End to building fees asked

by Mark Eisenlohr

Should a homeowner be protected against a carpenter who does not build a home up to today's standards?

Should the majority of people be covered by such protection at the objection of a minority?

And should a taxpayer in one part of the county be taxed for building permit costs in another area of the county?

These were just some of the questions that were heard at a meeting of the building code permit fee schedule committee, Tuesday, May 3.

The meeting, held with the initial objective of determining whether permit fees now levied are too high, ended with a recommendation that the county board representatives will take back to the next meeting of the Schoolcraft County Board of Commissioners.

In that recommendation, Edward Way, chairman of the committee, will ask the county to consider eliminating all building permit fees.

At least one committee member questioned the need for a building code at all.

When you're paying for something you should get something out of it," Bob Knoph, area carpenter, said.

"I don't see anything good coming out of the building code."

Dick Schlosser, state building code inspector from Gladstone, responded to the need for a building code.

"Health, safety and welfare is what the building code is based on; safety for the family themselves and for the next person who buys the house," Schlosser said.

"As far as construction goes, I can show you some homes that only lasted a week, a month."

"Shouldn't I have the right to do what I want with my own home," questioned Knoph. He cited instances of older homes, especially in the south, that have lasted for years, built before a building code existed.

"The old houses were built with full-size lumber with no knots," explained Schlosser. "Today you have cheaper lumber."

Ernest Hoholik, Schoolcraft County Board of commissioners chairman, told the group that the building code system is designed to protect the majority even though a minority may object.

"I'm not criticizing your work as carpenter. I know you people and I know your work but protection should be offered people against a carpenter who does cheap work," Hoholik said.

The county currently administers the building code, but according to Hoholik, they could allow the state to administer it which would result in higher fees and additional building requirements.

Hoholik indicated that the county building code is operated in a minimum number of requirements.

It cost the county more than $11 thousand last year to issue permits and inspect buildings in compliance with the building code.

"We are losing money," Hoholik said. "This isn't a money-making proposition. We are just trying to recover a percentage of the costs through the use of fees."

Last year it cost the average homeowner $62 in building permit fees. A little more than $9 thousand was collected for the 256 building code permits issued.

In the recommendation that will go before the board of commissioners at its next meeting, all permit fees will be abolished. The cost connected with the administration of the building code would then be placed on county taxpayers.

Hoholik indicated that he felt this was a step backwards and that the user of the building code should pay, not the taxpayer.

However, Knoph argued that the free building code system would encourage additional building which would generate additional tax revenues.

"There is a certain amount of construction that is necessary," said Knoph. "We have a minimum amount of construction in Schoolcraft County."

According to Knoph, the additional tax revenues would adequately cover the loss of permit fees.

At least one other option remains open for townships as a whole that was explored during the two-hour meeting.

Supervisors of two townships, Manistique and Hiawatha, initiated action to secede from the county building code and administer their own.

The two supervisors were told how they could withdraw from the county building code.

"Each township must prove to the state that they have an acceptable plan for initiating a building code," Hoholik told the supervisors.

Hoholik indicated that responsibility for proper inspection falls on the township should it initiate its own code, and not on the county. He added that should enforcement be lax, the state would come in and apply its own building code.

Neither supervisors had a comment on where the money would come from the township building code administration and inspection.

The fate of the building fees will rest on the County Board at its next meeting, currently scheduled for the third Tuesday of this month.

City corrects assessment error

The City of Manistique will have $32,485 more coming in tax revenue than had been foreseen at the city council's regular meeting on Monday, April 25.

City Manager Robert Risik told council members at a budget work session Tuesday evening that personal property within a plant rehabilitation district at Manistique Pulp and Paper Company appears in a special category, and the mill will be paying taxes on the property within the district.

Risik had told the council on April 25 the district was primarily responsible for an apparent decrease to the city in personal property taxes, and because of that an other revenue, an extremely small increase in revenue, was anticipated for the coming fiscal year.

On Tuesday night, he indicated city officials had overlooked the new tax category in projecting its revenues for 1977-78.

The city manager said it should be made clear that the paper mill will be paying its taxes on property outside the district, plus on the old equipment in the special category at a frozen valuation rate.

"The paper mill is not paying less (taxes)," Risik said.

The announcement followed a meeting Friday between Howard Benson, city assessor; Robert Dawson, county equalization director; Walter Alexander and Leif Christensen, both of the Manistique Pulp and Paper Company, concerning the tax roll.

The city manager released a memorandum concerning the meeting, in which the participants concluded that the "establishment of the tax district in no way caused the city's tax revenue from the paper company to be less than it was before the rehabilitation district was established."

Dawson told the Pioneer-Tribune Tuesday that as a result of the two tax billings, the company will pay more taxes than it did in 1976, before the rehabilitation district was formed. He said that property on the Industrial Facilities Tax Roll will be maintained at an Equivalent State-Equalized Valuation for 12 years.

The city council approved the mill's application for tax relief on a major plant rehabilitation project. The relief, granted by the State Tax Commission, enabled the company to make improvements without sustaining high assessments on the specified areas of investment.

"There's a break," Risik told the council, "but not a crash break." He noted that the mill would still pay taxes on the old equipment in the special category.

During the budget work session, the city manager altered the amount of estimated property tax revenues for the general fund from $356,000 to $400,485 because of the tax district and other income adjustments. The proposed general fund budget for 1977-78 was raised from $907,265 to $925,750.

Councilmember Doug Rose said that "everything possible should be done" to give city taxpayers a tax cut in the rate of millage of operation purposes.

"I would hope the city council could see it in their hearts to lower the millage below 20 mills," Rose suggested.

Reductions in street lighting and ambulance service to county residents outside the city limits were discussed, but no recommendations were made.

According to the city manager's recommended budget, the full levy of 20 mills for operations, plus 3.5 mills for bond and sewer funding will be required.

The council will formally review the budget at a public hearing set for the council's regular meeting beginning at 7:30 p.m. Monday, May 9.

Equalization report shows taxation pie

by Arnold Mackowiak

Residential property owners will continue to pay most of Schoolcraft County's property taxes, if the recently accepted 1977 county equalization report is any indication.

However, residential real property cuts a slightly smaller piece of the property valuation pie than it did in 1976. Assessed valuation figures are a key element in determining the amount of tax bills for the coming year.

The report, which County Equalization Director Robert Dawson presented to the Schoolcraft County Board of Commissioners on Wednesday night of last week, showed that residential property would account for 68 percent of the total real property assessed valuation. The corresponding figure last year was 69 percent.

Meanwhile, industrial real property went from 6.3 percent in 1976 to 8.1 percent this year, accounting for more of the real property valuations.

Dawson's report showed that overall equalized valuation for real and personal property rose from $63,883,663 to $65,064,278. The total was realized mainly through higher assessments on individual parcels.

Residential real and personal property was assessed at $30,921,285, while industrial real and personal stood at $7,215,650 in terms of assessed valuation.

With higher assessed valuation, adjustment factors were smaller than in 1976 in the city of Manistique and 11 townships except Inwood. The township, equalized as assessed last year, had a 1.03 factor this year.

