on June 30.

"What this means in terms of this year's budget is that in order for the millage to remain the same for another year," he said, "the city must face the possibility of decreased services to the community in order to avoid future indebtedness and tax increases."

Risik also recommended denying $496,812 in capital outlay requests from city departments. "This includes all new office supplies; all new requests for police, fire and ambulance equipment; all new equipment needed in the public works department; all new water and sewer maintenance equipment; all new parks and recreation equipment and supplies; and all of the proposed paving, curb, gutter, and maintenance needs of the public works department," he said.

"The final payment on the municipal marina and the last payments on the front-end loader were approved and are included as our only capital outlay in the tentative general fund budget submitted," he concluded.

Risik submitted a general fund balanced budget of $907,265, up from $819,275 in 1976-77. Largest spending items in the recommended budget are $245,450 for the Department of Public Works, and $220,150 for the Department of Public Safety. Major revenues include $368,000 from property taxes and fees, and $120,000 from state revenue.

In addition, Risik recommended a water and sewer fund budget of $406,800, up from $351,735 in 1976-77.

The city manager said that budgets for both funds are based on the city's current total millage levy of 23.5 mills.

The council set a public session to discuss the proposed budget at 7 p.m. Tuesday in the council chambers, and an official public hearing for its next regular meeting on May 9.

In other business, the council:

—accepted a contract with the Fraternal Order of Police for the period June 1, 1977 to June 30, 1979. Risik said that under the new contract the public safety director will be taking a much more active part in the supervision of the department.

—set spring clean-up dates as follows: May 2 and 3 on the east side, May 4 and 5 on the west side, and Friday, May 6 city wide. Public works crews will be picking up junk and refuse items at curb side on those dates. The schedule will not affect regular garbage pick-up times. Risik noted that the city will be placing blue warning sheets on junk automobiles. Owners will have the option of having a dealer pick the vehicle up for scrap or being cited for violation of a blight ordinance.

—raised fees charged neighboring townships for fire protection charged by the city: Thompson, from $275 to $400; Manistique, $650 to $1,000; and Hiawatha, from $1,600 to $2,000. Risik said the fees had not been hiked since 1969.

—accepted a fee schedule and operating procedures for the municipal marina, including 24-hour charges ranging from $2.25 for boats less than 20 feet in length to $15.50 for boats 60 feet and over. The council set launch fees for the west side of the Manistique River at 50 cents per time and $5 for the season. The Manistique Marina will open Sunday, May 1 and close Sept. 30.

—stated no objection for the granting of a one-day liquor license May 1 for Eagles club installation activities at the armory.

—tabled a request for a $400 donation by the Upper Peninsula Travel and Recreation Association for promotion purposes.

—agreed to allow the city manager to obtain an appraisal of the triangular block across from the post office for possible sale by the city.

—learned that the walkway crossing over the Indian River by the new water filtration plant has fallen over. Councilmembers Doug Rose and Bob White said they would check to see if local National Guardsmen could repair the structure as a unit project.

TWO ESTABLISHED MEMORIALS in Manistique will be moved to a new location by members of the Veterans of Foreign Wars as part of a bicentennial project.

The World War I Memorial at the corner of Elk and Cedar Streets and the Spanish-American War Memorial on Elk Street across from the Manistique High School, will be moved to the lawn of the Schoolcraft County Courthouse. According to a spokesman for the VFW, the memorials were scheduled to be moved Wednesday night, April 27. Exact placement on the courthouse lawn has not been determined as of yet, according to the spokesman. (Tribune photo)

CHANGE studies need for formal organization

Change is coming to CHANGE.

Members of the Citizens Helping-Advance Needs Good for Education (CHANGE) have decided that it may be time to formally organize the group which has met informally for the past year.

CHANGE has been an informally organized parent advisory group for Manistique Area Schools. But following a talk by Patrick Manning, guest speaker at last week's CHANGE meeting, the group must decide that it could be more effective in organizing their efforts.

Manning, Title Nine coordinator in the Marquette-Alger Intermediate School District, told the group that there are four basic parts to an effective group which included planning, responsibility, resource awareness and evaluation.

"But the final ingredient that will determine success is approach and attitude," Manning told the group. "We should minimize the 'we' against 'them' situation."

Manning told the group that it can no longer be assumed that the school is totally responsible for the education of students. "The most important teacher a child will have is his parents," Manning said. He added that the parent is a vital part of the educational process.

"Why shouldn't you be plugged into the school system so that you can check on your child and offer suggestions for his education?" Manning told the group.

Members of CHANGE expressed their concern to Manning about what they felt was little response from school administrators to their suggestions.

Manning suggested that the group formally organize. He added that "perhaps an in-depth explanation with individual members (of the school board) would be beneficial."

Manning indicated that informal meetings with the school board might improve relations. Such things as picnics and dinners with school board members were among his suggested activities.

Manning also told the group that formally organizing would create respect for the group from the school board and school administrators.

Bible distribution plan approved

by Mark Eisenlohr

Representatives of Gideon International attended the Manistique Area Schools Board of Education, Tuesday night, April 26, and voiced objections to proposed procedure for distribution of Gideon Bibles.

The School board approved the distribution of Bibles by members of Gideon International, a Christian businessman's group, several weeks ago, but expressed concern that the distribution be handled in a way that would meet constitutional guarantees for separation of church and state.

Superintendent Richard Bonifas recommended a procedure by which the Gideons distribute the Bibles at the end of the day and outside of the school as the students leave.

Gordon Archer, member of the Gideons, and Harold Rodgers, Gideons secretary, expressed concern that students would be in a hurry to leave for home and thus not have an equal opportunity to receive a Bible.

"We would like to tell the children who we are...and we'd like to tell them what we are, that's all," said Archer.

"I would hope that we could make it as desirable as possible for these students to receive a Bible," he added.

Bonifas had recommended that the Bibles be distributed at the end of the day to avoid what he termed a "captive audience."

"The attorney general has stated in an opinion that you cannot use a classroom as a captive audience to distribute Bibles," Bonifas said.

Students within a classroom are considered a captive audience because they are required to attend school.

"Each youngster must decide whether he wants one," said Bonifas, who cited peer pressure as a reason that a student may take a Bible when he doesn't want one.

Bonifas said peer pressure had been mentioned in the attorney general's report concerning religions and schools.

Archer said that the attorney general's opinion was not law, merely opinion.

Archer indicated that members of Gideons would be in each classroom no more than two minutes.

Following a suggestion by board member, Denton Nelson, the board decided to allow Gideons to distribute the Bibles in the hallways. A teacher will announce the day of the distribution and a short explanation as to who is distributing the Bibles.

The Bibles will be distributed to students in grades five through 12 on May 5 and May 6.

Bonifas also told the board at their meeting that he will be in Lansing on May 4 to represent the Upper Peninsula in Title Nine hearings.

Under Title Nine schools must provide equal sports programs for both sexes. Schools failing to comply may have federal funding curtailed.

Bonifas indicated that Title Nine directors had initially wanted to run girls' and boys' basketball at the varsity level on the same night.

Bonifas said that from the standpoint of gate receipts the move would not hurt the school much, but he would vote at the hearings to run girls' basketball in September, October and November.

In other action taken during the meeting Tuesday night:

—the board accepted Billie Doyle as a voting delegate to the Delta-Schoolcraft Intermediate Election to be held on June 6.

—the board approved Margaret Waters, Marvin Frederickson and Bruce Steinfeld to serve on a joint policies council with Michigan Education Association representatives. MEA representatives include Pat Moberg, Jill Gagnon and Linda Curran.

What's on your mind? Town meeting offers forum

Citizens in Manistique will have a chance to air their complaints and gripes and to offer possible solutions to community problems during a town meeting scheduled for June.

Phil Ott, vice-president of the State Savings Bank and a member of the steering committee behind the town meeting, said this week that the all-day meeting has been scheduled for June 18 at the Manistique High School.

The town meeting was originally planned to run in conjunction with Michigan Week, May 14-22.

However, Ott said, that date did not allow enough time to adequately prepare for the meeting, in which 200 local people are expected to participate.

Town meetings began to achieve popularity last year when they were conducted across the nation as part of the bicentennial celebration.

"The whole idea behind it is to get people together," Ott said. "Workshop leaders will guide them through the day concentrating on social, political and economic problems within the community."

Steering committee members will be guided in sponsoring the program by the Institute of Cultural Affairs from Detroit. Members of the Steering Committee include Ott, Dave Grimes, Gene Nagel and Betty LaPointe.

"The main thrust of the town meeting is getting members of the community to participate and solve their own problems," says Ott.

"The different age groups will get together and discuss community problems and what they feel would be a possible solution."

"The emphasis is on what we as individuals can do," Ott explained.

Ott says that besides looking at the problems facing the community, participants in the town meeting will also look at why there is a problem. A solution to the "why" will then be offered.

After a brief orientation to town meetings in the morning, participants will put together a list of cluster issues. These will be broken down into individual problems. Proposals will be drawn up and presented to the group at the end of the day.

Ott says the town meeting concept could have a positive effect on the community.

"People are tending to be more resigned about their community," Ott said. "They're saying what can I as an individual do? My voice can't be heard."

"We're trying to get community spirit and involvement. This is one way we can do it."

The effects of the town meeting could be long range, according to Ott.

"It depends on how long the steering committee is going to operate and keep things going," Ott concluded.

Record Republican group gathers at Ramada Inn

The largest number of Republicans to gather for a single luncheon in 10 years met Monday noon, April 25, at the Ramada Inn.

Fifteen Schoolcraft County Republicans met at the luncheon meeting with Bill McLaughlin, state Republican chairman, and Steve Fletcher, district 11 Republican chairman.

McLaughlin said he was encouraged by the turnout, the largest in 10 years. He added that it was shot in the Republicans' arm to see the party re-gaining strength in Schoolcraft County.

McLaughlin and Fletcher were on a week-long tour of the Upper Peninsula to meet with Republican officials on the local level.

McLaughlin told the group that election laws are becoming so complicated that "before you sneeze you have to read 17 law books."

"There has been a dramatic change in election laws," McLaughlin said. "No longer can you keep the books in the checkbook."

McLaughlin was referring to a law which requires candidates to report cumulative donations for campaigns. In the past a report of the donations at any given time was considered sufficient.

"We're thinking about doing something with state laws being so complicated," McLaughlin said.

One plan McLaughlin outlined was the use of a central computer to keep records for all county Republicans seeking office.

"We've also formed a legal counsel-to-be announced next week-to help counties with the election laws," McLaughlin told the local Republicans.

There are more than 25 counties in the 11th Congressional district. The district is the largest in the continental United States outside of six states, each of which comprise one district. Steve Fletcher, 11th district chairman, told the group that an influx of Democrats at local government level is eroding the Republican base.

"We are talking about people who are becoming involved. They are no longer complacent," Fletcher said.

Fletcher added that Republicans will become more and more active as pressure from the Democrats increases.

He added that the Republican Watergate scandal and the Democratic sexual scandals have contributed to a weary American public toward public officials.

"To be sure, things like these have made it harder to run," Fletcher said. "But they have also made it all the more important to run."

Fletcher predicted that more Republicans would be on the ballot in 1978 than appeared in the last election. He indicated that Rep. Phil Ruppe should be as strong as he was last time.

The two Republican officials echoed their thoughts and told the group "to start now and get your organizations together, get people running for office."

McLaughlin also told the group that the Republicans must change their image and their strategy if they are going to recruit more Republicans into their ranks.

"Republicans are strong with men 65 years and older with a college degree," McLaughlin said. "They are our strongest age group comprising about 31 percent of our ranks."

McLaughlin suggested a youthful vice-chairman for the Republican party "to work with young people."

Other suggestions from the state chairman included making "politics more fun," and "becoming friendlier towards groups."

Tris-treated fabric is being banned

The U.S. Consumer Product Safety Commission announced on April 7 the banning of the sale of any children's clothing containing the flame-retardant chemical tris (2,3-dibromopropyl) phosphate, commonly known as Tris.

The ban also extends to any Tris-treated fabric that is uncut but is intended for use in children's wearing apparel. Tris-treated children's garments which have not yet been washed are also banned.

The action came after a two-year feeding study conducted by the National Cancer Institute showed that Tris causes cancer in test animals. In addition, the Commission, based on its own laboratory tests and other scientific information available, finds that the chemical could be absorbed by children through the skin by "mouthing" Tris-treated children's clothing. However, at the present time CPSC is not aware of any instances where contact with Tris has led to cancer in humans.