Assessed valuation figures are multiplied by a factor to bring the amounts up to equalized valuation. Once a state equalized valuation figure is approved later in May, that amount in turn is multiplied by the millage levy to determine tax bills.

Without dissent, the county board accepted the recommended equalized valuation. Commissioners Ernest Hoholik, William Tennyson, Lindsay Frenette, Edward Way, Kenneth Mortensen and Daniel Klarich voted yes. Earl LeBrasseur was absent.

Last year, over the objections of some citizens, the board at the state's suggested level, rejecting a county assessed valuation of $49,403,505 and heeding results of a state sales study showing higher property values.

Total 1977 equalized valuation for real property and factors for each government unit follow: Doyle, $4,908,345, 1.096; Germfask, $1,982,829, 1.473; Hiawatha, $7,788,588, 1.192; Inwood, $4,829,940, 1.031; Manistique, $4,287,791, 1.395; Mueller, $5,783,875, equalized as assessed; Seney, $3,302,267, 1.083; Thompson, $4,982,462, 1.615; City of Manistique, $16,015,316, 1.154. Total equalized valuation for personal property was $11,182,865.

In other matters, the board:

--accepted a $50,000 anti-recession budget from County Treasurer William Cowman as follows: $20,000, sheriff's department; $10,000 general administration; $1,500, Medicare airport; $7,000, health department; $5,000, airport; and $6,500 County Department of Public Works.

--appointed Mortensen to a one-year term and Mack McDonald and Russell King to three-year terms on the Soil Erosion and Sedimentation Control Appeal Board.

--raised the pay rate for a CETA employee at the airport from $2.98 to $3.50 per hour retroactive to March 21.

--re-appointed Rudolph Lawrence and Fred Hahne to the Community Action Agency Board.

--approved an annual patrol agreement between the sheriff's department and the U.S. Forest Service for the department to patrol forest roads during the summer.

--learned from Cowman that Social Services has received about $50,000 owed the county for current billings at the Medical Care Facility. The payments, some five to six months overdue, were owed by the State Department of Social Services.

Hiawatha National Forest parks open on May 15

The United States Forest Service has announced that the five parks and two picnic areas in the Manistique district of the Hiawatha National Forest will be opened May 15.

While it may be a couple of weeks before the areas officially open, some campers have been getting an early start to this season.

However, Wally Crane, forester, said that those found camping early will be asked to leave.

"We've had a few early campers, but not many," said Crane. "With this type of weather it is only natural that a few people would want to get an early start."

Crane said that the busy season for campers will probably not begin until late June or early July. However, he indicated that the parks get heavy local use around Memorial Day.

"If it stays like this," said Crane, referring to the relatively mild weather, "we could get some campers a little early this year. But if it rains for a few weeks they may not come until the end of July."

The parks and picnic areas that will open May 15 include the Camp 7 camping and picnic area; the Indian River camping and picnic area; and campgrounds at Little Eass Lake, Colwell Lake and Corner Lake.

As in the past, gate guards will be stationed at Camp 7 campground in Delta County. In addition, Delta County Sheriff's officers will be asked to patrol the area.

Fees for overnight use of campgrounds will remain at the $2 assessment.

The picnic and camping facilities have a combined capacity of 1,140 campers or picnickers.

Manistique resident killed in collision

A 46-year-old Manistique resident was killed in a two-car head-on collision over the weekend according to Michigan State Police Officers of the Gladstone post.

Homer Joseph Weber of 111 Walnut was pronounced dead at the scene of the accident on Saturday, April 30.

According to state police officers, Weber was northbound at 4:45 p.m. on M-35 a mile from the Ford River in Delta County when the collision occurred.

State police say that both Weber and the driver of the other car, Ronald W. Smith, Jr., 17, of Escanaba were killed instantly.

Officers report that both cars were driving slightly left of center.

At the time of the accident, Weber was returning to Manistique after working at a temporary job in Oconto, Wis.

The accident is under investigation according to state police.

Garden historical society to tour Washington Island

The Garden Peninsula Historical Society will make a two-day trip to Washington Island, Wis.

The trip has been arranged by "Delta Travel and Tour" of Escanaba and will take place on Saturday, June 11 and Sunday, June 12.

Society members along with other area residents will be making the trip.

The bus will leave Robert Tatrow's Shell gas station in Garden at 8 a.m. The first stop of interest will be in Peshtigo at the Peshtigo museum and the monument to the victims of the great Peshtigo fire. The group will also be stopping in Oconto at the Indian burial mounds. The tour will then proceed to Green Bay.

In Green Bay, the group will visit the National Railroad Museum, and if time permits, the Neville Public Museum and other points of interest. Later in the afternoon the tour group will enjoy a complimentary ham and chicken "family style" dinner at the Sport Supper Club in Green Bay.

The bus will then leave for Sturgeon Bay where the group will stay at the Leathern Smith Lodge for the night. In the morning, if time permits, the group will visit the ship-building yards at Sturgeon Bay. From Sturgeon Bay the bus will make a scenic tour up the Door Peninsula to Gill's Rock where bus and passengers will board one of the three ferry boats which makes the scenic voyage crossing from Porte Des Morts (Death's Door) to Washington Island. The trip from Gill's Rock to Washington is seven miles and takes about forty minutes.

Years ago Washington Island was inhabited by the Potawatomi Indians, and in later years, it became the home of fishermen, lumbermen and farmers. Many of the early settlers of the Garden Peninsula originated from Washington, St. Martin and other islands of the two peninsulas.

After visiting points of interest on Washington Island, members of the group will have the opportunity to take the 10 minute ferry ride from Jackson Harbor to Rock Island State Park, arriving at the massive stone "Viking Hall." While on Rock Island members of the tour will be able to visit such points of interest as Potawatomi Light built in 1836 and the oldest light on the lakes.

The bus tour will leave Washington Island on the 4 p.m. (C.D.T.) ferry bound for Gill's Rock. The tour is expected to arrive back in Garden around 10:30 p.m. (E.D.T.) Sunday.

Other society members and area residents will leave for Washington Island by boat on Saturday morning, June 11. They will be traveling on the "Whitefish" owned by Ken Peterson of Fairport, and the "Channel Cat" owned by Glen Bogart of Garden.

Anyone from the Garden Peninsula and surrounding area wishing information concerning bus tour cost, etc. should contact Lenore Tatrow of Garden immediately, and anyone wishing information concerning the boat excursion should contact either Jacqueline Tatrow or Eileen Guertin, both of Garden.

What's Going On

by Anne McDonald

341-5320

It seems that this weekend was fairly quiet. Maybe it was just the lull before Mother's Day weekend or that everyone was taking advantage of the beautiful weather and the city's spring clean-up program.

Carl and Phyllis Carlson returned from Nassau, in the Bahamas last week after a six day tour with the Lumber Dealer's Supply of Green Bay. The tour originated in Green Bay, where sixty-six people boarded a chartered North Central flight to the Bahamas. There they enjoyed sight seeing, swimming and a Catamaran cruise around the near islands.