The ban takes effect when notice of this action is published in the Federal Register. Publication is expected immediately. Once published, it will mean that any of the affected products in interstate commerce or introduced into interstate commerce are banned and must be repurchased from retailers and distributors by any manufacturer or others who sold it. Consumers who have purchased but not washed any Tris-treated children's garments or uncut fabric are also entitled to a full refund of the purchase price.

Since washing the garments three or more times removes much of the chemical, already washed Tris-treated children's garments in the hands of consumers are not banned, according to the commission decision, because it does not present a substantial risk of personal illness.

Current flammability standards require children's sleepwear, sizes 0-14, to be flame-resistant. Some fabrics are inherently flame-resistant, but others require the addition of chemicals to meet the standards. All manufacturers of children's sleepwear must meet the flammability standards, but those standards do not require the use of specific flame-retardant chemicals, nor require labeling the type of flame-retardant chemicals, nor require labeling the type of flame-retardant chemical used.

To assist consumers, the commission offers these guidelines:

-Not all children's sleepwear is Tris-treated and children's garments, other than sleepwear, are rarely Tris-treated.

-To determine if a particular child's garment has been treated with Tris, consumers should contact the manufacturer or the store where the item was purchased.

-Washing a Tris-treated garment three or more times will virtually eliminate Tris in the sleepwear that is available for absorption through the skin or by "mouthing."

-Although the commission finds already washed Tris-treated children's garments present little, if any, risk to the wearer, the garments can be discarded in the trash without fear of environmental damage.

Sleepwear garments contain a label indicating the type of fiber used.

The following fibers used in children's sleepwear, sizes 0-14, are treated with Tris to achieve flame-resistance:

Acetate; Acetate Blends; Triacetate; Triacetate blends.

All about Sneaky Fitch

Strains of "The Streets of Laredo" can be heard drifting through the air as the morning sun rises on the building and people of Gopher Gulch.

The jail, the bank and the Red Dog Saloon all seem uneasily at rest.

It doesn't take long after the morning sun rises before the people that inhabit the town begin to stir.

Rickham, the most deadly gun in the west; Mervyn Vale, conscientious and extremely busy undertaker; Maroon, lovable dance hall girl; brave efficient sheriff, Jack Oglesby; Doc Burch, lover of the bottle and town doctor; Rev. Stanley Blackwood, servant of God with a heart of pure granite; can all be seen as they begin their play about the most lily-livered, yellow-bellied, good-for-nothing, low-down, rotten-clean-through, miserable polecat, Sneaky Fitch.

"The Death and Life of Sneaky Fitch" will be presented in a farcical tragedy of three acts by the Manistique Community Players, Thursday and Friday, May 12 and 13 at the Manistique High School Auditorium.

What's Going On

by Anne McDonald

341-5320

In case anyone was puzzled by the "downeast" weather mentioned in last week's column, it was to have read "downcast", a typographical error.

It seems that the highlight of this past weekend was smelting. The warming weather and soft rainfall were conducive to the start of the smelt run. One couldn't turn a CB radio on any channel without getting an updated "smelt report," whether it was a penchant for the little fish or just for the fun of dipping into the streams and getting wet, large numbers of area residents turned out.

The Singles and Solos Club met Friday at Southtown for a smelting party. Fourteen adults and twenty children enjoyed a bonfire and wienie roasts, after obtaining their quota.

Another smelting party held at Marblehead Friday night was attended by Yvonne and Randy Eide, Doug and Jill Carter, Mike and Judy Brooks and Mike and Jeannie Younce. The smelt were not too cooperative at Marblehead, but those netted ended up in the frying pan for a fireside fish fry.

William Males and daughter Julie of Kalamazoo are leaving today after a three day visit with Mr. and Mrs. Bill Males and family.

Mr. and Mrs. Eric Swanson of Elkhart, Indiana and Mr. and Mrs. Wayne Daub of Three Rivers, Mich. were here for the weekend to visit the Swansons' daughter and family, Mike and Jeannie Younce, and to get in a little smelt dipping.

Carolyn and Bill Wegener of Gulliver Lake are back home after five months at the Cliff Dweller's Ski Lodge in Boyne Mountain where they worked over the winter months. They will be reopening the Old Deefield Restaurant for its seasonal opening on Mother's Day, May 8. The Wegeners were notified that the Old Deefield Resort was mentioned in the April issue of the "Michigan Triple A Motor News." It was listed in an article as one of eleven fine eateries in the U.P.

Quote "A young couple, the Wegeners took an old resort and upgraded it themselves. The owner is a great cook." Unquote.

James Anderson, the son of the Harry Andersons of Blaney Park, returned to Minneapolis after a week long visit with his parents.

Mr. and Mrs. Francis Frain of Chicago and Astrid Nelson of Wilmette, Illinois spent the weekend at Mrs. Nelson's home in Thompson.

Mr. and Mrs. John Storr of Thompson visited with Mr. and Mrs. Frain, Mr. and Mrs. Anderson and Mrs. Nelson over the course of the weekend. The ladies are sisters.

Joan and Kathy Nelson and Brent of Rochester, Mich. spent Easter with their mother, Mrs. Arvid Nelson of Manistique.

The second annual Welcome Wagon Pizza Party is being held May 6th, Friday, at the Old Deefield Restaurant in Gulliver. The party is being sponsored by the Wegeners with assistance by the Welcome Wagon Club. Cocktail hour will be from 6:30 to 7p.m. The pizza buffet will be from 7 to 9 p.m. with a short introductory session following the buffet.

All couples who have recently moved into the area are welcome. For reservations, please contact Carolyn Wegener at 283-2535 or Linda Mason at 341-5375. Reservations are asked to be made by Thursday, May 5.

Jeff Nagy celebrated his 21st birthday Sunday at the William Males' home. Attending the celebration were his wife Kathy, Bill and Eileen Males, William and Julie Males and Debbie, Bob and Mandy Males.

Rick Lane returned Saturday after a three day trip to Chicago. There, along with a group sponsored by Bay de Noc Community College, Rick visited the Field Museum of Natural History where the Egyptian exhibit of King Tut's Tomb was displayed.