Mrs. Stella Anderson, 600 Cherry St., has her grandson and granddaughter visiting her this week. They are Mr. and Mrs. Richard (Nancy) Anderson of Southfield, Mich.

Bill and Betty Bowman of Gulliver returned this weekend after a trip to a gas convention at Lake Tahoe. From Lake Tahoe, they flew to Phoenix, Az. to visit Mr. and Mrs. Richard Gill (former Manistique residents). After their visit in Phoenix, they flew to Florida where the drove back to Gulliver with Betty's mother, Mrs. Lila Hines.

Patti and George Baker and Joe and Lee Vaughn spent the weekend in Bloomington, Minn. There they attended two Tigers-Twins baseball games. They Tigers managed to win their eighth of the season in overtime.

Swede and Nel Nelson and Melba McKenzie spent the weekend in Chastle when they visited Mrs. Nelson's brother and his wife, the Earl Hruskas.

Golfers lose second match

Both Manistique Emerald golf teams were handed their second defeat of the season by Newberry in a match held there.

The girls' team, headed by Coach Kate LeBrasseur, took a 184-194 loss from Newberry. Coach LeBrasseur indicated that the girls had improved over the last game in which they lost to Munising.

"They are capable of doing much better," indicated LeBrasseur. "They have a lot of potential but they need more practice."

Low score for Manistique in the match against Newberry was Robin Provo with a 62. Wendy Lewis was also named low scorer with 63.

Medalist in the match was Betty Parker of Newberry with a 58.

The Emerald boys' team also suffers from inexperience, said coach Al Erickson. They lost to Newberry, also, 207-227.

"We have an inexperience that may hurt us," said Erickson, "but we definitely have some good kids coming up in the next few years."

Of the 18 boys out for golf, only two are upperclassmen. Erickson said the boys have improved by 25 strokes over their last match and believes that the scores will come down even more as the season progresses.

Low score for Manistique was John Villemure with a 42 and Randy Schmurser with a 44. Tim Tufnell was also named low scorer with a 45.

Medalist in the boys match went to J. Quinn of Newberry.

Both Emerald boys' and girls' will host Marquette on the Indian Lake Golf Course this Friday, May 6, at 4 p.m.

Girls whip Braves

Beth Beaudin took the winning pace in the Emerald girls' track debut Monday afternoon at Manistique, beating the Gladstone girls 72 1/2 to 62 1/2.

Beaudin broke her own school record in the shot put with a 35 feet, one inch shot. Her previous mark of 34 3/4" was set last year in the U.P. finals.

Coach Diane Stimic's girls took several blue ribbons in field events, with Kathy Hines, discus; Mary Gregurash, high jump; and Gretchen Johnson, long jump. Debbie Kaiser was the only track winner for Manistique, taking the two mile event.

'Rawleigh Man,' Garden pioneer

The following article was written by Betty Plante of Garden about her grandfather, Grant McCormick:

"The recent passing of an elderly gentleman brings back many memories of his exploits in this area. For a number of years, from Nahma to Germfask to Fairport, he was known by many residents as 'The Rawleigh Man' and was welcomed into their homes as a true friend.

"Grant McCormick was born May 6, 1881 in Nahma, Mich. and was raised in the Lansing area. He was married on May 28, 1904 to Edith Wilson of Mason.

"The McCormicks had eight children, two of whom died in early childhood.

"He was a self-employed farmer and also worked for Ransom Olds, building the curved dash Oldsmobile.

"When the state first began issuing driver's licenses in 1919, he obtained one. Later, in 1972, he would have the distinction of being the state's oldest licensed driver, at the age of 92.

"About 1931, Grandma and Grandpa McCormick bought, sight unseen, a parcel of land near Big Bay de Noc in Garden Township.

"When they came to claim their land they found nothing but woods, sand and water. With nothing to live in, Grandpa moved his family to Cooks where they lived as tenants on a farm for about a year. In the meantime Grandpa was building a log cabin to live in and a place of business on the old U.S. 2 highway.

Memoirs

by Mark Eisenlohr

"His business consisted of a wayside gas station, soft drinks, candy bars and a few sandwiches. There were also berries, fresh eggs, and perhaps a few fresh vegetables, all of which the passing motorists were glad to buy.

"Leaving the gas station in his daughter's care, he moved the rest of his family to a farm in Kates Bay and resided there until the new U.S. 2 was built in 1935.

"To locate near the new highway, he moved his station a quarter mile to the west and built a new restaurant and a few cabins, all of logs.

"He named the new establishment 'Twin Pines' after two large pine trees which stood directly in front of the main building.

"All the building was done by hand by Grandpa and his three youngest sons: Bruce, Glen and Raymond, who were living at home.

"It was also during this time in his life that he was the 'Rawleigh Man'.

"He and his family owned and operated 'Twin Pines' until 1941 when all the family, but one daughter, moved back to Lansing and there he once more became a farmer.

"In May 1943 his loving, faithful companion of 39 long, hard, lean years died leaving him lonely and depressed, but none the less, a hard working God-fearing man.

"The death of his only daughter, Irma Tatrow, in August of 1957 was another heavy burden God gave him to carry.

"He continued to farm and in June of 1945 married a widow, Inez (Shaver) Mulline. They moved to Potterville and farmed there until illness forced them to give up their farm life and take it easy for their remaining years.

"Grandpa and Inez had 28 wonderful years together before she died in March of 1973.

"From then on Grandpa lived with his sons, visiting from one to the other and his turn honored to have with them for a while. In recent years he came back to Garden almost every summer to visit with his granddaughter, Betty Plante, and his grandson Duane Tatrow, and to renew old friendships with many of the older residents of the area who knew and respected him.

"His visit here in 1976 was to be his last as he passed away on March 17, 1977 in Lansing. He left behind a long list of sad but proud relatives who will never forget his stern manner but loving and kind methods of implanting his love of God and rules of life to those who were entrusted in his care through the years."

"I'd like to thank Mrs. Plante for sharing this testimonial about her Grandfather with us. At the same time, I think, it offers a look at not only a facet of history of the area, but of the people who made it.

"The St. Francis de Sales Church in Manistique in planning a celebration for the 75th anniversary of their school. The celebration is scheduled for June 4, with a Mass, potluck supper and program being planned.

Poll sets job priorities

Public opinion may be a weak tyrant, as Henry David Thoreau characterized it, but the results of a recently-released survey of community needs and priorities in Schoolcraft County is food for thought.

Responses from the sampling taken of county residents showed a cluster of priorities dealing with jobs and the economy, at variance with the rest of the central Upper Peninsula and the state as a whole.

Listing the ten most serious community problems, 174 respondents ranked unemployment, job opportunities and industrial development as the top three. Following in order were energy costs, public transportation to another community, drug and alcohol abuse, public transportation within the community, cultural and fine arts abandonment, railroad abandonment, single family and rental housing.