Mary Ann Welch returned to Jackson, Wyoming recently after a two week visit with her parents, relatives and friends.

Relatives who attended the funeral of Michael J. Barr were Mrs. Eva Barr and Mrs. Robert Barr of Cloquet, Minn., and Mr. and Mrs. George Beer of Traverse City. Also attending the funeral were sisters Elrita and Paulette of Green Bay and Mrs. Mable Lillman of Gladstone.

Sandy Eck and friend Rita Sosnowski of East Detroit enjoyed spending Easter vacation with Sandy's grandmother, Mrs. Cal Steven and also visited other relatives and friends in the area.

Ramond and Betty Jane Scott spent April 11 thru 13 in Chicago where Ray attended the Tri State Hospital Anesthesia convention. While there they attended a performance by the Chicago Symphony Orchestra and also saw Katherine Hepburn on stage at the Blackstone Theatre in her new comedy, "A Matter of Vanity."

Mr. and Mrs. F.G. Bonner, 711 Oak, recently returned from Linton, N. Dakota where they visited their daughter and family, Mr. and Mrs. David (Surae) Eck and sons Joey and David.

Anyone having news to offer the "What's Going on Column", are asked to call me at 341-5320. Any contributions to the column have been and will be appreciated.

Webb-Eck wedding set for Oct. 8

Mr. and Mrs. Richard Webb of Warren, announce the engagement an approaching marriage of their daughter Lori Webb to John Eck of East Detroit.

'Big Fishitis' strikes heart of '77 anglers

Doesn't seem too many years ago that an occasional 16" rainbow was a real bragging fish which, contrary to pyramid logic, was always displayed atop a mess of lesser speckled cousins. Today, such a fish would be lost among the real heavyweights of fishdom where record trout and salmon reign only briefly.

Nothing wrong with big fish and any fisherman who doesn't occasionally dream of latching a record-breaker at ye olde fishery tavern, lies just a bit, methinks. But it does appear that in recent years, fish have become more important than fishing...if you follow me.

A string of bluegills or a half dozen small speckled trout sardined together on the bottom of the creel have become shameful things in the eyes of those dealing only in lunkers. But there is little urgency among those who fish for pleasure not pounds...a throwback perhaps, to the time when a day's relaxation was one of the stronger motives for digging worms.

Obviously, Michiganders wouldn't spend millions each year for boats, sophisticated equipment and tackle if they didn't enjoy the challenge of boating big fish...several hundred thousand Great Lakes fishermen can't be wrong. And there's no denying that a day on the bay is a pleasant experience...if it's a nice day.

But the urgency to bring back something besides a sunburn...such as neighboring boats appear to be doing with aggravating regularity...can replace relaxation with frustration in short order and you are no longer fishing for fun.

You just have to retain your reputation as an expert fisherman and justify great expenditures to that end by presenting a couple big salmon to your wife's relatives -- to do less is total degradation.

But if you don't catch those half dozen small brookies, it's of small consequence for the smells, sounds and sights along the river have provided the relaxation you sought...you've been fishing.

No, I don't have a trolling boat big enough for the Great Lakes...why do you ask?

Golf club opens

The women's Wednesday night dinners and the men's Thursday night dinners will begin May 11 and 12, respectively.

Mayflower camp hosts convention

Mayflower Camp No. 10707, Royal Neighbors of America, Manistique served as host camp for an annual district convention which was held April 21, at the Ramada Inn.

State Officers present were State Supervisor Betty B. Nelson of Iron Mountain, District Deputy Ruth Buntrock of Iron River and District Deputy Roseline M. Quinn of Manistique.

District Officers for the convention were: Oracle Eleanor DeSautel, Manistique; Vice Oracle Edna Swanson, Manistique; Past Oracle Ann Morley, Rogers City; Chancellor Muriel McKiddie, Brimley; and Recorder-Receiver Roseline Quinn, Manistique.

A school of instruction in ritualistic work was conducted by State Supervisor Nelson. Supervisor Nelson announced her retirement as of May 1. She also stated that when she accepted the position as State Supervisor for Michigan, she had two goals in mind. The first was to establish a State Scholarship Fund and the second to see Michigan reach an annual insurance production of $1 million. Both goals have been accomplished.

The following district officers were elected to serve at the next district convention which will be held in Brimley, in 1979. Oracle Muriel McKiddie, Brimley; Vice Oracle Martha Pendell, Sault Ste. Marie; Past oracle Eleanor DeSautel, Manistique; Chancellor Betty LaTulip, Rogers City; and Recorder-Receiver Bertha Alburgh, Brimley.

A 6 p.m. banquet followed the afternoon business session.

Members attended from Perkins, Sault Ste. Marie, Rogers City, Manistique, Brimley, and Gladstone.

Boy Scout dinner set at Marquette

Allen D. Raymond, executive director of the Marquette Area Chamber of Commerce will be guest speaker at the annual recognition dinner of the Hiawathaland Council, Boy Scouts of America on May 1. The dinner is scheduled for 4:30 p.m. at the Northern Michigan University center in Marquette.

The dinner is expected to be attended by more than 100 Scouts and adult leaders from across the Upper Peninsula and northern Wisconsin, according to Burt Boyum of Ishpeming, council president.

Awards will be presented to outstanding persons whose dedication to scouting has made the Hiawathaland Council among the best in the midwest, Boyum said.

In addition, officers for the coming year will be installed.

Raymond, a West Point graduate and retired lieutenant colonel, was in charge of the Army's reserve officer training program (ROTC) at Northern Michigan University before assuming his chamber post earlier this year.

He is active in community affairs and has been affiliated with scouting since his youth, achieving the rank of Star Scout.

Woman seeks help in locating lost relative

It was all a matter of communication. Actually, I'm not sure what the problem was.

Last week, a story appeared in this column concerning the oldest of old timers, Mr. William Woodard, who might have been the second born in Manistique. The information I received, and used, for the story was from an article printed in the Escanaba Daily Press on October 16, 1961.

That article stated that Woodard was 87 years old at the time the article was written. I pointed out that if he was 87 at that time, then he was born in 1874.

Considering that the first white child was born in Manistique on October 15, 1866, I doubted whether Woodard could have been the second born.

To complicate matters even more, the person I received the article from informed me this week that he did not die in 1974 as I had previously reported but in 1977, just before his 101st birthday.

Which means he would have been born in 1877.

Somewhere, somehow, someone had to be wrong. And since I had a newspaper article claiming Woodard was 87 in 1961 and since I did double check my figures, I thought it couldn't be me.

Wrong again. A call to the Medical Care Facility in Manistique confirmed that Woodard had died in 1977.

And furthermore, Woodard, who had been admitted in 1971, was listed on their records as having been born April 25, 1878, which made him 95 years old.

However, Woodard had claimed, as his family does, that he was 100 years old.

I tend to believe that Woodard was 100, as he claimed. Although I suppose it doesn't make that much difference. I'll bet that Mr. Woodard would have been an interesting person to talk to and wish I had known of him earlier.

To live to be 100 years old (or anything close to it) is a remarkable achievement and one surely would have a multitude of stories to tell.

Stories that I'm sure I would enjoy listening too.

The Pioneer-Tribune received this letter in the mail last week from a Wisconsin woman who thought that perhaps we could help her in locating a lost relative.

In the letter, Mrs. Neil Burmester of Pardeeville, Wis. says:

"I am looking for the whereabouts of a teacher who may have taught in your area from the late 1920's on.

"I think she was a rural school teacher.

"Her name is, or was, Lucille Tobey. She is my only blood relative that I know of.

"Any information would be greatly appreciated.

"I was Florence Tobey, then renamed Sally Quinn. Now I'm signed Mrs. Neil Burmester, RR2, Box 141, Pardeeville, Wis."

Perhaps some of the readers out there went to school under teacher Tobey. If so, perhaps you could drop us a line and we'll forward any information to Mrs. Burmester and keep you posted on the progress of her search.

Successful Easter parade

by Dorothy Hoholik

The Manor House Easter Parade was another hit. On April 9, the third annual style show was held with the Manor residents serving as models.

To the tunes of music of the 1940's, each model, male and female, displayed their costume of the day. Remarks about their hobbies and activities at the Manor, plus a reminiscing of days gone by delighted the Manistique Women's Club, who plan a project each month to help the residents keep their interest in themselves and outside activities.

Narrating the Style show was Dorothy Hoholik, who was provided refreshments. Models were photographed by Eileen Renon and Cindy Pawley. Also assisting in the Easter Parade were Marian Shields, Hazel Hughson, Helen Hayes and Robin Pawley. Mrs. Rose Provo, supervisor at the Manor and her husband Frank were guests. Rose has been convalescing for a two-week period from a recent illness, but has returned to work now, much to the pleasure of the residents.

Other activities during the Easter season, were the Senior Citizens Kitchen Band and the VFW Auxiliary No. 4420 who sponsored their monthly bingo party.

The next visit to the Manor by the Women's Club committee will be on May 11 with Eileen Renon, Mary Lou Archer and Mary Jones as hostesses. Bingo will be enjoyed, as this is the favorite recreation by the Manor residents as shown by the results of a recent poll.

Volunteers are welcome to join. Call 341-5720 if you would like to be a part of this worthwhile project.

The Voice of Schoolcraft County Since 1876

DNR equation doesn't figure

One reason given by a representative of the Department of Natural Resources for the department's decision to discontinue salmon fishing in the Manistique River has angered some proponents of Indian fishing rights.

The DNR decision was less than happy news to many area businessmen, for it portends the loss of thousands of dollars in trade from outdoor enthusiasts during the salmon season.

But when a representative of the state agency recently told members of the Manistique-Schoolcraft County Chamber of Commerce that a major reason behind the decision was unrestricted Indian fishing with gill nets, the responsibility seemed to have been shifted from the DNR to local individuals.

But it's a puzzling charge. For one thing, sources indicate there are fewer than five persons in the Manistique area who fish the Lake Michigan environs under Indian fishing rights. That's a small number to be accused of doing such tremendous damage to a fish population.

Secondly, it remains to be substantiated that there was a purpose, let alone a market, for any unlimited harvesting of salmon. The DNR suspects there is a market downturn and out-of-state, but proof is yet to be presented.

Proponents of Indian fishing rights contend, on the other hand, that Indian fishermen primarily seek the same species as white licensed commercial fishermen. In this regard, whitefish are a principal target. In addition, an Indian conservation code substantially agrees with the DNR on reserving certain species for sportsmen. So why zero in on Indians for fish population depletion charges?

What the DNR accusation amounts to is an equation of Indian fishing with illegal fishing. And that equation appears to be unjustified, particularly if it's designed to gain popular support in court battles contesting Indian fishing rights. In a word, legalities are for courts, and not the DNR, to decide.

Some abuse of the CB air waves

If you really want to abuse your mind and body, try sitting in the wheel of a car for 990 miles in one day mad dash across the country. That's what I did for 18 hours this past week.

Not content to rest for several weeks, or at least not try and duplicate that feat, I turned around at the end of two days for a repeat performance. My stamina wasn't as great on the return, however, and after only 15 hours and still 200 miles short of home I had to pull off the highway and sleep for a few hours.

Why would anyone attempt something like that you might well ask yourself? Believe me, it wasn't part of an endurance run, or the end result of a foolish dare. It simply was an economical way for my sister and I to attend our brother's wedding this past weekend in Washington.

The first 350 miles and the last 350 miles of the trip I was without a companion except for my trusty CB. That little radio, the trucker's friend, is a loyal companion for a lone driver on a long distance run. I have never been particularly enamored of CB radios, but without it I'm sure I never would have made it this past weekend.

Old DB kept me posted on the "bear" situation both on my "front door" and on my "donkey." We had "wall to wall bears" in Ohio, a "bear in the grass taking pictures" in Pennsylvania, bears in "plain wrappers" and bears in "Tijuana Taxis." We even had a bear in the "air" and when I got back into Michigan we had a "bear doing flip-flops." Sounds crazy unless you've listened to the truckers banter back and forth on Channel 19.

The world of long distance trucking and CB is a subculture that many Americans, like myself, have only recently become exposed to.

It didn't take too long, however, for the world's oldest profession to pick up on the CB craze and begin "working" the channels frequented by truckers. I was amazed in and around the larger cities crossed by the Ohio and Pennsylvania Turnpikes (or "green stamps" in CB lingo) that prostitutes make "dates" with truckers using the airwaves. The conversations between the truckers and the hookers goes on all night and there's never a dull moment for someone listening in "reading the mail."