The survey, conducted by the Cooperative Extension Service of Michigan State University revealed that energy cost was considered the most serious problem in the central U.P., followed by job opportunities and unemployment. Industrial development ranked no. 11. Statewide, unemployment, job opportunities and energy cost topped the poll.

The poll indicates that job development through the development of industry is regarded as more crucial in this area than in other sections of the state. Surveyers found that in the central U.P., 83 percent of the respondents indicated they would favor more public spending toward that end even if their taxes had to be raised.

Listed as least serious community problems in the county were, in order, race relations, opportunities for religious expression, air pollution, youth organizational opportunities, trash and garbage disposal, protection of individual rights, equal opportunity, tourist facilities, rapid population change, and traffic safety and control.

Accordingly, respondents said they would like to see less or no public spending on support for cultural and fine arts programs, support for libraries and museums, trash disposal, and development of tourist attractions.

According to the poll, a greater percentage of persons living in the central U.P. are more reluctant to leave their community than are residents statewide. Twenty-one percent in the regional poll agreed with the statement that "I would never consider leaving here," while only 11 percent agreed statewide. "I would move to another community if I had to but would be reluctant to leave:" 59 percent agreed in the central U.P., 51 percent said so statewide.

That final set of statistics is perhaps the most encouraging of all the 35-page summary of results. And about three-fourths or more of the polled residents said what were the most important factors in choosing a community: less crime or danger, water and air quality, and "a good place to raise children."

Schoolcraft County has those attributes. With residents being willing to stay in the area, economic problems are more likely to be solved.

Ol' wet napkin trick could fool 'slickers'

Dear Cousin Al:
As a long time Rotarian, you should be impressed by your city cousin. The other noon I strolled over to the Detroit Cadillac Hotel and made a speech to the Detroit Rotary Club.

How about that? I worked at the Detroit Cadillac Hotel for 25 years and your Rotary Club never once asked me to talk. You had me as a guest listener a few times through the years, and everytime I sat on a wet napkin.

Al, I'll bet you won't believe that Detroit Rotarians never play the wet-napkin trick. Several of them gave me a strange look when they saw me feeling the seat behind me before I sat down at the speaker's table. So I explained how Lapeer Rotarians dip paper napkins into their water glasses and then slip the soggy napkins under unsuspecting fannies, thus sending hundreds of businessmen back to work with wet pants.

The Detroit Rotarians got a big laugh out of that. They said they'd never heard of wet napkins and I said I was surprised to hear it. I said the next thing they'd probably try to tell me they didn't have a cow tied to a parking meter in front of the hotel. This got me another strange look.

I explained that Lapeer Rotary always raises funds by raffling a cow. I told them how you guys bring the cow downtown every day and make people buy tickets on it if they don't want to be stampeded. I told them how the people who win the cow never know what to do with it, so they give it back to the Rotary and you guys have been raffling off the same cow every year for 20 years.

The big-city Rotarians laughed as hard about the cow as they did about the napkin. Al, they claimed they had never raffled off a cow, but I saw a couple of those slickers taking notes with their silver pencils. I would like to see a Rotary cow tied up at the entrance to our new Plaza Hotel which has dozens of saloons in it but not one spittoon.

You probably think I'm getting stuck up because I talked to Detroit Rotary but I said no when you asked me to talk at your Farm Bureau meeting. But I wasn't lying when I said it makes my stomach hurt to make speeches, Al. The thing is, my boss asked me to speak to the Rotarians and there are some things worse than a stomachache. Such as unemployment.

But that's enough Rotary stuff. I want to tell you about somewhere else I went. I took Pat to the Attic Theatre in Greektown. That was really something.

You know me and actors, Al. I'd watch a show in a sewer. So I wasn't bothered when I discovered they don't call the theatre an attic just to lend some ersatz rustic charm, the way some phonies hang up a picture of

by Jim Fitzgerald

An Indian and call a chrome motel a dude ranch. The place really is an attic, two flights up.

There is no stage, just an open space on one side of the attic with around 100 funeral parlor chairs set in front of it. The room was decorated by a barn burner. The audience was by Mixmaster. I wasn't the only guy there wearing a tie, and the man next to me wasn't the only guy wearing pigtail.

I told Pat it would take some real magic to turn that attic into a theatre. And real magic is just what we got, Al. When the lights went out (the switch was on the timber post next to my chair), three young women put on a performance better than most things I've seen at the Fisher Theatre.

The play is a proven winner - "The Effect of Gamma Rays on Man-in-the-Moon Marigolds." Joanne Woodward was in the movie, remember? You wouldn't recognize the names of the Greektown stars, but you have got to see them, Al.

I know you didn't enjoy it a few weeks ago when I took you to the Fisher. You thought it was too ritzy, especially when the woman in front of us draped her fur coat over the back of her seat and you saw that the coat label was on upside down to make it easier for you to read how rich she was.

You won't be riched to death at the Attic, Al. In fact, when we entered the theatre, Stella was coming out. Remember, I wrote about her last December. Stella is the little Greek lady who wears corporal's stripes, sleeps in hallways at the police station, and screams a lot.

Stella was locked up a few days after I wrote about her, and several readers blamed me. So I was glad to see her back on the street again. She will never wear her stripes upside down so you can tell she is a corporal even when she's standing on her head.

That's all for now, Al. Just remember I walked to Greektown and I walked to Rotary. I've been in downtown Detroit for a year now and I haven't been mugged yet. I haven't even been mugged at by a Rotary cow.

Call sign guidance

As a relatively new member of the CB fraternity, I have been fascinated by the creative minds that come up with the "handles" used by CB'ers on the air.

Just when you think that you've heard just about everything in the way of a handle, someone will break for someone that will really throw you for a loop.

While the variety of handles has been interesting, the abuses of the airwaves by rude CB'ers has been an annoyance shared by many CB'ers other than myself. Well, the combined use of handles and the failure of some CB'ers to observe the rules of the airwaves put down by the FCC has prompted some stricter enforcement procedures.

Almost all CBers have "numbers," but refusal to use their Federal Communications Commission call signs accounts for the greatest abuse of Citizen Band radio regulations.

In fact Uncle Charlie, as the FCC is known, ranks failure to identify CB stations by their call signs at the top of the commission's "trigger violations," or enforcement priorities.

The use of call signs is required by international treaty, says Deputy Chief James C. McKinney of the Field Operations Bureau, the FCC's enforcement arm.

"It's main purpose is to control interference," McKinney explains. "When interference does occur, other stations can easily identify the offender and the responsible government agency then can take appropriate action," he says.

Use of call signs also aids enforcement of other rules, McKinney adds. "We're seeing much greater use of call signs," he says. "There was a time when we had only 5 percent compliance, but we're now running 35 percent of 40 percent. That's still too low, but it's a great improvement."

One reason for the increased use of numbers, perhaps, is the recent FCC action permitting CBers to go on the air almost immediately after getting a new radio.

A CBER now can begin "modulating" legally just by sending the FCC the license application usually packed with his new rig and using a temporary call sign until the permanent license arrives.

The temporary number is composed of the Letter "K," the CB'ers first and last initial and his postal zip code.