The CB radio is like listening in on one big party line with everyone tuned in to what's going down between the people talking. It's a great, impersonal way to eavesdrop and has become the biggest craze to hit the country in recent memory. CB cuts across class lines and has gotten Americans away from the TV and talking to one another once again.

While the trip this past weekend was mind and body numbing it also was a quick education, and an interesting one, on what is happening across the country as reflected in the "short-shorts" between CB'ers.

"You might as well show your teeth, George. goodness knows they cost you enough."

Pioneer-Tribune Q & A

Why can't county yield to schools?

Last year the county board of commissioners voted to pay back building bonds used in financing the new courthouse with allocated mills when they already had a method of financing the courthouse.

Why not take these allocated mills being used to pay for the courthouse and let the school have them? It wouldn't cost the taxpayer any money and the school could quit running a minimal program.

According to County Treasurer William Cowman, the county's method of paying for courthouse bonds has been to charge rentals to each department and court in the new building.

In order to meet rentals, each department and agency has charmed fees and other revenues into the fund. But Cowman says that the county budget is a single package and rentals are within it. And even the rentals will not be enough to meet bond payments, he adds.

In the prospective list of revenues from rentals in the 1978 county budget submitted to the tax allocation board, a total of $91,021.00 is anticipated. That falls short of the total courthouse bond payment of $115,000 for the year. The difference, $23,979 is listed as the value of courthouse office space not being rented. In the past, the county board has supplemented the rentals with federal revenue sharing.

Cowman indicates that without adequate millage, the county board may have to consider whether to levy additional millage without a vote of the people in order to make bond payments. The county board is empowered to do so by terms under which the courthouse was constructed.

"We're giving more every year to the schools," Cowman says. "As long as we can go with paying the courthouse without levying millage, we're going to try it."

From 1973 through 1975, the county's share of allocated millage was 6.8 mills, while Manistique Area Schools received 7.0. Last year, the county's allocation dropped to 6.2 and the schools' share rose to 7.5.

If you have a question about education or other public issues in the Manistique area, drop a line or call the Pioneer-Tribune. We'll try to find an answer.

They were fantastic, fab, inconsequential

The virtual demise of one type of written musical communication is proof that the be-bop era is definitely over. Only diehard younger buffs appreciated them. And today's younger consumer of musical recordings probably doesn't even know what they are.

But they imparted key information in deliberately superhype language. They became an art in themselves in the '50's and '60's. But now they're gone.

They are liner notes, the few paragraphs of printed information on the backs of record jackets. You won't even find them on the backs of LPs by most new groups and individual artists that hit the big time. Some minor record companies still use them on occasion, and you can find them in the backs of some musty classical pieces. Still, they're rare.

In a way, it's unfortunate. It used to be easy to spot a bomb without buying it off the record racks.

"This fantastic fivesome formed only last fall, but this is surely only the first of a long series of hits." That kind of message was a sure sign that this gang of guys is about to make a truly meteoric shot to stardom—and a quick fizzle.

"Singing comes naturally to the boys, and all play guitar," we learned from the back of another record. "Better yet, they sound as if they like to sing together." Those things come in handy, when you're presenting yourselves as a folk singing group.

Besides listing obvious talents and not-so-obvious (or even relevant) facts about musicians, liner notes could give ammunition for conversation about pop music.

All you had to know about Fenster-Sligby's howling was that "he imparted high humor and a feeling of the dramatic, along with a sound knowledge of the gamut from sea chanteys to calypso rhythms to the inevitable western-type roudy. Memorize that and you could justify your bad taste to your friends.

Late in the 60's, liners told little profiles about the hairy, seemingly inhuman individuals in the heavy Rock groups. It made the guys more real. Like a bit about the drummer from Electric Mossback: "He fashioned his first drum by building a practice pad and cutting out and varnishing his own drum sticks from wood." Kunta Kinte had less luck.

"A liner can only stand so many superlatives and hyperboles without becoming trite," wisely noted one record jacket novelist. The writers seemed to turn the art into a science by 1970, and the exaggerated praise could be applied to any number of artists.

"(Fill in the blank group) have emerged as the most exciting group to hit the current rhythm and blues field. They are powerful, hard and beautiful. On stage (fill in your favorite lead singer) is the consummate performer going into some fantastic dimension where a man is stripped of all the phoney coverings of civilization and is faced with the inexpressible truth about love and pain."

If your ears hurt after listening, you'd know what kind of pain.

Children left out of project

The voters in Mueller Township elected those responsible for running our community, and for making the list of children's names to work on community projects, should be informed as to what length these people will go to show their pettiness.

Out of no fault of their own, three children were left out of this project, because their parents do not own land or pay taxes here in Mueller.

"They only rent," was the reason given. This discrimination to say the least. We lucky land owners should take a long hard look next election day. Any one of us could be their next victim.

How to sell tons of steel and plastic

The average driver doesn't care what type of engine is in his car. That's not important. The only important question to consider when buying a new car is: Who sings to it?

Recently I described the anguish I suffered trying to dim the lights on my new Oldsmobile. I kept stomping on the car floor where the dimmer button is supposed to be, but nothing happened. I finally had to stop at a bar and learn from a tambourine player that the dimmer is hidden just below the steering wheel, disguised as a turnsignal switch.

Several readers responded emphatically. Bill Small, for instance, admitted he'd owned a new Olds for almost two months and didn't know how to dim the lights until he read my column on the subject.

"I have read your column for many years and this is the first time I ever got anything out of it," he said.

Small is an itinerant printer currently smudging ink in Richmond, Mich. I have known him for many years and I'm not surprised he could drive a car for two months without locating the dimmer control. He is usually not allowed out after dark.

I also heard from some readers who wondered why I bothered griping about such a minor item as a dimmer button.

"You bought an Oldsmobile Delta 88," one wrote, "so how do you feel when you lift up the hood and see a Chevrolet engine?"

No problem. I don't know how to lift up the hood.

But I did talk with the man who sold me the Olds. I also talked with automotive experts who don't sell cars, and therefore have no axe to grease. They all agreed that the Olds-Chevy engine flap is silliness, a mere tempest in a radiator hose. (I certainly hope you notice the clever way I am throwing in all this automobile language. Otherwise I'll cut it out and get this thing written a lot quicker.)