Until this change, CBers were required to wait until their permanent license arrived. This often meant a wait of two months or more -- a wait many new CBers ignored.

McKinney also says the recent boom in CBs has brought with it a different type of radio operator, one more likely to abide by regulations.

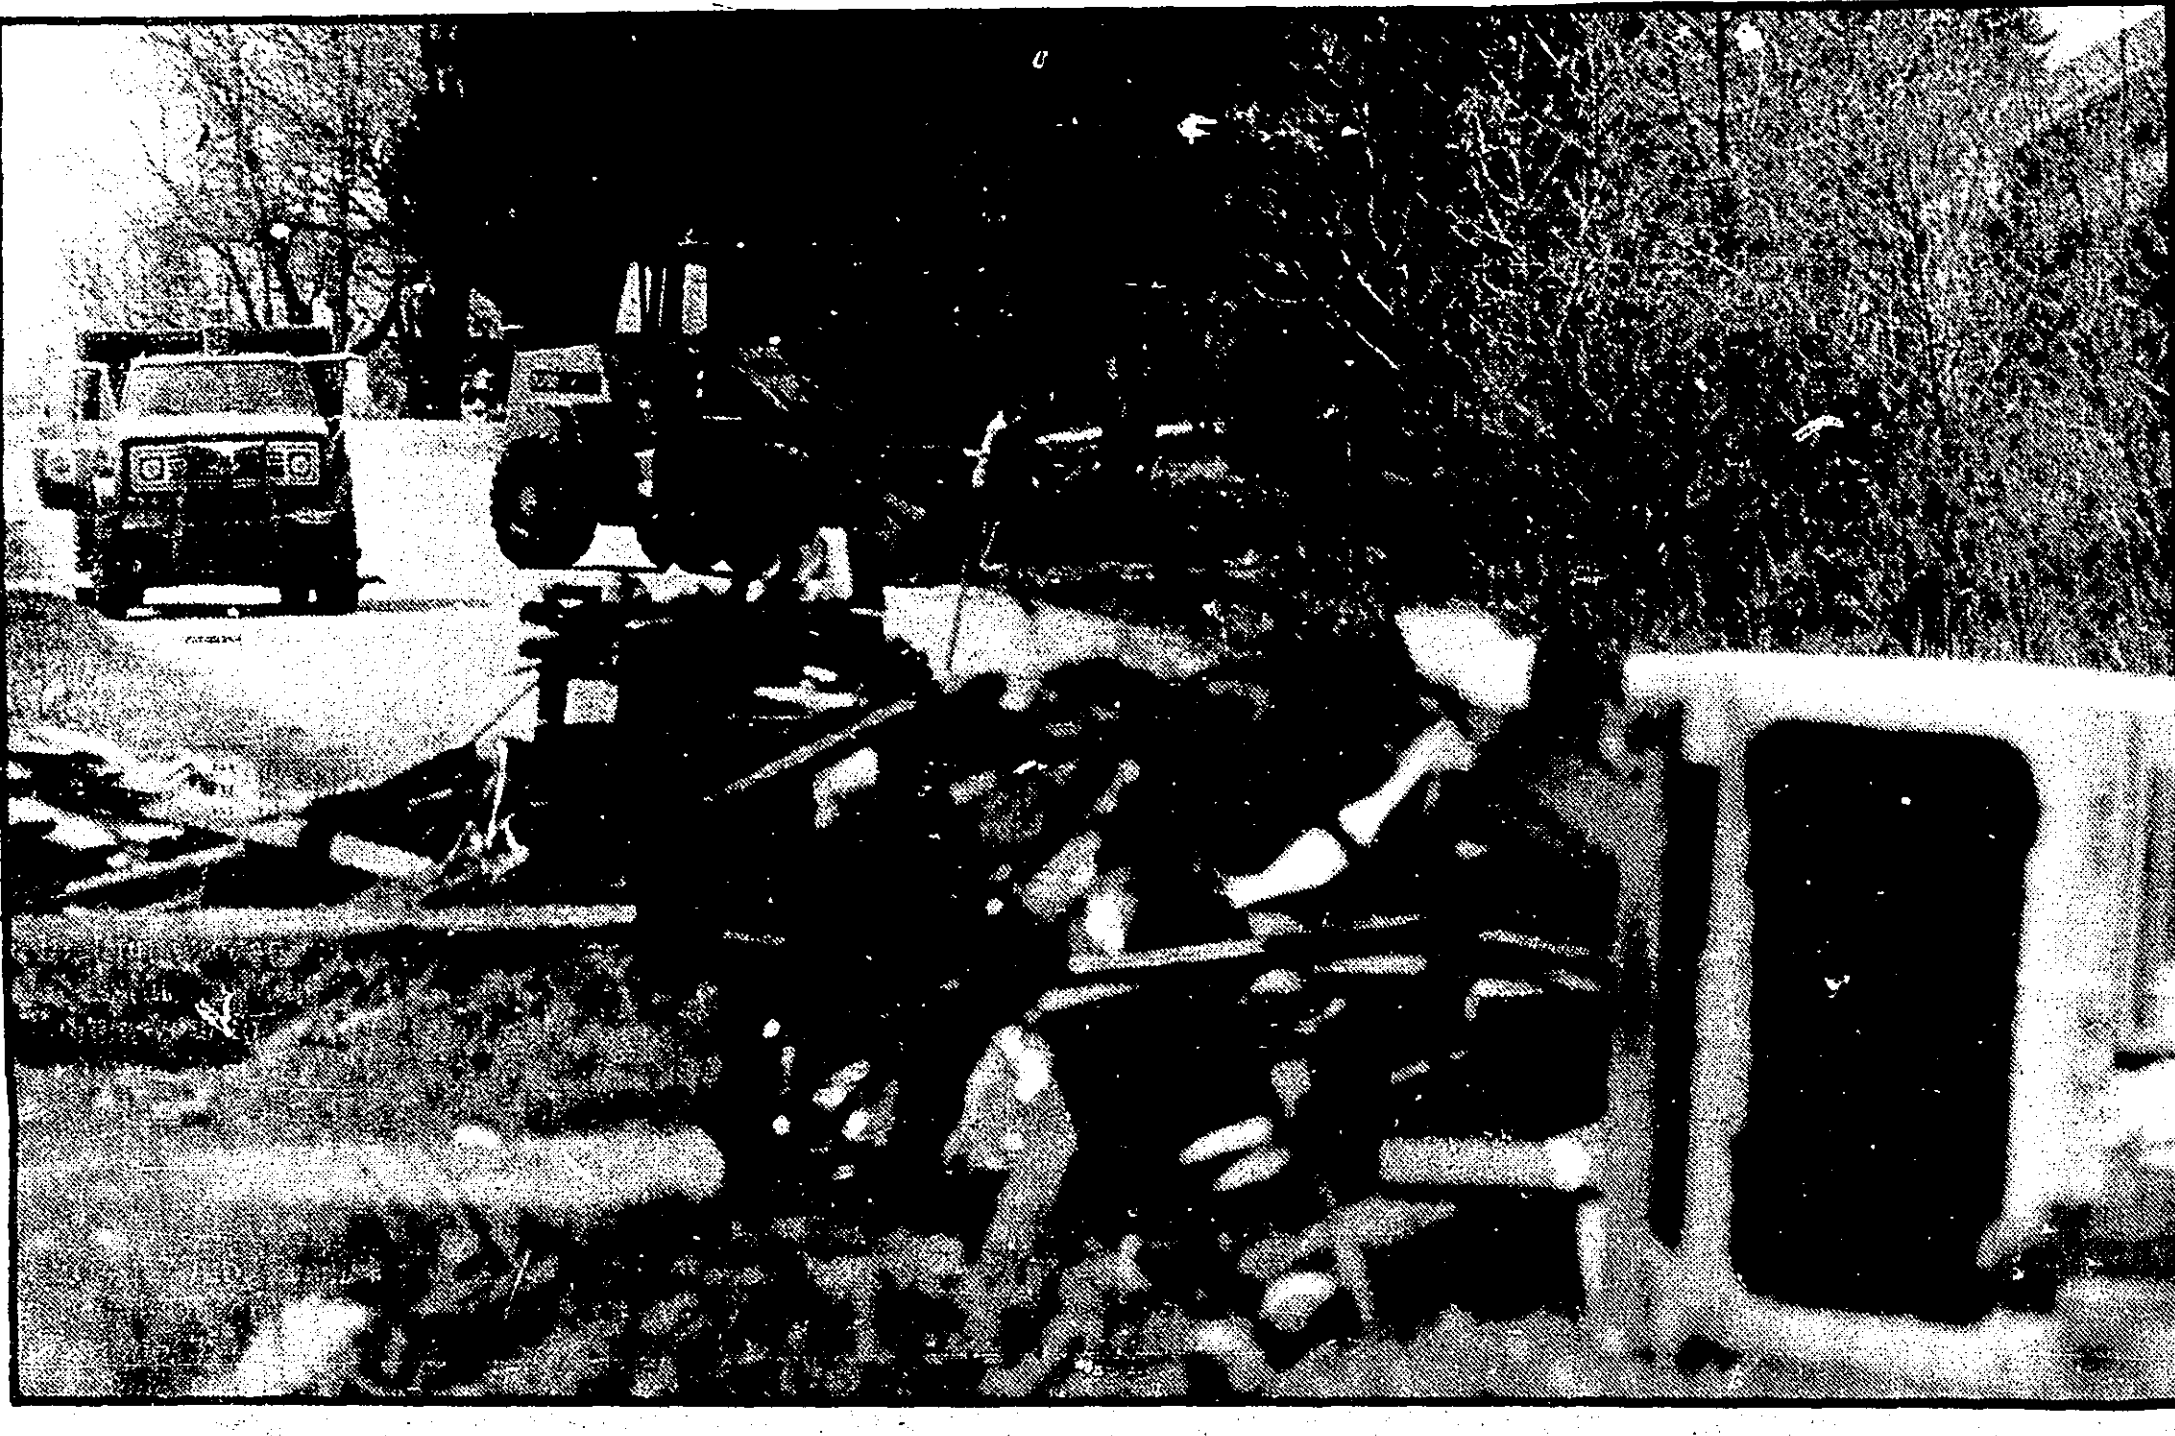

The FCC also found its new licensing procedure reduced the number of unlicensed CB operators. A survey last fall showed 10 percent of the nation's estimated 20 million CBers without licenses -- and legal call signs -- compared to 34 percent during fiscal 1974.

CBers can use their handles, nicknames, and CB club numbers with their FCC numbers, but failure to use the call sign at the beginning and at the end of each transmission is subject to an FCC fine of up to $500.

More than 3,000 fines were imposed last year.

The most prevalent abuse of the call sign requirement probably is on Channel 19, the frequency most used by truckers and the traveling public. Seldom does one hear numbers there.

That's where many CBers get started. And as the FCC's McKinney says, "Many CBers learn their operating habits only by hearing."

STREETS OF MANISTIQUE looked a bit messy over the past few days, but it was temporary as city crews picked up all types of refuse and junk items during the annual spring clean-up. Here, the clean up, which concludes citywide tomorrow, proceeds along Michigan Street. The effort should go a long way toward making city residential areas more attractive. (Tribune photo)

What they're saying about U.P.

A few myths still have to be straightened out about the Upper Peninsula. For instance:

-that people up here are cultural primitives. Some surprising performances were in store for the small number of persons who turned out to hear community choirs from Newberry and Manistique Sunday afternoon at Manistique High School. Choir members, who might hammer nails or shuffle papers for a living, produced some pleasing vocal music.

-that the Artic Circle begins at the Straits of Mackinac. Winters are something to be reckoned with, to be sure, but they're not the tundra experiences that downstaters may think. In fact, they're milder than in many areas of the northern lower peninsula.

-that U.P. towns are crumbling remnants of a once-great kingdom of iron ore and lumber. You need look no further than Manistique, with a brand new high school and county government building, plus improvements to other facilities and plans for more construction on the drawing boards to realize that the area is on the move.

-the fishing's good but... the land's streams and rivers are not teeming primarily with fish. They are teeming with campers, whose vehicles flooded the mouth of creeks leading into Lake Michigan between Gould City and St. Ignace last weekend. Some smelt dippers came up empty-handed, but the travelers enjoyed the clear weather. The influx was good for business, too.

-that the U.P. is itching to become a separate state or (heaven forbid) part of Wisconsin.

-that a working knowledge of Finnish is helpful. We're much more cosmopolitan than that, thank you.

-that moose and beavers outnumber people in some rural areas. Only if you have a hacienda on Isle Royale, friend.

-that pasties are as much a staple of the diet here as grits are in Dixie. Depends on what friend's house you're visiting.

-that monstrous black flies cloud the skies each summer. Some insects, yes. Superhuman precautions are not necessary, though.

And this may be the worst one: that Michigan is only a mitten, completely ignoring the presence of the U.P. For those seeking a pleasant peninsula (a plug for Michigan Week, May 14-21) the U.P. is not merely the upper one. It's the ultimate.

HOW DOES SHE DO IT ?

Knitting is Mom's thing... sweaters, skirts, scarves, the works. Somehow in her spare time she keeps house, raises a family, participates in her church activities, collects for the community fund, is a den mother, and on and on.