Interchangeability of parts among various models is common in the auto industry. There are Olds engines in Cadillacs, and the Ford transmissions in AMC Ramblers. Cross-breed substitutions are frequently made whenever shortages occur. This keeps the assembly lines moving and the prices down. The cars run the same, whatever.

That's what the auto experts say, and I wouldn't argue the point. There is as much difference between a $5,000 Ford and a $5,000 Chevrolet as there is between a 54-cent gallon of Texaco gasoline and a 54-cent gallon of Shell.

If It Fitz

by Jim Fitzgerald

That is why no one got very upset about buying an Olds containing a Chevy engine. My Olds dealer claims he hasn't received one complaint. Not even about truth-in-labeling, which obviously doesn't apply to the auto industry where the operative label is "car."

A Chicago newsmen started the fuss about Chevy engines in Oldsmobiles. He was reaching for Watergate, claiming neither GM dealers nor customers knew exactly what was under their hoods. Everyone shrugged. There were no front-page headlines.

For automotive news to interest the public, it must titillate. As when John DeLorean marries a movie actress, or Henry Ford fires Bunkie Knudsen.

You probably remember the marvelous job done by the media when Knudsen got the heave-ho as Ford president. The most poignant moment came when Knudsen had to admit he was so distraught he couldn't answer a reporter's penetrating question concerning his personal cars.

Bunkie couldn't remember whether he had seven Fords and 10 Lincolns, or 10 Fords and seven Lincolns. Thanks to such compassionate and thorough reporting as this, the world was able to weep along with Bunkie.

Everyone wants to know the important differences between Ford's wife and his current girl friend. Everyone already knows there are no important differences between similarly priced cars.

That's why car advertising skips crank-shafts and stresses the unnatural relationship between the car and a famous actor.

Do you want to own a car that is sung to by Jack Jones, talked to by Ricardo Montalban, or caressed by Rex Harrison?

If an engine fell on my feet, I wouldn't know whether to swear at Oldsmobile or Chevrolet. But if Farrah Fawcett-Majors is behind the wheel I will not mistake her for Sergio Franchi.

Too many car buyers can't find the dimmer button because they were born on dim. Which is nice for the car sellers.

Loans at an interest rate of 6 and five-eighths percent may be available to Schoolcraft County businesses that have been adversely affected by drought condition, or will be hurt by the planned closing of Kincheloe Air Force Base.

Raymond L. Harshman, district director of the Michigan District office of the Small Business Administration, has announced that the SBA will accept loan application pursuant to Section 321 of the Consolidated Farm and Rural Development Act from small businesses in Delta, Schoolcraft and 11 other U.P. counties, as a result of drought during the period April 11, 1976-Oct. 31, 1976.

Economic injury loans may be made for up to 30 years. Closing date for loans regarding this drought period is Dec. 8. For further information contact SBS Disaster Assistance Office, 515 McNamara Federal Building, 477 Michigan Ave., Detroit, MI 48226.

The SBA also has announced a loan program to assist small concerns "to pay financial obligations which the concern would have been able to meet if it had not lost income because of the base closing," according to Harshman.

An exception, he said, are persons and firms involved in real estate. This area generally is not eligible for SBA aid but it qualified for the special assistance, he said, "if this activity is the primary source of income of the applicant."

Harshman urged small business persons to contact the SBA's Marquette Branch Office for further information about the special program. The office is located at the Don H. Botton University Center of Northern Michigan University, 540 West Kaye Avenue, telephone (906) 225-1108.

Several books donated

Several books have been given to the St. Francis School library in honor of the fiftieth wedding anniversary of Swede and Nel Nelson. The books were given by Mr. and Mrs. Clyde Strasser, Mrs. Amanda Carlstrom and Mr. and Mrs. Lyle Kotchen.

The additions to the library are Prayer Book for Young Catholics and Saints and Heros Speak, both by Fr. Robert Fox and A Priest Named Horse by John F. Donovan.

Two books have been presented to the Manistique School and Public Library as a memorial to the late Fred C. Hinkson.

"Marvels and Mysteries of the World Around Us" by Reader's Digest and "Your Retirement," by Herbert Askwith, were given by the teaching staff of Hiawatha School. The latter discusses how to plan and enjoy retirement. "The World Around Us" is captivating and contains extraordinary illustrations and photographs.

The books are currently available for circulation.

"How to Play the Guitar" by Peter Collins has been presented to the Manistique School and Public Library as a memorial to the late Tony Walters by members of his family.

The new publication deals with reading music, chord construction and interpretation for all styles of guitar playing.

"National Outdoorsmen's Encyclopedia," edited by Erick Bergaust has been presented as a memorial to the late Lee Demers by relatives.

The book is a complete guide to outdoorsmanship, wildlife, hunting, fishing, national parks and forests, state parks, campgrounds and a glossary and reference section.

The books are currently available for circulation.

"A Change and a Parting" autographed by the author, Barbara S. Yambura, has been presented to the Manistique School and Public Library as a memorial to the late Kate Deloria of Garden.

The book, given by a friend of the family, gently draws back the blinds from the prim windows of the Amanas houses to reveal the author's childhood as a daughter of the Amanas and the strict religious tenets laid down by Metz and Heinemann for the Inspirationists in Iowa.

The publication is currently available for circulation.

"The Freedom Edition of the Holy Bible" has been presented to the Manistique School and Public Library as a memorial to the late Mrs. August Carlson (Lena Haoglund).

The King James version, presented by friends of the family, contains many of the world's most cherished paintings in this special commemorative edition.

"How to Rear Children" by Dr. Jack Hyles, given in memory of the late Mrs. Cecil Gonder by friends of the family, is a workbook containing ideas, philosophies, and methods necessary in the rearing of children to become well-adjusted adults possessing character, integrity, and chastity.

Books are currently available for circulation.

Schedule of events for Medicare patients

Hi Everyone,

As I write the news today and wondering what to talk about this week, it occurs to me that I often become repetitious even though I try not to be and often I fall right back into the same routine. There are many activities in the facility that do not receive mention often enough so to let you know what kind of a week we have and where the news comes from I'll give you my schedule.