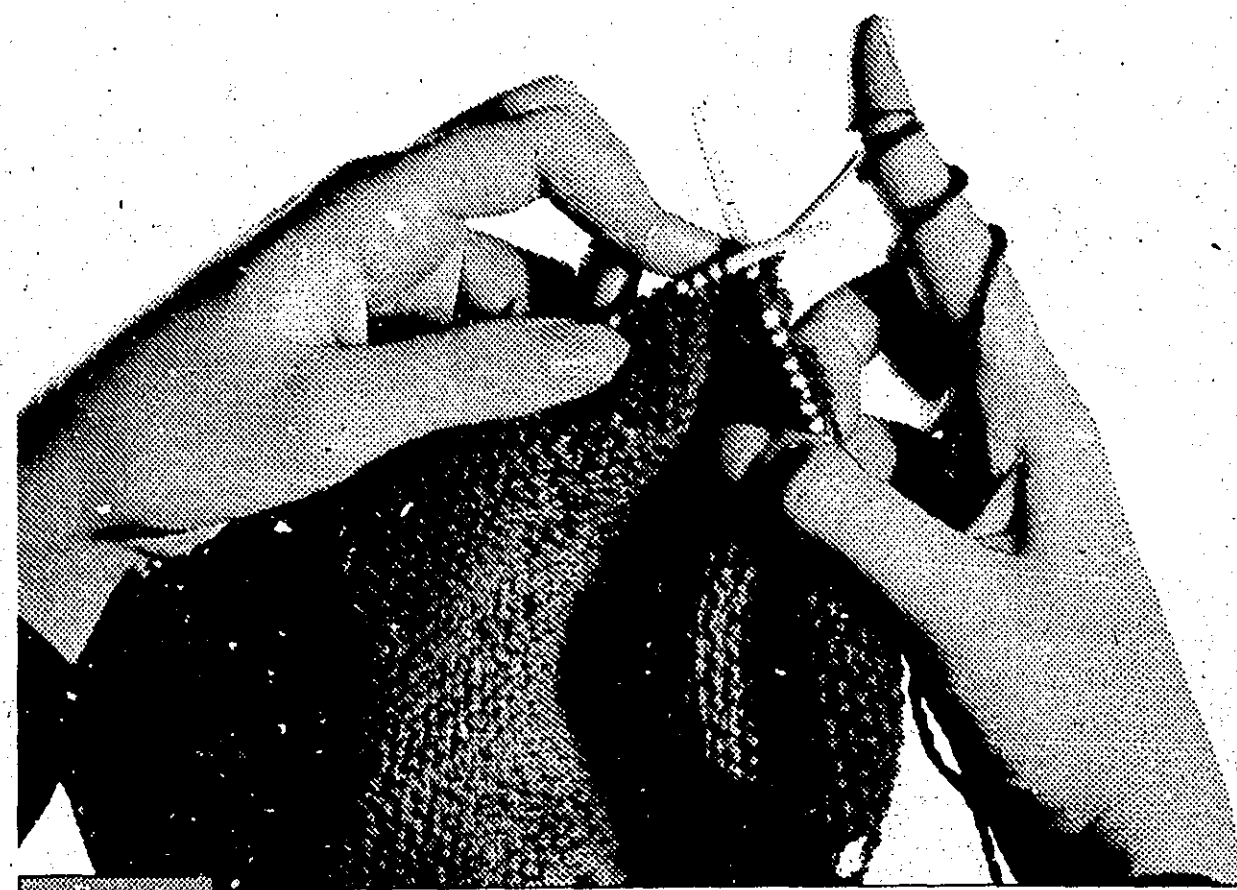

How does she do it? She evades this question.

If you ask me, a lot of people aren't like Mom. They stick to one job, one hobby, one project—and frequently turn their back on others.

It's people like Mom who make "community" mean something. From her, the young learn that adding—not dividing—brings us together. That's what the church is all about... LOVE.

New type of fortification for food

A new solution to the age-old problem of how to supply women of child-bearing age with a food fortified with iron may be on the horizon, according to scientists at the Human Nutrition Laboratory of the USDA's Agricultural Research Laboratory in Grand Forks, N. Dak.

One answer may be to use black coffee, which contains no calories and appears to be suitable for iron fortification. But, this method is not without trade offs. Ferrous fumarate—the iron supplement—could be added to dry coffee grounds (which are the same color).

How much coffee would be needed to make this type of fortification useful? It would take about four cups of black coffee to provide an adult with about 70 percent of her minimum daily requirement for iron. None of the 20 "tasters" at the ARS Human Nutrition Laboratory who participated in the experiment detected any differences in taste, aroma, or color between the fortified and unfortified coffee. It would cost less than a penny to fortify three pounds of coffee grounds.

In this research, the scientists were not weighing any possible harmful effects to health that coffee-drinking habits may produce. They are merely recognizing that people drink coffee.

County mental health services seek alternatives

Finding Community alternatives to placement in state institutions will be a challenge for Schoolcraft County Mental Health Services in the future, about 20 persons were told at an annual pot luck dinner of the agency Tuesday night, April 26.

Phil Jones, director of the county agency, told the gathering of county commissioners, mental health board members and interested persons at a restaurant that one goal he has is to make the clinic more a part of the community.

In this effort, Jones said, the agency has signed a temporary contract with Joan Risk, of 530 Arbutus Ave., Manistique, to study the needs of 91 mentally impaired county residents, most of whom live in foster care homes. Jones said her job will be to determine what adaptive behavior skills could be taught to the residents, and what it would cost to teach them more independence.

Jones added that prevention of mental illness will be another task for the clinic and the community.

"I think if the community can come together as a group," he said, "we can prevent some of the problems from happening."

Wiljo Sarkela, program specialist for the Department of Mental Health offices in Marquette, elaborated on this theme in his succeeding talk to the group.

Sarkela said churches, police and the schools could become involved in an effort to ease problems with mental illness and its potential threat to individuals.

He said situations that produce stress and conflict in the community should be identified, then we can begin dealing with those situations," he said.

Earlier, Jones noted that it would be in the county's best interest to place mental patients in the community, as the county currently pays 3.1 percent of the $350,000 to $400,000 annual cost to institutionalize 21 people at Newberry.

Under Public Act 258, the county's share of the total cost will gradually rise to 10 percent, Sarkela explained.

After the meeting, Sarkela said he believed that most of the 21 local residents at Newberry could be brought back if adult activity programs can be developed for them in the community. Such programs might also reduce to a minimum the number that must go to Newberry in the first place, he said.

Senior Citizens

by Eileen Males

You may pick up your tickets for our May 18 EXCITING - DELIGHTFUL - SMASHING evening party in honor of Senior Citizen's Day in Manistique.

At 6 p.m. an American Smorgasbord will be held in the High School cafeteria and tickets are available for only $2 per person. We are keeping this price at an extremely low cost so everyone can afford to go. Following the evening meal we will have a program to delight and tickle your funny bone.

We will go to the auditorium where Ron Patrick's A-V Center class will televise our program on our local "Channel 9" station. We will have the evening news hour featuring Harry Reasoner and Barbara Walters portrayed by Mike Younce and Bev Henriksen. They will interview Representative Varnum; Rod Brown, who is Senator Davis's aide; Ronald Kivi; Paul Kiristiz; and Carol Williams of the Michigan Office of Services to the Aging.

Then comes "The Gong Show" and "Hee Haw" with all the excitement and fun that goes with these shows.

There will be a huge drawing of prizes from our city businesses.

Purchase your tickets immediately at the Manistique Senior Citizen's Center. This will probably be our only large party until next fall.

Due to the fact that our legislators and officials could not be at the Title VII noon meal at the armory, we will cancel the scheduled activities preceding the meal. There will still be the regularly scheduled noon meal at the armory. The celebration will begin at 6 p.m. and will be open to all who are age 60 and older and to those younger people who are members of the center.

If you would like to appear on our Gong Show we need some unique performers that can offer entertainment that's unusual. There is no age limit for our Gong Show talent.

The Junior Women's Club put on a delightful card party for our senior citizen's building fund and we are very appreciative of all the time and effort that went into this undertaking. There will be a future announcement by the Junior Women's Club pertaining to the money raised, etc.

We wish to thank the following for monetary donations to the building fund: Gert Dean, Frances Cockram, Charles Redeker, Eleanor and Otmer Schuster.

Lovely auction supplies and Thrift Store donations came from Dora Cournaya. Thrift Store items were also donated by Carol Shunk and Donna Swayer.

Baked goods were brought in by Virginia Foye, Rose Provo, Ethel Howland, Lil Farley, and Joyce Lesica.

Estella Szmanesky made a beautiful polyester quilt and gave it to the center. We really appreciate all her time, effort,

Memorial book donated to library

"Nostalgia, My Life and the Gas Engine," by Clem A. Rahn has been presented to the Manistique School and Public Library as a memorial to the late Richard Hoppins.

The book, anecdotes of life, machines and stuff, was written by a former Manistique resident, has 16 car photos and refers to local people including one chapter entitled "A 1914 Maxwell Home-Hoppins Family."

The presentation was made by Carol Shelly, sister of Mr. Hoppins.

The book is currently available for circulation.

and material that went into this project.

To all of you that are helping us in these numerous ways we like to say "thank you." It is through co-operation and giving from the public and by the older person that our center has been able to keep in operation.

Bryce Barnes, who lives at Eastport, Mich., is going to let the center use the former Ken's Bakery for our Thrift Store rent free and we need the help of some young men or older ones, who have muscle, for half of a day or a few hours in the evening. If you can help, please let me know immediately. Mr. Barnes is one of these super people who is generous in giving to the older person of our community. Talking to him, you can tell he and his wife do much volunteer service in their area. We wish we could adopt them because they would be a fine asset for Manistique.

Birthday greetings go out to: Celestine Christensen and Diane Beaudry, May 5; Ian McKilligan, Laurence Jenerou and Katherine LaBrasseur, May 6; Lyle K. Jasmin, Bob Southard, Oscar Nelson, John A. Start a garden with transplants

Get your flower or vegetable garden off to a good start with transplants.

Transplants start producing flowers or edible parts weeks earlier than plants grown in the garden as seed. The key to successful gardening with transplants are Don't buy plants with problems. Look for transplants with dark green, healthy-looking leaves. Avoid those with yellow, wilted or shriveled leaves or signs of insect damage or disease. Choose short, compact, bushy plants rather than tall, spindly ones, and avoid those that already have flowers or fruits.

Get plants used to the environment outdoors by setting them outside in a sheltered spot during warm, sunny days for two or three weeks before transplanting. Cut back on watering. This treatment, called hardening, will accustom the plants to the intense sunlight, cool temperatures and wind and they will have to endure in the garden.

After the danger of frost is past, set the plants into prepared garden spots.

A cloudy day or early evening is the best time to transplant. Bright sun is rough on newly set plants. It evaporates moisture from their leaves faster than their roots can replace it. Planting on cloudy day or late in the day gives the roots a chance to start getting established before the plant is exposed to the sun.

Handle transplants carefully to avoid injuring the root system. Plants in peat pots should be set in the garden pot and all. Remove the bottom of the pot to allow room for rapid root growth. When you have to divide several plants grown in the same container, water them thoroughly to make the soil stick to the fine roots. Then cut the soil mass apart with a sharp knife. Cutting damages the roots less than tearing the root ball apart.

MAKE THE MOST OF GARDEN SPACE:

Want to make the most of limited garden Then Plan ahead. Plant early spring crops like radishes, peas and lettuce in the same part of the garden. Then, after harvesting these, you'll have a good-sized area in which to plant other crops. Lettuce, radishes,

County Extension

by Elvin Hepker

spinach, turnips, broccoli, Brussels sprouts, cabbage, beets and cauliflower can be planted after the early crops are out of the way.

Choose varieties for these later plantings carefully. Quick maturing varieties recommended for growing in Michigan will give your best chance of success. Vegetables that take a long time to mature may not come into production before frost.

You can also interplant like radishes, which germinate and mature quickly, among other, slower growing crops like carrots. The radishes will have come and gone before the carrots need to be thinned. And they'll have market the row for you in the meantime.

A variation on successive planting is the practice of planting the same crop several times, at one or two week intervals. This spreads the harvest over several weeks and reduces the quantities of produce you must deal with all at once.

Board discusses cutbacks

by Eleanor La Butte

The Big Bay de Noc School Board has pink-slipped two teachers due to financial conditions in the school district.

Mrs. Barbara McPhee and Mrs. Patricia Renton were notified that their services may not be required for the 1977-78 school year, the school board was told at its recent meeting.

The board also rejected the millage proposal for the June 22 election.

A discussion also was held on further cutbacks for the 1977-78 school year if additional operating millage should fail. The cuts would affect all extra curricular and night activities, hot lunch program, library, physical education, woodshop, business education, home economics and additional cuts in elementary and high school music, band and transportation.

The board moved to "pink slip" additional staff. These lay-offs would drastically reduce or eliminate the following programs: foreign language, English, music (band and choral), industrial arts (woodshop and drafting, welding and auto mechanics), home economics, business education, physical education, math program for college-bound, library service, agriculture and conservation programs, reduction in elementary staffing and in the Title I program, all extra curricular class activities, plays, annual, school paper and all concerts.

In other business: -Mrs. Peggy Carlyon was granted an extended leave for one year.

-the use of busses were denied for 4-H and baseball (Little League) because of insurance coverage.

-a request for the use of gym mats was tabled.

WW 1 Memorial moves to All Veterans Memorial Site

The World War I War Memorial at the corner of East Elk and River streets has been moved to the All Veterans Memorial Site at the Schoolcraft County Courthouse, although final placement of the memorial has yet to be decided.

The memorial monument, and the Spanish-American Memorial Monument on Maple St., are being moved as part of a VFW Bicentennial project.

Exact placement at the All Veterans Memorial site will be decided by Earl LeBrasseur, Schoolcraft County Commissioner and chairman of the building and grounds committee, and Bill Cowman, coordinator and advisor for the County memorial site. James Miller, Sr., owner of Manistique saw and Planing Mill, supervised the project. James Miller, Jr., operated the 25 ton carry-lift which transported the memorial to the new site.

George J. Danko, bicentennial commander of Post 4420 and chairman of the project, was assisted by two committee members John A. Benish and Gene V. Kee. According to Danko, the 60-year-old memorial land mark should be in place by Memorial Day, May 30.

Last week, the Pioneer-Tribune incorrectly reported that the memorial was located at the corner of Elk and Cedar streets.