Mondays are fairly quiet, but that's the best way to start the week, I guess. Tuesday morning, services are held in the chapel by the Pentecostal Church. Wednesday afternoon we have church services conducted by members of the Ministerial Association and Wednesday evening a sing-a-long is held in the day room with Lydia Bouschor who plays the accordion and leads the singing. Thursday afternoon we have movies and popcorn. Friday morning mass is said at 10:30 a.m. and Friday afternoon the Bingo Volunteers sponsor a bingo game with lunch to follow.

For every patient's birthday, the Elks provide two birthday cakes to be served to every patient at refreshment time and the third Tuesday of every month, the V.F.W. Auxiliary sponsors a monthly birthday party. For every month there is a special holiday party for whatever holiday falls within that month and a different club or circle group sponsors the party each time. Sometimes it sounds like a lot of partying, but a holiday party is important along with all the decorations that hang throughout the building, because it helps to identify the season or the month for a patient who is confused, whether it be from illness or confinement.

The third Saturday of every month, church service are conducted by the Fayette Baptist Church. The Goodwill Club has a standing offer to do any shopping that we need done for our patients and of course, prizes for bingo games are all donated. I think Manistique has the most thoughtful and considerate people of any place around and the above schedule certainly proves it.

We sure have been having some lovely days. Even the rainy days haven't been so hard to take, probably because we were so short of rain last year. Last week seemed to go by exceptionally fast, at least for me and I think the patients in diversional therapy feel the same way. We were kept very busy though and that will make time fly.

We finally brought our bird feeder in and one of the fellow sanded it down and put a few fresh coats of shellac on it. So now all we have to do is fill it up and hang it outside again and we'll be able to watch the birds once more.

Many thanks to Hazel Horning and Doris Forhart of Garden for the lovely treats they provided, to the Faith Presbyterian Church Circle for the lovely party and to Jug Beaudry for his contribution for our "happy hour." Bingo prizes were donated by Phyllis Carlson, Stella Jaque, Opal Berg and Hazel Horning. Thank you all.

Birthday greetings for the first half of May go to Helen Anderson on May 3, and Edith Olson on May 14.

Have a nice week.

Lately all we hear on TV is our energy crisis. I saw this little article in the pamphlet "Highways of Happiness", given to me by Gene Johnson and I will quote from it. "Energy Conservation - for People, too."

A physician friend of ours came up with an interesting analogy recently. He had read several articles on energy conservation in the home and in using automobiles. "Common sense good advice," he said, "and equally good when applied to people."

For example, he pointed out, the first suggestion in such articles always relates to the power plant - make sure it's functioning efficiently, whether it's the oil burner in your house or the engine in your car. Or the vital organs in your body. A tuneup or a checkup can mean a lot of extra mileage.

The next big of advice, invariably, is to take it easy. Don't be a jack rabbit driver. Don't burn fuel to heat your house to 70 degrees when you aren't in it, or when you're asleep. Similarly, don't burn up a lot of nervous energy unnecessarily when you have a chance to relax and replenish it.

The experts also recommend plenty of insulation to prevent energy loss in car and home. Six inches of insulation, our friend says, atop the human cranium might also cut down on the vast amounts of energy lost by worrying about things that will never happen, or that have already happened and can't be changed. A little extra skin insulation might also help people who waste energy plotting retribution against those who haven't done anything to us yet.

"Each of us needs to be reminded occasionally," he concluded, "that we are, like other common sources of energy, a limited resource. A little conservation could result now only in a longer life but a happier one."

Energy-saving tips for home construction

County Extension

by Elvin Hepler

If you are in the process of building or are preparing to build a new house you might consider designing it for low energy consumption. With the shortage of petroleum products or at least the skyrocketing costs here are some tips you could incorporate in your new home.

Reducing the size and number of rooms needed by the family helps considerably. Bedrooms of 120 square feet and smaller living rooms are recommended. Large living rooms with 50 to 150 square feet of unused space in the center of the room often are seldom used. Combine activities into a large family room where the whole family can be together.

Instead of wide open areas and high cathedral ceilings, use normal ceilings. Also, use doors so parts of the home can be closed off when not being used.

Extra windows lose heat. Limit the size and number of windows to those needed to look outside. Do not locate windows on the north or west unless absolutely necessary. Use insulated glass windows with storm windows to reduce heat loss.

Walls can be made thicker by using 2 x 6 or by alternating 2 x 4's on 12-inch centers to obtain 5 to 6-inch width for insulation.

A vestibule or entrance hall for each outside door will prevent cold drafts from circulating throughout the entire house when the outside door is opened.

Plan the house so you have different heating zones. This will allow you to shut off bedrooms from the rest of the house. Also, be able to close off a large living room when not being used by the family, especially where a family room is the center of focus.

Finally, a fireplace is a decorator item in most cases, instead of a heat producing element. They are very inefficient heaters and if improperly placed can withdraw heat from other rooms and actually lower the temperature by the draft created. A fireplace should be placed in a small room that can be sealed off from the rest of the house.

Dr. James Boyd of Michigan State University has just completed a new bulletin on designing homes for low energy consumption and it will be available soon from our office.

Library board to call on city to share costs

Kate LeBrasseur, head librarian of the Manistique School and Public Library, told the library board Friday that Library Week April 18-22, had been a success and that more than 112 books were returned on Amnesty Day Wednesday, April 20.

Books were returned on Amnesty Day without penalty of fine.

Schools in the Manistique area were visited recently, LeBrasseur said, and told of library methods and procedures.

LeBrasseur said she visited "every grade in every school" in the past few months and field trips were planned for those attending the central school next fall.

The city of Manistique will also be called upon to foot its fair share of the library costs soon.

The seven members of the library board voted to recommend to Richard Bonifas, superintendent of Manistique Area Schools, that he request the city to pay for some portion of the financing of the public library.

"I think the city should be responsible for their portion of the school-public library," LeBrasseur said in proposing that the board make the recommendation to Bonifas.

LeBrasseur added that Gladstone currently pays $4,000 per year for operation of their school-public library and that cost is expected to double.

State law also requires that the city partly support the library, LeBrasseur told the board.

In the final business of the meeting, the library board adopted a resolution commending Allan Richter for his work on the community library advisory board.

Richter was promoted recently from postmaster in Manistique to postmaster in Kaukauna, Wis.
